Why count the loss and not the gain?—

INTRODUCTORY AND PERSONAL.

In the early Autumn of 1871 I received from the late Rev. Silas Ketchum, of Bristol, N. H., a circular stating that he was collecting records of the family of Doty, and desiring all of that name to send him all the statistics possible, with a view to the history of the family. He stated also that his mother was Cynthia, daughter of Edmond, who was a son of Captain Barnabas Doty, who was born in Rochester, Mass., in 1740.

Until that time my interest in such matters had been but slight; but remembering that I had in my boyhood secured a statement from my grandfather, which I still preserved, I sent a copy of it to Mr. Ketchum, saying to him that I would write to the other relatives for such additions as they could make to the record. This led to a considerable correspondence with him, as I secured records from a number of relatives, and at my suggestion, but with his approval, I interviewed the various families of the name in New York City, Brooklyn, Newark and the vicinity. In the course of a few months Mr. Ketchum called upon me in New York, and stated that I was collecting the statistics faster than he could get them from any other source, and in view of his failing health and much needed rest from his literary labors, he suggested that I should continue the work, he transferring to me such papers as had already come into his possession.

Without much idea of what this involved I consented, and since that time I have collected on my own account such statistics as I could, giving such time to its classification as I could spare from a very busy mercantile life, mainly in the evenings, holidays and vacations from business. I find I have written over 5,000 letters, have received about 2,200 replies and in the course of my investigations have traversed the country from one end to the other. I have searched the records of almost every county of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and more or less in all the other Northern States as far west as Illinois, while I have interviewed members of the family in almost every State of the Union. I have made many pleasant friends and acquaintances, have met with uniform courtesy from Town and County Clerks and State officers everywhere, have had amusing adventures, and have seen more of the beautiful scenery and the quiet village home life of our country than I could have seen probably in any other way.

I have no apologies to make for the imperfections that may be found in this history. I presume all genealogists have found it impossible to get replies from any considerable number of those addressed. This failure to secure the desired information was at times disheartening; at others it led me to make long journeys and in a personal interview obtain what I could.

To those, however, who have furnished such records as they could, in many cases of great value in unraveling the tangled clues of ancestry, I can only express my cordial thanks, and assure them that their encouragement and their desire to see the history in print has kept my courage good and led me to presevere to that end The Rev. Silas Ketchum, to whom we are indebted for the inception of this work, passed away in 1880, and many others who have contributed their information have not lived to see the work published. I hold their memory in deep respect. I cannot fail here to express my great sense of gratitude to Hon. William T. Davis, of Plymouth, Mass., who rendered me very valuable service in connection with the records and antiquities of that locality, and to the Rev. Irwin P. McCurdy, of Harmony Grove, Md., whose great interest and energetic researches have enabled him to unearth valuable records in fields that I had more than once trodden over.

In the arrangement of the work I have considered each child of Edward Doty, the emigrant, as the ancestor of a distinct branch of the family. Other than this, I have endeavored to number the descendants consecutively.

In conclusion, I commend this, with my best wishes, to the family of Doty in America.

The ancestor of the Doty and Doten families in America was Edward Doty, who came with the Pilgrims in the Mayflower, landing at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620. He is described as a London youth, and came in the service of Stephen Hopkins. But little further is known of his origin or of his early history.

THE DOTY-DOTEN FAMILY.

Governor William Bradford, the second Governor of the Plymouth Colony, who succeeded to that office upon the death of Governor Carver in 1621, was himself one of the most prominent emigrants by the Mayflower. His History of Plymouth Plantation, which was completed in 1650, really comprises a diary of his life there.

In the appendix of that history he gives a list of the "Passengers of the Mayflower," as follows;

"The names of those which came over first in y^e^ year 1620, and were by the blessing of God the first beginers and (in a sort) the foundation of all the Plantations and Colonies in New England: and their famlies."

Then follows the list, in which occurs the family of Stephen Hopkins, as follows:

"Mr. Steven Hopkins & Elizabeth, his wife, and 2 children caled Giles and Constanta, a doughter, both by a former wife; and 2 more by this wife, caled Damaris & Oceanus: the last borne at Sea: and 2 servants caled Edward Doty and Edward Litster."

And then he continues (writing in 1650):

"And seeing it hath pleased him to give me to see thirty years compleated since these beginings: and that the great works of his providence are to be observed, I have thought it not unworthy my paines to take a veiu of the decreasings & increasings of these persons, and such change as hath pased over them & theirs, in this thirty years. It may be of some use to such as come after; but however I shall reste in my owne benefite. I will therefore take them in order as they lye."

And then follows, in the same order as in the original list, each family, with its changes, and next the family of Stephen Hopkins, this account:

"Edward Doty & Edward Litster, the servants of Mr. Hopkins. Litster, after he was at liberty went to Virginia & ther dyed. But Edward Doty by a second wife hath 7. children and both he and they are living."

The history of the Pilgrims, as stated by Governor Bradford in his history of Plymouth Plantation, shows that the Puritans from sundry towns and villages in Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire, and some of Yorkshire, to escape inconveniences and persecutions, removed about 1608–9 to the Low Countries. There came also some from London and other parts. They settled first at Amsterdam, but in a year removed to Leyden, where they lived till 1620.

About the first of August of that year, after many delays, they sailed to Southampton, and on the 15th the Mayflower and Speedwell sailed from that port to the New World with 120 passengers, some of whom had but just joined the company. Disasters to the Speedwell compelled a return of both vessels to Plymouth, where she was abandoned and some of the passengers gave up the voyage. But on the 6th of September, the Mayflower, with the remaining 102 passengers, finally sailed, and after a stormy voyage of sixty-five days dropped anchor in Cape Cod harbor on the 11th of November following.

Under that date Mourt's "Relation" states:

"This day before we came to harbour, observing some not well affected to unity and concord, but gave some appearance of faction, it was thought good there should be an association and agreement, that we should combine together in one body, and to submit to such government and governors as we should, by common consent, agree to make and choose, and set our hands to this that follows, word for word."

Bradford, writing of the same, says it was "occasioned partly by y^e^ discontented & mutinous speeches that some of the strangers amongst them had let fall from them in y^e^ ship. That when they came ashore they would use their own libertie:" etc.

The agreement or compact is as follows:

"In y^e^ name of God, Amen. We whose names are underwriten, the loyall subjects of our dread soveraigne Lord, King James, by y^e^ grace of God, of Great Britaine, Franc, & Ireland king, defender of y^e^ faith, &c., haveing undertaken, for y^e^ glorie of God, and advancemente of y^e^ Christian faith, and honour of our king & countrie, a voyage to plant y^e^ first colonie in y^e^ Northerne parts of Virginia, doe by these presents solemnly & mutualy in y^e^ presence of God, and one of another, covenant & combine our selves togeather into a civill body politick, for our better ordering & preservation & furtherance of y^e^ ends aforesaid: and by vertue hearof to enacte, constitute, and frame such just & equall lawes, ordinances, acts, constitutions, & offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most meete & convenient for y^e^ generall good of y^e^ Colonie, unto which we promise all due submission and obedience.

"In witnes whereof we have hereunder subscribed our names at Cape Codd y^e^ 11. of November, in y^e^ year of y^e^ raigne of our soveraigne lord, King James, of England, France, & Ireland y^e^ eighteenth, and of Scotland y^e^ fiftie fourth. An^o^: Dom. 1620."

To this compact were signed the names of each male member of the company, and among them that of Edward Doty.

Stephen Hopkins, with his family and servants, were among those who joined the party of emigrants at Southampton on their arrival from Leyden. He was a tanner or leather maker by trade and the term servant probably indicates a workman or, in this case, an apprentice.

They had been residents of London, and in many ways it is shown that these were not considered as being of the same mind and spirit as the others, who were so closely knit together by their long residence in Leyden. It is probable that the newcomers were actuated by a greater spirit of adventure in emigrating to the New World, and that they were less ready to acknowledge the authority of the Governor of the new Colony who seems to have already been chosen, while it is certain that some at least were not in full sympathy with the religious ideas and the motives that guided the actions of the leaders.

Disaffection with the general interests of the party had appeared during the voyage, sufficient to create suspicion, and it was probably owing to this that the famous compact was drawn up.

Edward Dotey was invited to sign this compact on board the Mayflower after its arrival in Cape Cod Harbor and from this time he was treated to all intents and purposes as one of the company, receiving the same allotment of land and stores as all other single men. From this it would seem as if he had at this time reached his majority, though he probably still owed some service to Stephen Hopkins. It has been assumed, however, inasmuch as he is spoken of as a youth, that he had now reached his 21st year, and this is the only indication that we have of the date of his birth.

The Mayflower arrived at Cape Cod on the 11th of November (O. S.), 1620, and the first duty of the emigrants was the necessity of looking for a suitable place of habitation in this new country. They had bought "a large shalop with them out of England," but the boat had been so much bruised and shattered by the rough weather on the voyage that it was found it would take some days to properly repair it. Whereupon a few volunteered to go by land, making such discoveries as they could, while the shallop was being put in order. "It was conceived ther might be some danger in ye attempte, yet seeing them resolute, they were permited to goe, being 16. of them well armed, under ye conduct of Captain Standish," to whom was joined for advice and counsel William Bradford, Stephen Hopkins and Edward Tilley. It is probable that Edward Doty was one of this party. They started on the 15th November and were gone several days, marching along by the side of the sea. A few Indians whom they met ran away from them and they found some Indian corn, which had been buried probably for future use, which they bore back to the ship, having never seen any such before.

After this, the shallop being ready, a party of thirty sailed to the same neighborhood, where it had been thought a suitable harbor might be found. They discovered some deserted houses of the Indians and much corn and beans, which they carried away and which served them for seed the next spring; but the harbor was found unsatisfactory.

The month of November being thus spent, and "much foule weather falling in, the 6. of Desemr. they sent out their shallop againe with 10. of their principall men & some sea men upon further discovery."

The account appended is from Mourt's "Relation" (now recognized as a Journal by Geo. Morton, one of the pilgrims, and identical in many parts with Governor William Bradford's history).

"Wednesday, the sixt of December (1620), it was resolved our discovers should set forth, for the day before was too fowle weather, and so they did, though it was well ore the day ere all things could be readie. So ten of our men were appointed who were of themselves willing to undertake it, to wit, Captaine Standish, Maister Carver, William Bradford, Edward Winsloe, John Tilley, Edward Tilley, John Houland, and three of London, Richard Warren, Steeuen Hopkins, and Edward Dotte and two of our Sea-men, John Alderton, and Thomas English, of the Ships Company there went two of the Masters Mates, Master Clarke, and Master Copin, the Master Gunner and three Saylers."

The narration of which discovery follows, penned by one of the Company. (Undoubtedly Governor William Bradford, as it is identical with the account in his history.)

The party above is the famous party that started out in the shallop of the Mayflower on the voyage of discovery. Starting on the 6th December (our 16th), the weather being very cold and hard, and the sea rough, they had great difficulty first in launching the shallop and next in weathering a sandy point, now known as Long Point, inside which they lay. Two of them were very sick and Edward Tilley nearly swooned with the cold. In spite of these hardships they continued, partly by sea and partly by land, for several days, encountering and beating off Indians, discovering their stores of corn, their habitations and graves, until after many dangers and hairbreadth escapes, late on Friday night, 8th December, in the storm, they found a refuge on what is now known as Clark's Island, in Plymouth harbor. Here they rendezvoused all day of Saturday, 9th, and rested Sunday. On Monday, 11th December (our 21st December, "Forefathers' Day"), they sounded the harbor, found it a good harbor for the shipping, and sailed for the mainland, landing on Plymouth Rock. Then "we marched also into the Land, and found divers corne fields, and little running brookes, a place very good for scituation, so we returned to our Ship again with good newes to the rest of our people, which did much comfort their hearts."

In "Thatcher's History of Plymouth," p. 360, it is related of this journey:

"Clark's Island (Plymouth harbor) received its name from Clark, the Master's mate of the Mayflower, who first took possession of it Dec. 8, 1620. There is a tradition that Edward Dotey, a young man, attempted to first leap on the island, but was severely checked for his forwardness, that Clark might first land and have the honor of giving his name to the island, which it still retains. My authority for this tradition is Mr. Joseph Lucas, whose father was great-grandson of Edward Dotey."

A few days later the Mayflower dropped her anchor in Plymouth harbor, and the whole party, which by Bradford's account numbered 102 persons, landed and commenced the settlement of the town. It is related that Thursday, the 28th of December (Jan. 19th, 1621, by our count):

"So in the afternoone we went to measure out the grounds, and first, we tooke notice how many Families they were, willing all single men that had no wives to joyne with some Familie as they thought fit, that so we might build fewer houses, which was done, and we reduced them to 19 Families." Each person was allotted half a pole in breadth and three in length, and lots were cast for position. (These plots were on the north and south sides of what is now known as Leyden street, Plymouth.)

In this allotment Edward Dotey undoubtedly united with the family of Stephen Hopkins, and continued thus till the further allotment of land in 1624. The story of this first winter of the settlers, strangers upon this most inhospitable coast, overcome by sickness and exposure, is pathetically told by Bradford. Within two or three months one-half of their company died, it being the depth of winter and they wanting houses and other comforts. They were attacked by scurvy and other diseases, caused by their long voyage and poor condition, so that there died sometimes two or three in a day. In the time of their greatest distress there were but six or seven sound persons to wait upon the others and perform the necessary duties for the sick. The seamen on the vessel fared almost as badly, so that the Mayflower was detained several months from returning. To add to their distress, the house which had been built as a general rendezvous and for the common use, and to which many of their goods had been removed, was accidentally burned on the 14th January, and increased their troubles.

Edward Dotey unquestionably bore his part in the sufferings of this trying season, but his young and rugged constitution carried him safely through, and the spring found him working with his master in the fields or upon the houses which it was found necessary to erect and which were at first used largely in common by the settlers. The first direct allusion to him that we find in the records at this time is not a complimentary one. But it must be borne in mind that these, the records of the police court of the time, exaggerate the importance of these peccadilloes of the young. It is under the date of 1621, June 18, that we find this item in "A Chronological History of New England," by Thomas Prince, M. A., a journal carefully compiled from Bradford's History and the various records of towns and churches, and published about 1712.

"The second offence is the first duel fought in New England, upon a challenge of single combat with sword and dagger between Edward Doty and Edward Leister, servants of Mr. Hopkins, both being wounded, the one in the hand, the other in the thigh, they are adjudged by the whole company to have their head and feet tied together, and so to be for twenty-four hours, without meat or drink; which is begun to be inflicted, but within an hour, because of their great pains, at their own and their master's humble request, upon promise of better carriage, they are released by the Governor."

The seeond offence this is called. The first had been in March previous, when John Billington, "who came on board at London," was charged with "contempt of the Captain's lawful command with opprobrious speeches." He was adjudged to much the same punishment, but "craving pardon & being first offence he is forgiven."

In these early days of the Colony these were unquestionably very grave offences against the peace and against the authority of the Governor, and were properly met with severity of punishment, the more readily perhaps as the offenders were in humble position and among those who had joined the company at London and had thus from the first been viewed with suspicion by the pilgrims from Leyden.

But this action of our ancestor, coupled with other subsequent but less serious offences against the peace, and the further fact of a generally litigious if not quarrelsome nature, as developed by the many actions before the General Court in which he appears as defendant or plaintiff, seem to indicate the possession of a warmer blood and quicker temper than those by whom he was surrounded, and points to other than English origin.

An apprentice or servant in the family of a London tanner, probably for seven years before the emigration to America, there is still little to determine the place of Edward Doty's birth. The name is a distinct one. It is not found in England either at the present day or among English names of the time in the various works devoted to the names of families and their histories. It does not seem to have had any other representative in the early emigration. "Doughtys" and "Dottens" of English origin there were in that day; emigrants of these names settled in the same localities, but in no case is there apparent a single incident or connection that would indicate an origin similar to that of the Doty family.

It may be noted here that the earliest spelling and pronunciation of the name seems to have been "Doty." This is the spelling as given by Governor Bradford, while "Mourt's Relation" gives it as "Dotte." The second generation at Plymouth are frequently called "Doten," or sometimes "Doton" and "Dotin"—with this exception, however, that each of the sons who left Plymouth for points inland returned to the spelling "Doty." Thus Joseph Doty at Rochester, Samuel Doty in New Jersey, and Isaac Doty on Long Island, each of whose descendants have retained this spelling. The other sons, Edward and John Doty at Plymouth and Thomas Doty on Cape Cod, were sometimes called "Doten," but then again their descendants who have left the seacoast have almost invariably returned to the original "Doty."

This leads to the belief that the spelling of the name "Doten" has been the result of a provincial pronunciation characteristic of the locality at the time, a belief which is strengthened by the fact that the distinctly English name of "Doughty" was at the same period in the same locality pronounced "Doughten," and will be found so written in the records of Scituate, Mass.

Baylie, in his "Chronicles of Plymouth," vol. 1, p. 265, says: "The names of Bompasse, De La Noye and Doten are unquestionably of French origin. The persons who originally bore them were probably admitted into the Plymouth Company from amongst the French Protestants resident at Leyden. They have been changed by English pronunciation and usage into Bumpus, Bump, Delano and Doty."

However this may be as to the names Bompasse and De La Noye, we know that Edward Doty was not resident at Leyden and that the name was probably originally "Doty," rather than "Doten."

But a study of his character, from what we know of his actions, would furnish much more reasonable ground for belief that he may have had a French origin.

Numerous suggestions have been made from various and valued sources as to this origin, based in most cases on ingenious deductions from the names of French families or localities, but in the absence of more definite information this remains a matter of speculation entirely, unrelieved by a single fact upon which we may base an opinion.

It should be noted also in this connection that several facts may be taken as pointing to a possible German origin of our name. A German, attracted by the name Doty upon a business sign, declared that the name had been the original name of his family; that his great grandfather was a Lutheran minister living about 1763 at Aultweile, about nine miles from Frankfort, Germany, of the name of "Dotee," and had a family there, which he had always understood to be of German origin.

It is to be hoped that the researches now being made under the auspices of the New England Genealogical and Historical Society in London by Mr. Henry C. Waters may result in some clue to further and more reliable information.

In the spring of 1624 the people requested the Governor to have some land "by continuance and not by yearly lot as before," which request was granted, and to every person was given one acre of land, to them and theirs, as near the town as might be, that they might keep close together for greater defence and safety, and no more till the seven years expired for which all had covenanted together. The tract of land which Edward Doty received in this division is located by Mr. William T. Davis in his "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," pages 314–316, as having been located on what is now known as Watson's Hill. This land, at his death and the division of his estate, fell to his son Edward Doty, who was drowned in Plymouth harbor 1690. After his death the shares of the other children were bought by his son-in-law, Justice James Warren, from whom title has passed to its present owners.

This division is entered on the "Records of the Colony of New Plymouth—Deeds—Vol. 1," as follows, it being the second entry in this first volume of deeds:

"The falles of their grounds which came first ouer in the May-Floure, according as their lotes were cast—1623." "These lye one the South side of the brooke to the woodward opposite to the former these containe 16 akers besides Hobamak's ground which lyeth betweene Joe. Howlands & Hobkinses."

Gilbard Winslow	1
Samuel Fuller Juneor	3

It is quite certain from the allotment of the other plots adjoining the above and opposite to it to the remaining members of the original emigrants, which precede or follow the above entry in the book of deeds, that the plot allotted to Edward Doty was one of those marked "Edward" in the above list, the balance of the name on the record having been either accidentally torn or perhaps omitted. The other "Edward" was probably Edward Lister, and they were allotted plots next to their master, Stephen Hopkins, and this is corroborated by the extract above from the "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth." It is probable that this first plot never passed out of the possession of Edward Doty during his lifetime, though he soon removed elsewhere, but at his death passed to his son Edward and to his children, as noted.

The next allotment of lands was in the Spring of 1627, and is noted thus in Prince's Chronology: "To make all easy, we take every head of a family, with every young man of age and prudence, both of the first comers, and those who have since arrived, into partnership with us. Every single freeman to have a single share. Each father to have leave to purchase a share for each of his family. Each share is allotted twenty acres of tillable land, besides the single acres with the gardens and homesteads they had before." The "single acres" referred to those allotted in 1623–4. No division of the live stock was made at the same time. In this division of "lotts" and property, made after careful consideration by the Governor and Council, each single man united with some head of a family in order that there might be as few families as possible, and Edward Doty was attached to the family of John Howland. In the record the name is written "Edward Dolton," which is an error of the copyist or of the recorder, as the name of Dolton does not appear elsewhere in the records of the Colony. The entry in the Book of Deeds, reads: "The fourth lot fell to John Howland & his company joyned to him his wife

Elizabeth Howland
John Howland Junor
Desire Howland
William Wright
Thomas Morton Junor
John Alden
Prissilla Alden
Clemont Briggs
Edward Dolton
Edward Holdman
Joh. Alden

To this lot fall one of the 4 heyfers came in the Jacob, Called Raghorne."

The entries in the records so far are in the handwriting of Governor Bradford, but the different volumes of records are in the handwriting of many different individuals besides Governor Bradford, there being that of Governor Edward Winslow and of the Secretaries of the Colony, Messrs. Nathaniel Souther, Nathaniel Morton, Nathaniel Clarke and Samuel Sprague. Each of these has not simply a penmanship different from the others, but each has a spelling of his own, especially of proper names.

It must be remembered that the Julian method of computing time, commonly known as the "Old Style," was in use in England and its dependencies. The legal year commenced on Conception day, the 25th of March. The addition of ten days will reduce it to our present or "New Style." Where the months were distinguished by numbers the first month was March, the second April, etc.

Taking the entries chronologically as entered in the various volumes of "Miscellaneous Records," "Court Orders," "Deeds," etc., we obtain the only account that is open to us of the life and character of this "London youth."

They are as follows:

According to "an order of the Court held the 2d of January in the seaventh yeare of the raine of o^{r} Soveraigne lord Charles, by the grace of God King," etc. (1631–2), "the persons heereunder menconed were rated for publike use by tbe Gov^{r}. Mr. Will. Bradford (and his assistants), Capt. Miles Standish, Joh: Alden, Joh. Howland, John Done, Stephen Hopkins, Will Gilson, Sam. Fuller, Senior, John Genny, Godbert Godbertson, & Jonathan Brewster, to be brought in by each pson as they are heere under written, rated in Corne at VI^{s}. p bushell." In the list that follows Edward Dowty is rated £01 .07ss: 00d: and this rate is about the same as those above named, but not so large as that of Edward Winslow, whose rate is £2., 05s., 00d., or that of Isaack Allerton at £3. 11s. 00d. Many others in the list are rated lower, as 18s.; 15s., and some as low as 9s. This would seem to indicate that by this time, January, 1632, he had begun to accumulate some property, and that he must have been industrious, capable and successful to have rated so high.

In the list of "The Names of the Freemen of the Incorporacon of Plymoth in New England, An. 1633," appears "Edward Dowty." At a Court held January 1st, 1632–3, by Bradford, Governor, "An action tryed between John Washburne, plaintiffe, and Edw. Dowty, defendant, about an hog the defendant had taken wrongfully from the plaintiffe, as hee alledged; but the jewry, Rob^{t} Heeks being foreman, fownd the plaintiffe faulty & acquitted the defendant. According to this verdict judgem^{t}, pronounced ag^{t} the plaintiffe.

"Joseph Rogers complayned in Court of Edward Dowty for non-pformance of cov^{ts} in a contract between them wherein six pigges of five weekes old were due unto the plaintiffe. The case being heard, the defendant was cast in four bushels of Corne.

"Will Bennet complained of Edward Dowty for divers injuries w^{ch} was referred to the Owncell to be ended by them."

"The Acts of the Owncell, Jan. 3d, 1632–3.

"William Bennet complayned of Edw. Dowty to have dealt fraudulently wth him about a flich of bacon he was to haue at the rate of three pounds of beaver, w^{ch} being viewed was esteemed but at halfe the value & to be made good in beaver or so much bacon as Robt Heekes and Francs Eaton should thinke meete betweene man & man.

"The said plaintiffe having sold the defend^{t} a pcell of boards for beaver demanded pmt pay. The matter being heard, it was determined that the def^{t} should pay him so much bacon in hand as the foresaid Rob^{t} and Francs should value to be worth three pounds of beaver, and the remainder to be paid by the said Edw. at or before the first of March next ensuing to Richard Church of Plymouth aforesaid, being the assigne of the said

Will Bennet; and for default of paym^{t} upon the desire of the said Willi: or his assigne to haue order to straine.

"Whereas the said Will had employed the serv^{t} of the said Edward one moneth in sawing of boards wth Edw. Shaw, it was ordered he should allow him so much for his serv^{t} as the said Edw had w^{ch} wrought wth him, and not to be p^{d} for a moneth of daies, being the weather was very unseasonable by reason of raine &c.

"At a Court held the first of April, 1633.

"An accon of slander tryed between William Bennet & Edward Dowty of New Plymouth; the said Will being plaintiffe accused the said Edward to have called him rogue, w^{ch} being proved by divers testimonies, the jewry, Josuah Pratt being foreman, found the def^{t} to be guilty & amerced him in fifty shilling fine whereof thirty to goe to the plaintiffe and twenty to or soveraigne lord the King, and gaue the said Edward Dowty eight moneths day of paym^{t}."

The above entries of the years 1632 and 1633 appear to be in the manuscript on the record of Governor Edward Winslow, and it will be noted that he uniformly spells the name Edward Dowty. There is no more significance to be given to this spelling, however, than to the names of Rob^{t} Heekes, John Done and John Genny, representatives of the "Hicks," "Doane" and "Jenny" families, as well as many similar misspellings of names of other families in the records.

"At a Generall Court held 2d Jany, 1633-4." (Winslow still being Governor.)

"It was ordered, that whereas John Smith, being in great extremity formerly, to be freed of the same bound himselfe as an apprentice to Edward Dowty for the terme of ten yeares, uppon the peticon of the said John the Court toke the matter into hearing, and finding the said Edw: had disbursed but little for him, freed the said John from his cov^{t} of ten yeares bond him to make up the time he had already served the said Edward the full terme of fiue yeares; and at the end thereof, the said Edward to giue him dowble appall, & so be free of each other.

"At a Court of Assistants held 24th March 1633-4.

"Edward Dowty & Josias Cooke were amerced in 6^{ss} VIII^{d} p man for breaking the peace of our sover. L. the K. and whereas the s^{d} Edward drew bloud from the said Josias, the said Edward was awarded to giue him 3^{s} 4^{s} for the same, w^{ch} to be p^{d} wth in one moneth, or levied at the pleasure of the gov^{r}."

"Edward Dowty" was again rated Jan. 2d, 1634, in the list at £00. 18^{s}. 00^{d}."

"At a Court before the Gournor & Assistance held the 28th March 1634. (Prince was now Governor.)

"Edw. Dowtie, plaintife, haveing arested Francis Sprage in an accon of twentie sterling, it is determined that the defendant Francis Sprag pay vnto the plaintife VI^{s} and VI^{d} sterl. wth charges, and also halfe a peeck of malt, or give him satisfaceon for the said malt.

It is entered on the record:

"6th Jany 1634-5. Edward Doten and Fayth Clarke were married."

"At a Generall Meeting the 14th of March 1635-6 concerning the Hey Grownds for Plymoth & Duxborrough. The place heereafter menconed were assigned to the severall psons for their prnt use the yeare 1636 viz: That Mr. Prence, Joseph Rogers, Tho. Cushman, & Edw. Dowty haue the ground upon Jones his river, where Mr. Prence & Mr. Allerton mowed last year.

"At a Court of Assistants held 1636, Aug. 22. Peter Talbott, the late servt of Edwd Dowty having a proporcon of land due unto him by the service of his mr as appeareth by indenture, hath made over his right to James Skiffe, for & in consideracon of six bushels of corne."

In the transfer of this land, which was made at the Court held July 6, 1637, the above facts are recited, but the name is written "Edward Doty."

"Octo 5. 1636. Joseph Beedle & Edw. Dowty, having entred crosse accons against each other, their matters being raw & impfct, were by the Court referred to the arbitracon of Richard Church, Josuah Prat, & Nicholas Snow & they to stand to such order the said arbitrators should sett downe."

"The Names of the Freemen" are given again, March 7, 1636-7, Bradford being now Governor, and among them Edward Dotey.

John Banges and Edward Dotey are this year, 1637, to have "hey ground at Saggaquash."

"1636-7 March 7. At a Court of Assistants. Georg Clarke complaynes against Edward Doty in an action vpon the case for to the damnage of XII£ for a deceitful bargaine made wth him for a lot of land. The Court ordered it by consent of both pties, that the said Edward Dotey shall either repay to the said George Clarke the eight pounds he hath receiued for the said lot in pt of payment, vpon the last day of Nouember next or els vpon the payment of four pounds more vnto the said Edward Dotey by the said George Clarke; the same day the said Edward Dotey shall assure the said lot of land vnto the said Georg Clarke and his assignes for euer."

"1637 Octo 2d Georg Clarke complaynes agst Edward Dotey in an action vpon the case for denying him the liberty to hold land for the terme he had taken yt for, to the damage of XX£. The jury found for pltiff and assessed XXs damnage and the charges of the Court. Execucon granted."

This matter does not seem to have ended there, for at the same session of the Court Edward Dotey was convicted of assault and battery on George Clarke and assessed 12d. damages and the costs of Court. And on the 6th March following, either for the same offence or a new one, "Edward Dotey was fined Xs. for breaking his maties peace in assaulting George Clarke." This appears to have settled the difficulty, for we find no further mention of it, and it may be well to note here that "George Clarke" was apparently not related to the family of Faith Clark whom Edward Doty had married. Under date of 1637, July 12th, the following deed appears in the first volume of deeds recorded in the Colony. We enter it here at length, as it was one of the earliest deeds recorded, or, at least, of those which have been preserved. It is of interest, as showing that with some changes of orthography the same cumbrous forms and terms which existed two hundred and fifty years ago are still in vogue in conveyances of real estate:

"The XIIth of July Anno Dñi 1637. Edward Dotey & Richard Derby, The said Edward Dotey for and in consideracon of the sume of one hundred and fifty pounds of lawfull money of England to be payed in manner and forme following Hath freely and absolutely bargained sould allienated enfeoffed and confirm vnto the said Richard Derby his heires and assignes All those his Messuages houses and tenements at the heigh Cliffe or Skeart hill together wth the foure lotts of land and three other acres purchased of Josuah Pratt Phineas Pratt & John Shawe All which sd pmisss and all & singuler thapprtence vnto the said Richard Derby his heires and Assigns foreuer to the onely pper use & behoofe of the said Richard Derby and his heires & assigns foreuer.

"(signed) Richard Derby
Edward Dotey his ⌣ marke"

This deed, like many others, was signed upon the record book, it being apparently the original deed and not a copy. Richard Derby signs his name, but Edward Doty in this, as in every other paper so far found, signs by mark only, his mark on this deed being in character similar to above.

Though this deed appears properly signed upon the record, it was apparently afterward cancelled, or the property reconveyed to Edward Doty, for we find under date of "Octo. 1, 1638. At a Court of Assistants. Whereas sixtie acres of lande were graunted to Edward Dotey, lying at a pond neere Namassacutt Payth, vpon report that he had sould his house and land at Heigh Cliffe to Mr. Richard Derby, wch bargaine is now relinquished, the said Edward Dotey doth also relinquish the said grant. And the Court hath graunted the said Edward Dotey six acress of meadow there, to lye to his house at Heigh Cliffe, and all that pcell of vpland lying before the said meddow, and to begin at the esterly end at the swampe, ranging vp westerly to another swampe, and to extend to Namascutt Path, southward, saueing that the said Edward shall allow a payth for carriages as shalbe thought meet to be layed forth."

The foregoing documents, with others to follow, establish the fact that Edward Doty was a considerable owner of land at "Heigh Cliffe," or "Skeart Hill," a locality still known by that name, being in the extreme north of the town, bordering on Kingston.

Here, too, or perhaps in the adjoining plain called "Plain Dealing," he lived, and continued to live probably until his death, for though, as appears by records elsewhere and by his will, he was a large purchaser at Yarmouth, at Cohasset, or Dartmouth, and other places, it does not appear that he ever changed his residence from the High Cliff after he established it there, which was probably as early as 1635.

At a Court held 6th August, 1637, John Derby was granted three score acres land at Mount's Hill, and Edward Dotey to have the like there also, both plots subject to the approval of Mr. Edward Winslow and Mr. John Jenney.

"4th Dec. 1637. Edward Dotey and Tristram Clarke his father-in-law are to take Josiah Winslow, Nathaniel Sowther, and Josuah Pratt and to view a pcell of land by Mr. John Derbies graunt at Mounts Hill, that vpon their report thereof to the Gounour and Assistants they may haue pcells thereof graunted them."

"5th February 1637-8. Fourty acrees of lands are graunted vnto Thurston Clarke, and a garden place lying at the Southwest end of Derby's Pond, on the South side of Monts Hill Chase."

"Threescore acrees of lands are graunted vnto Edward Dotey, and a garden place lying at the westerne end of Derby's pond." This was probably the plot relinquished 1st October, 1638, in the record already given.

"2d Jan'y, 1637-8. Edward Dotey complaines against John Holmes, gent, in an action of trespas to the damnage of XL£. The jury found for the defend^{nt} and gaue him fiue shillings damnage and the charges of the Court because the Complt could not prove he had sustayned any damnage thereby."

"25th Octo. 1638. Richard Derby complaines agst Edward Dotey in an action to the dam. of XIIII£."

31st Aug., 1638 (Thomas Prence still Governor), appears the following: "Memorand. That whereas William Snow was lately brought ouer out of old England by Mr. Richard Derby and is his couenant servant for fiue yeares as appeares by his indenture, beareing date the XXth of Februar. 1637 (1637-8) now the said Richard Derby hath assigned ouer the said Willm Snow vnto Edward Dotey, to serue him the residue of the said terme of fiue yeares, and two yeares longer, that is to say, for the terme of seuen yeares from the XXth day of October next ensuing vnto the end of the terme of seuen yeares next ensuinge, the said Edward pformeing such condicons as on his pt are to be pformed, and shall in the end of the said terme, pay the said William Snow on liuely cow calf of two months old, wth two suits of apparell, and fynd him meate, drink & apparell during his terme."

"5th Nov., 1638 Edward Dotey is bail in 40£ for Samuel Gorton of Plymouth."

"(Same day). Georg Moore is allowed the liue wth Edward Dotey, he carrying himself in good order as he ought to doe, and to enjoy the bargain between them."

"4th June, 1639. Edward Dotey, yeoman" became security in £20 for Richard Derby."

"24th Sept., 1639. Edward Dotey, planter," sells a plot of twenty acres upon the High Cliff to Richard Derby for a consideration of £22."

"1639-40, 3d March. John Shaw complaynes agst Edward Dotey in an action of tresp^{s} vpon the case to the dam. of X£. The jury fynd for the pltif, assesse three pounds fifteene shillings dam. and the charges of the Court."

"6th April, 1640, Bradford Governor. At a Court, &c. A pcell tenn acres of meddow in the long meddow by Edward Doteys is graunted to M^{ris} Bridgitt Fuller, to be layd forth for her of that w^{ch} lyeth next to Edward Doteys meddow and a pcell of vpland to yt."

"1st Sept., 1640. Bridgitt Fuller widow, compl. agst Edward Dotey in an action of trespas vpon the case to the dam of XXX£. The jury fynd for the pltiff and assesse III£ Xs dam. & charges of the Court, but the platiff is to pforme her bargains to the deffnt for wintering her cattell."

2d Nov., 1640. A grant was made of the "West Meddow called Lakenhame by Doteys to Edward Dotey six acres wth vpland." Lakenhame was the ancient name of the present town of Carver, which adjoins Plymouth on the west.

1st June, 1641. George Allen of Sandwich "became ptey to the action that Edward Dotey pfrrs agst William Alney of Sandwich."

"At a townes meeting by the inhabitants of Plym. holden the 16th Septembr 1641:

"Thurston Clarke is graunted tenn acres of vpland at the head of Edward Doteys lotte toward Mounte Hill Payth.

"Edward Dotey's pcell of vpland at Lakenham is graunted to be made vp fourty acres."

4th January, 1641–2. At a Court, &c.:

"Concerning the difference betwixt Edward Dotey and Thurstone Clarke, it is ordered by the Court, that the said Thurstone Clarke shall pay unto the said Edward Dotey XII bushells & 1 peck of Indian Corne, and XIIs in money or IIII bushells of Indian and XIs for charges that the said Edward layd forth for the said Thurstone; and this to be payd before the next Court, or else to haue execucon."

"1st February, 1641–2. Whereas Edward Dotey hath two cowes and a young steere of Thomas Symons to keepe for tyme, and that by reason the said Edward Dotey doth not put his catttell to a keep in the sumer tyme and that they use to break into mens corne, and may thereby be endangered either to be spoyled wth corne, or come to some other harme, whereby the said Symons may be endamnaged, the Court doth order, that the said Edward Dotey shall take order that his cattell be safely kept by a keep or els if any damnage befall the said Thomas Symons by default thereof, that the said Edward Dotey shall make good the same to the said Thomas Symons."

Ordered, "that Georg Clarke shall pay foure bushells of Indian Corne vnto Edward Dotey vpon the differences now depending betwixt them."

"Concerning ye defences betwixt Mr. John Jenney and Edward Dotey" (Jenney having been granted an attachment for the money in the hands of Thurston Clarke on an execution against Edward Dotey of 31s. 6d.), the Court ordered that the said Jenney should pay Edward Dotey "fiue bushells & a half of Indian mchantable corne, & IIId for so much remayned due to the sd Dotey vpon the account."

"3d May, 1642. Concerning the differencs betwixt Mr. John Jenney, Samuell Stortevaunt & Joseph Ramsden about their corne in ptnshipp, the Court doth order, wth consent of all pties, that the fiue bushells and a halfe of corne wch Mr. Jenney should pay to the said Dotey for Thurston Clark, and also eight bushell wch the said Joseph Ramsden should pay the said Edward Dotey shalbe payd to the said John Jenney by the said Joseph, wch said fiue bushells and a halfe and the said VIII bushells do make vp the thirteene bushells & half wch Edward Dotey was to pay the said Samuell for his pt of the said cropp, and so the said Edward Dotey to be freed from any further incumbrance therein."

7th Dec., 1641. Edward Dotey was granted execution in a suit against James Luxford and in connection with Mr. Thomas Prence attached certain moneys lying in the hands of John Chaundler for said Luxford.

7th May, 1642. Joshua Pratt conveys an acre of upland at the High Cliff to Edward Dotey.

7th Sept., 1642. Edward Dotey plantor, is bail for John Hassell of Seacuncke. (Seekonk is a town now in Bristol County, Mass.)

5th May, 1643. Edward Dotey conveys for a consideration of £16. to Stephen Bryan and John Shaw Jr. 40 acres of land at the High Cliff. (John Shaw Jr. conveyed in 1645 the twenty acres which came to him in this plot to Samuel Stertevaunt.)

6th March, 1643–4. In a controversy between them Edward Dotey was ordered to pay to Mr. Hanbury "five bushells of Indian." Also, about the same time he was ordered to pay "five bushells of Indian corne to Mr. John Groome for Manasseth Kempton's use."

5th March, 1643–4. Edward Dotey plantor is bail for "John Smyth of the Eele River."

3d March, 1644–5. He becomes bail for Steven Bryan.

1643. Edward Doty was a private in the military company of Plymouth.

The following item is the first that appears on the records in the chirography of Mr. Nathaniel Morton, Secretary of the Colony, and it will be noted that now the name is again spelled Doty.

"New Plimouth this 7th of December 1647. Whereas Samuell Cuthlbert complaineth against Edward Doty for y^{t} hee the said Edward Doty hath wronged the said Samuell in taking away som wood from of his and, the Court haueing heard what can bee said on both sids the said Court hath ordered y^{t} the said Edward Doty shall pay vnto the said Samuell Cuthbert 7 shill. damage and the charges of the Court."

16th Sept., 1649. Thurston Clarke the elder, and Faith his wife unite in conveying to John Dunham, a house and ten acres of upland lying on the highway going to Jones River, abutting upon the upper end of the lots of Samuel Cuthbert and Edward Doty; the deed quaintly specifies all the boards and shelves, all the doors and the locks upon them in the house, and the fruit trees in the orchard, and shows by this time at least the introduction of these luxuries of civilization into the colony.

"6th March, 1649–50. Edward Doty complayneth against John Shaw Jun'r. The jury find for the plaintife thirty-five shillings dammage and the charges of the Court the deffendant to make good the iron worke to the plaintife."

7th Aug., 1650—Edward Doty was ordered to pay a bushel of Indian corn to each, Edward Gray and Samuell Cutbert for damage done by his calves and other cattle in their corn.

This completes the references to Edward Doty in the "Court orders," and "Judicial acts" of the colony, but seems to establish the fact of his residence up to this time, at least (1650), at the High Cliff, or possibly at "Plain Dealing," which is still nearer the line of Kingston.

It was at this time, it will be remembered, that Governor Bradford, in the Appendix to his history recounting the families of the original settlers, says that "Edward Doty by a second wife hath 7 children, and both he and they are living." From other sources we know that in 1652 he was one of the purchasers of Dartmouth, and that he made other purchases of lands elsewhere.

His death occurred at Plymouth August 23, 1655. His will is dated there three months earlier, and as it states him then sick it is probable that his sickness continued altogether many months. His will, which is as follows, is signed by his mark, and the name receives a new spelling from the scrivener, "Dotten," this being the only occasion where it is used:

"May the 20th 1655.

"In the name of God, Amen.

"Know all men by these Presents, to whom it may concerne, that I Edward Dotten, Sen'r of the Towne of New Plymouth, in New England, being sicke and yett by the mercye of God in pfect memory, and upon mature consideration doe by this my last Will and testament leave and bequeath my purchase land lying at Coaksett unto my sons; my son Edward I give a double portion, and to the rest of my sonnes equall alike, if they live to the age of one and twenty; if they die before, then to bee p'ted among the rest, only to my wife I leave a third during her life, and then after to returne to my sonnes. If the household utensils and farming implements in this inventory seem to the present generation hardly worth the mentioning in a will, it must be remembered that at that day chairs were a luxury, not alone in New England, but in the largest part of the civilized world, and that many conveniences which we now esteem among the necessaries of life were then unknown. The inventory indicates that Edward Doty was the possessor of a comfortable homestead, well furnished for the needs of his family.

Coaksett, named in the will, is the present Dartmouth, in Bristol County, Mass. Punckquesett was the Indian name for the southern portion of the present town of Tiverton, in Rhode Island.

It has been a matter of great interest to the writer during the many years spent in collecting the materials for this history, to form such idea of the life and character of our ancestor as was afforded by a study of the public records and the early history of the Plymouth Colony. Several visits to the town of Plymouth, a perusal of the records there in manuscript, not only of the Colony, but those as well of the county and town; the aid of some of its citizens who have for years made these records their study, and thereby become familiar with their various details; an inspection of the different localities mentioned and interviews with many of the older residents, with their interesting relics of chinaware and furniture of the early days, and still more interesting traditions which have found place in none of the printed histories; all these have aided him more or less. With these associations Plymouth has been, to him at least, a delightful place to visit. The rock on which that boat load of pilgrims who "set out to discover" first landed; the old "Leyden street," where the first houses were located; the hill where so many were buried during those first three months of exposure and suffering; Pilgrim Hall, with its relics of "the first comers," whose names are wrought in the iron that fences the Plymouth Rock; the stately monument, whose graceful figures and tall shaft now cover probably a spot where Edward Doty mowed the grass two centuries and a half since; aye, even the names upon some prominent signboards of business houses, assuming here the spelling "Doten" and having many worthy representatives in the town and vicinity, all conspire to make it full of interest. The oldest house in Plymouth is "the Doten House," though not now occupied by a family of the name; the principal wharf is the Doten Wharf, and in every part of this and the adjoining towns comfortable mansions and farms are held by some of the name.

The study of these public records and early history of the Colony, taken in connection with the history of the time, the lives of his associates and neighbors, and an inspection of the locality and its surroundings, give the following impression of our ancestor: A tall and well built man, with a strong constitution, a frame well knit together, and arms and limbs evidently used to hard work, active, alert and full of life, with perhaps a surplus of energy; without school education and yet with an active mind and that knowledge that comes quickly to a close observer from experience; of a kind nature and good intentions, but tenacious of his own to an extent at least of demanding his full rights, and obstinate in maintaining them. Probably when he landed, a youth, at Plymouth, he did not possess any of the religious feeling which actuated the leading spirits among the Pilgrims, but came soon to admire the inflexible honesty of their dealings and the industry, integrity and morality of their lives. Perhaps his early associations in the family of the "good John Howland" helped to curb his unruly spirit. At any rate, from this time on his life appears to have been circumspect, and he seems to have given his energies to the proper support of his increasing family, and with much thrift, to the amassing of property and lands. Many of the suits at law which we have noted were evidently brought in no unfriendly spirit, but rather to settle by arbitration disputed claims. If our assumption of his birth in 1599 is correct, he died in his fifty-sixth year, and it is more than probable that the exposure and hardship of the landing and the first Winter, which only his rugged constitution enabled him to withstand, at last shortened his life.

Governor Bradford's statement in the appendix to his history, that in 1650 "Edward Dotey by a second wife hath 7 children and both he and they are living," though unquestionably correct, being written at the time by one familiar with all his neighbors, still furnishes us with the only knowledge that we have that he was twice married, and gives us no clue whatever to his first wife. There is no indication elsewhere in any records that points to this first marriage or to any issue from it.

In that invaluable work to searchers in New England genealogical history, the "Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England," by James Savage, in four volumes, a work of immense labor and years of investigation into all available records, it is not surprising, in the midst of so much detail, that he should fall into several errors in his account of the descendants of Edward Doty, and these errors have been copied by others and have thus, to some extent, been further circulated. His account, found in the second volume, is as follows :

"Dotey, Doty, Dote or Doten. Edward. Plymouth. Came in Mayflower, 1620, a London youth in the service of Stephen Hopkins. Was one of signers of the solemn compact in Cape Cod harbor, Nov. 11th, and was with his master in the shallop that in December following discovered Plymouth harbor. June 18, 1621, was party in first duel in New England. He retrieved his character by change from youthful folly. M. (probably as second wife) 6th January, 1635, Faith, daughter of Tristram Clark.

"Children: 1. William. 2. Faith. 3. Edward. 4. John. 5. Isaac, b. Feb. 8, 1648. 6. Desire. 7. Thomas. 8. Joseph, b. April 30, 1651.

"Bradford says he had 7 children living in 1650. He was, in 1852, one of the purchasers of Dartmouth, but removed to Yarmouth and died Aug. 23, 1655. His will of March 20, 1654, names only his wife and Edward. His widow m. Mch 14, 1667, John Phillips of Duxbury & outlived him."

Following this is a list of the descendants of Desire, Edward, John, Joseph and Thomas.

While there is no mention of three other children in this list (Samuel, Elizabeth and Mary), there appears to be no authority whatever for the first two named, William and Faith, and it is evident that they are given in error. Possibly the name of the widow, which occurs not only in the Plymouth records after her husband's death but also in several local histories, has been mistaken for a daughter, but the name of William does not appear elsewhere.

The entry on the Colony record is:

"6th Jany, 1634–5. Edward Doten and Fayth Clarke wer maried."

Faith Clarke was born 1619, and was at this time but sixteen years of age, was the daughter of Thurston Clarke and Faith, his wife. They came to Plymouth from Ipswich, Suffolk, England, in 1634 in the Francis, he being at that time forty-four years of age. His name is sometimes written Tristram Clarke. Besides their daughter Faith they had two sons, Thurston, Jr., and Henry. They probably had no issue. Under date of 1st April, 1690, we find: "The selectmen of Duxborough having reported that two of their inhabitants, Henry Clarke and Thirston Clarke, by reason of their age indiscretion & weakness of understanding are incapable of tneir own support notwithstanding that they have an estate sufficient, and John Dotey of Plymouth their nephew having promised to take prudent care of them is allowed to recoup himself from their estate," under certain conditions mentioned. Thurston Clarke, the elder died at Duxbury, Mass., 1661. His widow died about 1663, as appears by an entry in the records 1st June, 1663. "The Court haue ordered concerning the disposing of the eatate of Faith Clarke widdow, deceased, that her daughter Faith Dotey widdow shall haue a quarte pte," etc.

After the death of her husband Mrs. Faith Dotey resided at Plymouth. There are receipts upon the records there from the following of her children for their share of their father's estate, these being all of her sons:

Edward Dotey and Sarah, his wife, Oct. 16, 1665.

John Douty and Elizabeth, his wife, Jan. 17, 1667.

Thomas Douty, Jan. 17, 1668.

Samuel Dotey, July 16, 1668.

Joseph Doten, May 30, 1672.

Isaac Dotey, alias Doughty, July 5, 1672.

On the 14th March, 1667, she married at Plymouth John Phillips, of Marshfield. Shurtleff's "History of Marshfield" says:

"Soon after the death of his second wife Mr. John Phillips, on the 23d Feb., 1666-7, made a contract of marriage with Mrs. Faith Dotey (the widow of Edward Dotey), which was consummated by marriage the 14th March following, By this contract it appears that both parties had several children. Her family consisted of several sons, Edward, Thomas, John, and possibly more, and daughters Desire, Elizabeth and Mary. Mrs. Faith Phillips died December, 1675. Her estate from her first husband was divided among her children." The contract above spoken of is entered on the records at Plymouth: "2d July, 1666. Vpon a motion of marriage betwixt John Phillips of Marshfield and Faith Dotey of Plymouth these pticulars were joyntly concluded of the abouesaid pties, as followeth." The conditions provide that the children of both parties remain at the disposition of their own parents; that she retains for her own sole use all of her own estate; and that if he died first she was to have a life interest in one third of his estate. It is signed by the contracting parties, Faith Dotey signing by her mark, and it is witnessed by her daughter, who signs plainly "Desire Dotey."

John Phillips was born in England 1602. He resided successively at Plymouth, Duxbury and Marshfield. He died there July, 1677. Mrs. Faith Phillips resided after her second marriage at Marshfield, and her younger children removed there with her. She died December, 1675. The day of her death is not given, but she was buried 21st December, 1675, in the old cemetery at Marshfield, Mass.

On the record there appears the following, under date of "10th July 1677. Whereas there is about thirty shillings of the estate of Faith Phillips, deceased lying the costody of John Phillips her husband, it is agreed by and between the sonnes of the said Faith Phillipes and with theire joynt consent, that the said sume shalbe payed vnto the daughters of the said Faith Phillips, viz: Desire Serman, Elizabeth Rouse and Mary Doten, in equall and alike proportions, vnlesse the two younger sisters shall see reason, in respect of the low condition of the eldest, to consider her in that respect."

1. EDWARD DOTEY AND FAITH CLARKE had children, all born at Plymouth.

THE FAMILY OF EDWARD DOTY.

2. EDWARD DOTY (or DOTEN), the oldest son of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, was born at Plymouth, probably in 1637. He was, therefore, at the death of his father, in 1655, eighteen years of age.

He was a seaman by profession, and probably early adopted this occupation. It is not unreasonable to suppose he did so at this time, notwithstanding the fact that the will of his father shows he became heir and possessor of a double portion of the estate. The records show, too, that he received several grants of land between 1662 and 1668, and these were not readily granted to men so young except they were men of some substance or had shown some special service to the Colony, but seamen were frequently held to be deserving of these grants. His voyages were mostly short ones along the coast, and may have been for purposes of trade with the other settlements, or possibly for fishing.

The entries on the records in which his name appears are as follows:

In 1662 he sold the land received from his father at Punkakeesett (Tiverton) to Edward Gray.

1662, 3d October. Edward Dotey (with others) is "to bee considered in an accomodation of land in that which Captaine Willett hath purchased on the north bounds of Rehoboth or elsewhere." This was in the bounds of the present town of Attleboro, Mass., and the Captain Willett was the Thomas Willett who went to New York City at the invitation of the Governor of New York, and who was the first English Mayor of that city and the ancestor of the Willett family of New York.

1663, 20th March. Was granted "the 15th lot on Puncateeset neck to Robert Lee and Edward Dotey."

1665, 7th June. He was granted by the Court one share of about thirty acres on the westerly side of Namasskett River. This was probably within the bounds of the present Middleborough.

1665, 16th Octo. Edward Dotey and Sarah, his wife, convey to John Smith his land at Ponagansett in Dartmouth, in exchange for a house and lot on North Street, Plymouth, and further consideration in money. This deed is signed as above, Edward Dotey. This plot was on the north side of North street, in Plymouth, commencing about fifty feet from Court street, and included the ground on which some half-dozen modern houses now stand.

At the death of Edward Doty these plots came into the possession of his son-in-law, James Warren, who bought the shares of the various heirs as they became of age. The names of the present owners, as well as the immediate possessors, are given by Mr. Davis in his "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," pages 172–3, etc.

1655–6, 8th Jany. Edward Dotey was granted three acres at the Turkey Swamp.

1667, 2d July. Liberty was granted to Edward Dotey and his brother John Dotey "to look out for some supplyes of land."

1667, Octo. He was granted six acres at Swampy Meadow.

1668. Edward Dotey was on jury.

Same year. Edward Dotey, alas Douty, and his wife Sarah, sell to Francis Combs land on the West side of Nemeweskett River.

1668–9, 31st Jany. He was granted fifty acres at Monponsett. This was in the present town of Halifax, Mass., northwest of Plymouth.

1674. He is named on a bail bond, Edward Doten, seaman.

1684. Edward Dotey alias Doten buys a plot at Plymouth.

1684, 28th Octo. Edward Doten Sr. was on a Coroner's jury.

1686, 6th July. Edward Dotey Sr was on jury.

1689, June. Edward Dotey Senr. was admitted as a Freeman.

The entire absence on the records of disputes of any nature whatsoever, or anything derogatory to his character, taken in connection with what is known of the high character borne by all his children, leads to the belief that he was a man of intelligence, integrity and thrift, who stood high in the regard of his neighbors and townsmen.

He married, 25th February, 1662–3, Sarah Faunce, who was born at Plymouth about 1645, and was daughter of John Faunce and Patience his wife, and sister of the famous Elder Thomas Faunce.

John Faunce came to Plymouth, 1623, in the Ann. In the same vessel came George Morton, the author of "Mourt's Relacion," previously noted, with his wife Julian, whom he had married in 1612 at Leyden, she a daughter of Alexander Carpenter of Wrentham, England. With her parents came Patience Morton, born at Leyden 1615, who in 1634 married John Faunce.

Their son Thomas Faunce, who was the worthy Elder of the church, was Town Clerk from 1685 to 1723. During this time the town records were generally entered by him, and it is to be noted that although the name appears in 1674 and in 1684 written "Doten," that in 1686 and 1689 he enters his brother-in-law's name always "Dotey," and continues to write it so during his term of office.

It seems probable, from this connection with the Faunce and other leading families, that Edward Dotey and his wife Sarah were devout Christians, carefully bringing up their family to good habits and the practice of the virtues. It is related that in a storm on the 8th Feb., 1689–90, Edward Dotey, with his son John and Elkanah Watson, another resident of Plymouth, were drowned in Plymouth harbor, or, perhaps more properly, by the wreck of their vessel in attempting to enter the harbor.

On the 18th March following, "Sarah Dotey relict widdow of Edward Dotey late of Plimouth deceased," made oath to an inventory of the estate, to which her brother-in-law, "John Doten," and son-in-law, James Warren, were witnesses. The widow continued to live in Plymouth until 1693, where on the 26th April of that year she married John Buck, of Scituate, Mass. He had come with his brother James in the Diligent in 1638 and settled first at Hingham, but removed, 1650, to Scituate. He married for his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Holbrook of Weymouth, by whom he had ten children.

It is probable that at her second marriage Mrs. Buck removed to Scituate, where her death occurred 27th June, 1695.

Shortly after this, at Plymouth, on the 9th July, 1695, "Thomas f faunce and John Dotey," both of Plymouth, and their uncles, were appointed by the Court guardians of the minor children, Samuel, Benjamin and Mercy. They could scarcely have had better guardians or better training than they received from their guardianship.

On the 3d December, 1696, an agreement is entered upon the records made between James Warren and Sarah his wife, Martha Doty, Tobias Oakman and Elizabeth, his wife, and Thomas Faunce and John Dotey, guardians of Samuel, Benjamin and Mercy Dotey, "being all the heirs of Edward Dotey deceased," for the distribution of his estate. The whole estate, or at least the whole real estate in Plymouth, by purchase from all the heirs, subsequently passed into the possession of James Warren.

When Thomas Faunce became town clerk, in 1685, he soon opened a book for the registry of births, marriages and deaths. These had occasionally been entered in the earlier records, but not so fully as was now attempted by the new clerk. The families of his relatives by blood or marriage are entered very fully, the births of all the living members being given, though dating back much earlier.

One of the earliest records in this register is given thus:

"The children of Edward Doty Senior and Sarah his wife—

11. i. EDWARD, born 20th May, 1664.
12. ii. SARAH, born 9th day June, 1666.
13. iii. JOHN, born 4th day of August, 1668.
14. iv. MARY, } Twins, born 9th day of July, 1671.
15. v. MARTHA, }
16. vi. ELIZABETH, born 22d Dec., 1673; m. before 1696 Tobias Oakman, as appears by the partition deed quoted above. No other reference to them appears on the records at Plymouth, and it is probable that they removed soon elsewhere.
17. vii. PATIENCE, born 7th July, 1676.
18. viii. MERCY, b. 6th Febuawary, 1678. Shee dyed the last day of November, 1682.
19. ix. SAMUEL, born 17th May, 1681.
20. x. MERCY, born 23d September, 1684.
21. xi. BENJAMIN, born 30th May, 1689.

Of these, besides the first "Mercy," whose death is given on the record, Edward, the oldest son, died probably between 1690, at which date his father is still called Senior, and 1696, when the agreement between all the living heirs shows that he had died and without issue. John was drowned in the harbor with his father Feb. 8, 1689–90, and Patience died Feb. 26, 1690–1.

12. SARAH DOTY, the eldest dau. of Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce, was b. at Plymouth, Mass., June 9, 1666. She m. there June 21, 1687, James Warren, b. also at Plymouth, Nov. 7, 1665, the youngest son of Nathaniel Warren and Sarah Walker, his wife, and grandson of Richard Warren, who came in the Mayflower 1620. They were the ancestors of a noble and illustrious line of patriots.

James Warren was a man of great influence and wealth and a Justice of the Peace at Plymouth. He is frequently called Captain James Warren on the records. He was a man of enterprise and judgment, and became a very large landholder in the town and vicinity. He bought the entire real estate of Edward Doty, his father-in-law, as the heirs became of age or removed from the town. His name is identified with the history of Plymouth by his various transactions and public-spirited improvements in the building of the town, and by connection with the distinguished families of the vicinity.

Children:

22. i. JOHN, b. Nov. 27, 1688; d. March 1, 1689.
23. ii. EDWARD, b. Sept. 14, 1690; d. Feb. 28, 1691.
24. iii. SARAH, b. May 27, 1692.
25. iv. ALYS (Alice), b. Sept. 3, 1695; m. Peleg Ford.
26. v. PATIENCE, b. Jan. 13. 1697-8; m. Joseph Stacy.
27. vi. JAMES, b. April 14, 1700.
28. vii. HOPE, b. Aug. 2, 1702.
29. viii. MERCY, b. March 21, 1704-5; m. 1762, as his second wife, Sylvanus Bramhall, of Plymouth, Mass.
30. ix. MARY, b. Jan. 14, 1707; not m.; d. Feb. 4, 1795.
31. x. ELIZABETH, b. Jan. 17, 1710-11; m., 1st, Thomas Murdock; m., 2nd,———Thompson. She probably had no children, as her property was devised to her nephew, Benjamin Bramhall, son of her sister Mercy.

14. MARY DOTY, dau. of Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce, his wife, was b. at Plymouth, July 9, 1671. She m. there Dec. 21, 1699, Joseph Allyn, who was b. at Barnstable, Mass., April 7, 1671, and son of Lieutenant Samuel Allyn and Hannah, daughter of Rev. Thomas Walley. Lieutenant Samuel Allyn was a son of Thomas Allyn, one of the earliest settlers of Barnstable.

Joseph Allyn and his wife lived for several years at Plymouth, but removed about 1705 to Wethersfield, Ct., where they subsequently resided. Though the house in which they resided at Plymouth was not built by him and was occupied by him only during the three years between his marriage and his departure to Weathersfield, it was known for many years, in fact as long as the house existed, as the "Allyn House," which designation, Davis declares, was due alone to its association with this distinguished family.

Members of the Allyn family were early at Hartford, Windsor, Middleton, Wethersfield and other towns in that vicinity in Connecticut, certainly as early as 1693-4 and possibly before that. The family has always been prominent and influential and has left its impress on each town. Hotels, public halls, blocks of buildings and other improvements bear testimony to the public spirit of those who have borne the name. By the records at Wethersfield it appears that "Joseph Allin of Plimouth, marriner, bought lands at Wethersfield of Nicholas Moorecock and Amy his wife of Boston in Massachusetts, 7th Sept., in the third year of Our Sov. Queen Anne (1704)." This is recorded Feb. 5, 1704–5, showing the probable date of removal from Plymouth, as his daughter Hannah is stated on the record to have been born at Wethersfield, May 17, 1705.

Letters of administration on the estate of Captain Joseph Allyn, late of Wethersfield, were granted to Nathaniel Stillman, April 6, 1742. Early in 1744 all the heirs agreed to and signed a settlement, which was ordered to be kept on file in the Probate Office. A careful search in the office at Hartford, Ct., failed to discover this paper, nor did the records at Wethersfield, or further inquiries there, give any further information as to the descendants. Nathaniel Stillman, of Wethersfield, was his son-in-law, having married his daughter Sarah. Captain Joseph Allyn's farm and residence at Wethersfield were at a beautiful spot on the banks of the Connecticut River, commanding an extensive view. It is probable that even after locating here he followed, for a time at least, his profession of mariner, the Connecticut River having early become the seat of an extensive trade to the Barbadoes and East Indies; and communications must have been frequent, not only with his brother-in-law, Captain Samuel Doty, at Saybrook, but also with those who remained at the old homesteads at Plymouth.

Children:

32. i. Elizabeth, b. Plymouth, 1700.
33. ii. Mary, b. Plymouth, 1702.
34. iii. Hannah, b. Wethersfield, May 17, 1705.
35. iv. Samuel, b. Wethersfield, Feb. 24, 1706–7.
36. v. Sarah, b. Wethersfield, Aug. 17, 1708; m., as his second wife, Nathaniel Stillman of Wethersfield, they had 7 children.
37. vi Martha, b. Wethersfield, Oct. 22. 1710.

15. MARTHA DOTY, dau. of Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce, was twin sister of Mary and b. at Plymouth, Mass., July 9, 1671. She m. there Dec. 23, 1696, her cousin, Thomas Morton, b. also at Plymouth 1667, son of Ephraim Morton and Ann Cooper, and grandson of George Morton, one of the early emigrants, who was the author of "Mourt's Relacion," quoted before. Thomas Morton and Martha, his wife, lived in Plymouth.

Children:

38. i. Thomas, b. Plymouth, Feb. 12, 1700.
39. ii. Lidiah, b. Plymouth, Nov. 15, 1702; m. there Benjamin Bartlett, b. Plymouth, 1699, son Joseph Bartlett and Lydia Griswold.
40. iii. Lemuel, b. Plymouth, Oct. 21, 1704; d. young.
41. iv. Sarah, b. Plymouth, July 6, 1706.
42. v. Nathaniel, b. Plymouth, Oct. 2, 1710.
43. vi. Mary, b. Plymouth, Aug. 30, 1712.

19. SAMUEL DOTY, son of Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce, b. Plymouth, Mass., May 17, 1681; m. Saybrook, Ct., Dec. 3, 1706, Anne Buckingham, b. Saybrook, Ct., Aug. 2, 1687, dau. Rev. Thomas Buckingham and Esther Hosmer, dau, Thomas Hosmer, of Hartford. He d. Saybrook, Ct., Jan. 26, 1750; she d. Saybrook, Ct., Dec. 16, 1745.

Captain Samuel Doty lost his father in 1690. In 1695 the estate was settled, and his uncles, Thomas Faunce and John Doty were appointed guardians of the youngest children, Samuel, Mercy and Benjamin. He early adopted the profession of his father and uncle and became a mariner. In 1705, as appears by deed at Plymouth, he sold all his property there to his brother-in-law, Captain James Warren. This property consisted of four or five different plots of many acres each at various places, and included that received from his father as well as his own purchases. In this deed he is described as "mariner of Connecticut." He probably removed to Saybrook, Ct., as early as 1703; he married there 1706 and in 1708 purchased the home lot and dwelling at Saybrook Point, in which he afterward lived. This purchase was made for £60.

From this time he continually purchased property at Saybrook, as appears from deeds on record there, and became a considerable landholder. He traded with the Barbadoes, West Indies, and other foreign ports, and in 1715 he is described in deeds as merchant.

From the Connecticut Colonial Records it appears that at a meeting of the Governor and his Council, held Aug. 26, 1710, it was ordered that four certain vessels should be impressed for service in the expedition against Nova Scotia, one of these being a new sloop called the Six Friends, of about fifty-five tons, belonging to Mr. Samuel Dotey, of Saybrook, which cost (as appears by his account on file) in building and fitting £450. In case of loss he to be paid full value, and there was allowed to Mr. Samuel Doty, master of the sloop Six Friends, and his men, toward wages £15, 10s.

"Meeting of Council. Nov. 8, 1710. Ordered, that the transports now in the harbour of New London under the command of Capt. Dotee and Burroughs do deliver to the Commissary what stores &c belong to this Colony they have on board." And again: "Octo. 1727. This Assembly do establish and confirm Mr. Samuel Doughty of Seybrook to be Captain of the Company or trainband in the old Society in the town of Seybrook aforesaid, and order that he be commissioned accordingly."

In the second book of Saybrook records: "Entered y^{e} July 28th 1724. The marks Capt Samuel Dotey puts on his cattle is an half cross on the under side of near ear, and a hole in the same ear."

In 1732 and 1737 Mr. Samuel Dotey was a deputy, or representative, from Saybrook to the General Assembly of Connecticut.

In 1880 the writer visited Saybrook, Ct., and met there, Sept. 7th, Mr. Horace Stillman, a descendant of Captain Samuel Doty. Mr. Stillman, at that time eighty-seven years of age but still a man of active habits, pointed out the site on Saybrook Point on which Captain Samuel Doty built and where he died. Mr. Horace Stillman had himself lived in the house, which had then been somewhat enlarged; but some years since, while he was away, the house being very old had been pulled down, and unfortunately all the old papers and documents had been destroyed. Oil paintings of Captain Doty and his daughter, in a very dilapidated state, were preserved, but all else was lost. Captain Doty owned considerable land on Saybrook Point and had also a cooper shop there, where the manufacture of barrels was carried on.

The portraits referred to above, renovated and renewed, are now in the possesion of Rev. William D'Orville Doty, of Rochester, N. Y. The one represents a fine, portly gentleman in the costume of the time, holding in his hand a letter, which is directed to "Philip Thomas, merchant, Barbadoes." An open window shows a bark under full sail, and is evidently intended to show his profession or business. The other portrait is that of Mrs. Margeria Parker Doty, the wife of his son Samuel.

Mrs. Annie Buckingham Doty, wife of Captain Samuel Doty, was the ninth and youngest child of Rev. Thomas Buckingham and Esther Hosmer, his wife, who was the daughter of Thomas Hosmer, of Hartford, Ct.

Rev. Thomas Buckingham was of Welsh parentage, was ordained minister at Saybrook, Ct., 1670, and continued to preach until his death, April 1, 1709, aged nearly sixty-three years. He was one of the founders of Yale College; was a "fellow" there from 1700 until his death, and a strong supporter of the college both at Saybrook and New Haven. He was one of the leaders of the clergy and the strict Puritans of his time, and one of the Moderators of the famous Synod which formed the celebrated Saybrook Platform in 1708.

Captain Samuel Doty and his wife are buried side by side in the old Saybrook burying ground. The gravestones of red sandstone are still in a fair state of preservation and bear the following inscriptions:

"Here lies Interrd the remains of Capt. Samuel Doty, who departed this life January y^e^ 26 A. D. 1750 in y^e^ 70^th^ year of his age."

"Here lies Interr^d^ the body of Mrs Ann Doty, wife of Capt. Samuel Doty who Dec^d^ Decembr 16^th^ 1745 in y^e^ 59 of her age"

And on the footstones: "Capt Samuel Doty." "Mrs Ann Doty"

Near these were two other graves, side by side, with stones and inscriptions as follows:

"Here lies interrd the body of Mr Samuel Doty who departed this life December y^e^ 16 1751 in y^e^ 39 year of his age." On footstone: "Mr Samuel Doty."

"Here lies Interr^d^ the body of Mrs Ann Doty who departed this life August y^e^ 20^th^ 1758, in y^e^ 21^st^ year of her age." On footstone: "Mrs Ann Doty."

These are the graves of Samuel, the son of Captain Samuel Doty, and Ann, the daugher of the former, who, though not married, bears the title "Mrs." in accordance with the custom of the time. Captain Doty was a man of importance and of considerable property. Besides that at Saybrook Point he owned a large farm at Deep River, Ct., which he conveyed by gift to his son Samuel in 1738. He was a man of great probity, and a consistent member of the first Congregational Church of Saybrook, in the annals of which are many references to his family. The town records are also well preserved, but do not contain the detailed records of families as fully as those of Plymouth; the records are now deposited with the town clerk at Deep River, Ct., which was a part of the old town.

Saybrook Point, where Captain Samuel Doty had his residence, has lost much of its old importance. Lying at the mouth of the Connecticut River, it was one of the earliest settlements in the State, a fort having been built there in 1635. By the early part of the next century it had become a busy trading port, and numerous vessels plied between the town and the West Indies, and this trade supplied the inhabitants of the Point with their occupation for many years. Captain Samuel Doty was the leading merchant of the Point at this time of its greatest prosperity. After he had retired from active sea life, he dispatched his vessels to the various ports of the West India islands, while he superintended on shore his cooper shop and other investments more or less directly connected with his main business.

The beautiful, quiet and restful village now called Old Saybrook lies several miles above the Point; its broad roads, tall elms and comfortable looking mansions show it to have been a home of wealth and culture rather than of trade. Here, in a frame building of one story and eighty feet in length, was established, in 1701, the college which seventeen years later was removed to New Haven and called Yale College. The Rev. Thomas Buckingham was one of its founders and most earnest supporters. As the minister of the first church at Saybrook he became, in 1708, one of the most active members of the Synod that adopted the "Saybrook Platform" as the confession of faith for the college and the churches of the colony.

Captain Samuel Doty, his son-in-law, was a strong adherent and sympathizer. His training and surroundings at Plymouth had tended toward an exemplary life. He was a man of strong character and earnest purpose, and this, combined with his spirit of thrift and adventure, caused him speedily to assume a place of influence in the community.

At no time after his departure from Plymouth is his name spelled "Doten." Almost invariably the deeds and other papers upon the records at Saybrook are signed or written "Doty," and this is the form that has been adopted by all his descendants without exception, as well as by those of his brother Benjamin, who followed him to Saybrook and was the ancestor of a large family there. Their posterity being the only descendants in the male line of Edward Doty 2d, of Plymouth, it follows that the name of Doten has no standing in this branch. Captain Samuel Doty and Anne, his wife, had children.

44. i. SARAH, b. Saybrook, Nov. 18, 1708.
45. ii. SAMUEL, b. Saybrook, June 17, 1712.

20. MERCY DOTY, the tenth child and youngest daughter of Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce, was born at Plymouth, Mass., Sept. 23, 1684. Left an orphan at the age of eleven years, she probably lived with one of her uncle guardians at Plymouth until her brothers Samuel and Benjamin established their home at Saybrook, Ct., when she followed them, taking up her residence there. She married, Nov. 13, 1713, at Saybrook, Daniel Pratt, who was born there Jan. 13, 1680–1, and was a son of John Pratt and Mary Andrews.

Pratts were numerous in the early settlements of New England, and several different families of that name settled early at Saybrook or in the vicinity. An excellent genealogy of the family has been published—"The Pratt Family," by Rev. F. W. Chapman, A. M., Hartford, 1864—from which many quotations have already been made in the preceding pages, and from which the following record has substantially been taken.

John Pratt, of Saybrook, is styled in the Town Records "John Pratt (Taylor)" to distinguish him from another John with whom he was a contemporary and who bears the title "John Pratt (Smith)."

It is not known who was his father nor from whence he came. One of his sons, as appears from a deed of land on record, removed to Southampton, on Long Island, and it is possible that the father may have lived there before coming to Saybrook, though there is no proof to warrant this assertion. He married, Aug. 10, 1676, Mary Andrews, by whom he had six children, of whom Daniel was the only son who remained in Saybrook and had a family.

Daniel Pratt and Mercy his wife lived and died at Saybrook, Ct.

50. v. EDWARD, b. Saybrook, Nov. 28, 1723.

21. BENJAMIN DOTY, son Edward Doty and Sarah Faunce; b. Plymouth, Mass., May 30, 1689; m. Saybrook, Ct., Oct. 2, 1716, Hester Bemen, b. Saybrook, Ct., dau. Samuel Bemen and Hester Buckingham.

From the records of Plymouth, Mass., we learn that July 2, 1710, "Benjamin Dotey of Plymouth sells his share of the estate of his father to James Warren" (his brother-in-law). It was probably about this time that he removed to Saybrook, Ct., where he afterwards resided, and where his brother, Samuel Doty, had preceded him. We find no further record of him till his marriage in 1716. Samuel Bemen, or Beamond, as the name is sometimes written, the father of his wife, died at Saybrook, November, 1747, aged eighty and upwards. He was born at Saybrook and was a son of William Beamond, who came to Saybrook in the ship Elizabeth from London 1635, aged at that time twenty-seven years, and married there, 1643, Lydia, daughter of Nicholas Danforth.

Hester Buckingham, wife of Samuel Bemen, was born also at Saybrook, and was the oldest daughter of Rev. Thomas Buckingham, the first minister of the Congregational Church at Saybrook. She was a sister of the Anne Buckingham who married Samuel Doty.

Benjamin Doty was a farmer. His farm, still called the "Doty farm," is situated about three miles from the village of Saybrook, and the site of the old homestead is easily found by the ruined cellar, the large orchard adjoining the spacious yard, and the spring at the foot of the garden. Three generations of this branch of the Doty family held the place. Several old tan vats in the vicinity seem to indicate that he was a tanner by trade. Tradition says that Mrs. Hester Doty was a woman of strong mind and superior education.

By the record of Saybrook deeds, now on file at Deep River, Ct., we find, under the date 1731–2, Samuel Beaman gives to his daughter Hester and Benjamin Doty a lot in Saybrook.

1744, May 25, is entered a cattlemark as follows: "The marks that Benjamin Doty puts on his cattle is a swallow-tail or notches on the top of y^e^ near ear."

Under date 1752, Benjamin Doty and Hester Doty, his wife, Samuel Shipman and Sarah, his wife, Hester Doty second, Edward Doty and Temperance Doty, being children of said Benjamin Doty, unite in selling 2¼ acres at Saybrook to Richard Lord.

And in 1762, Sept. 12, as appears by the records of the church at Saybrook, "Esther Doty, Benjamin's wife, was admitted to communion."

By this it would seem that Mrs. Hester Doty certainly, and Benjamin Doty probably, lived till after 1762, but there is no record nor tradition to show the dates of their deaths, while the quiet and peaceful farm life they led accounts for the absence of any further entries.

It is true that among the descendants of this family there has been a tradition that this Benjamin Doty married Esther Danforth. There is nothing to support that tradition. The records show very plainly the marriage at the date above given to Hester Bemen, and the subsequent deeds confirm it. The deed of 1752 included all their living children who were then of lawful age, and this is again confirmed by the dates of birth of these children as given upon the church records or by their descendants. The only foundation that is apparent for the tradition of "Esther Danforth" is the descent from the emigrant, Nicholas Danforth.

Two further items found on the records of the church at Saybrook have produced further confusion. They are as follows:

"Benja^m^, the son of Benjamin Doty, dyed Sept 1, 1738 aged 37."

"1752. Octo 14. Benjamin Doty Jr and Martha his wife owned the Covenant."

The will of Thomas Jones, of Saybrook, Ct., dated March 19, 1771, mentions a daughter, Martha Doty, and her son, Edward Doty.

These items are inconsistent with the record as here given, and, unless they are errors in the church books, are explicable only on the theory of there being another Benjamin Doty residing at Saybrook. The title Junior, as given at that time, did not necessarily infer that the person bearing it was the son of the other Benjamin. Its significance was "the younger," and it was frequently used to distinguish two of a name, even though not closely related. It will be noticed that Benja^m^, the son of Benjamin Doty, who died Sept. 1, 1738, aged 37, must have been born 1701, and the father probably thirty years earlier, or about 1670, at which date, nor till 1689, was there any Benjamin Doty in existence of whom there is any knowledge. Again, the second entry shows that Benjamin Doty, Jr., who was living with his wife Martha in 1752, cannot refer to either Benjamin in the first entry, and the conclusion is unavoidable, after a close study, that both items are clerical errors in the church records.

Savage, in his "Dictionary of New England Genealogy," says of Mrs. Mary Otis: "She was a woman of very superior character. A good portrait of her in the costume of that time was in the possession of her grandson, Hon. Harrison Gray Otis, of Boston," and is probably now with the "Gray Collection" in the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston, or in the State House.

The following account of Colonel James Otis and his descendants is condensed from an excellent history of the family in the "New England Genealogical Register," vol. 2, July, 1848.

James Otis rose to be a man of great distinction and influence, of superior genius, but more indebted to the native energy of his mind than to a regular education for the acquirements he possessed. He was distinguished for his knowledge of the law, and ardently engaged in asserting the rights of the Colonies. He was elected to the Provincial Legislature in 1758, and made Speaker of the House in 1760. In 1763 he was appointed Judge of Probate for Barnstable County, and a year later Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. In this year, 1764, he was also chosen one of His Majesty's Council, but was not allowed to sit at the Council Board until 1770, owing to his opposition to the measures of government. During the first year of the Revolution he still sat at the Council Board, of which body he was president and the oldest member. From 1760 to 1775 he served on committees of the Legislature which reported many of the most remarkable and masterly state papers of this period, and his name is frequently mentioned as a compeer with Adams, Quincy and Hancock

He died Nov. 9, 1778, having lived long enough to see the prospective success of his country in the struggle for freedom. His portrait is in the old State House, Boston.

1727, Bejamin Stillman, b. Wethersfield, Ct., July 29, 1705, son George Stillman and his wife Rebecca.

The record at Wethersfield says: "Mr. Benjamin Stillman and Sarah, ye daughter of Capt. Samuel Doty of Say-Brook were married on August ye 29th 1727 by ye Revd Mr. Azariah Mather, Minister."

Wethersfield was one of the early settlements of Connecticut and for many years was a flourishing and important town, with a considerable foreign as well as domestic trade. It has lost its early importance and has to-day but few traces of its early settlers, whose descendants have emigrated to other parts of the country. The town records give but scant information of the Stillman family, other than that in those days, 1730 to 1750, Benjamin Stillman was a man of prominence and influence in the town and a considerable owner of real estate there.

They resided at Wethersfield, Ct. She d. there Oct. 4, 1732. He m., 2nd, Katherine Chauncey, dau. Rev. Nathaniel Chauncey, of Durham, Ct.; she d. June 12, 1736, and he m., 3rd, Dec. 15, 1737, Ann Pierson, of Wethersfield. By her he had two chil.:

John Parker, Jr, and Mary Jones, dau. Lieutenant Samuel Jones. He d. Deep River, Middlesex Co., Ct., Dec. 16, 1751, and is buried with his dau. Ann in the old Saybrook burying ground, near his parents. She d. prob. early in 1785, also at Deep River,

Samuel Doty graduated from Yale College in 1733. He received by deed of gift from his father in 1738 a farm at Deep River, where he subsequently lived. The house he built is still standing and in good condition, and was partly occupied in 1880 by his great granddaughter, Miss Ann Lord. Miss Lord still had in her possession a string of gold beads that belonged to Mrs. Margeria Parker Doty, and had shortly before parted with a fine portrait in oil of her, it now being possessed by Mrs. Julia N. D. Harvey, of Saybrook, Ct., and being almost a duplicate of that owned by her brother, Rev. William D'Orville Doty, of Rochester, N. Y. By the records of the First Church at Saybrook, it appears that "Margeria, widow of Mr. Samuel Doty, was admitted to the communion Nov. 27, 1774."

Administration of the estate of the widow Margery Doty, late of Saybrook, was granted to Samuel Doty (her son) of Saybrook, and his inventory of her estate was approved June 6, 1785. The estate included seven acres of land, silver plate, etc., and was valued at 34£. Deep River was part of Saybrook. The administrator, Samuel Doty, sold above land 1786.

56. EDWARD DOTY, son Benjamin Doty and Hester Bemen, b. Saybrook, Ct., 1726.

He was married three times, but the name of his first wife, who was the mother of his children, is not known. He married second, after 1767, a widow Dennison, and married third, late in life, Elizabeth Gladding, but had no children by either of these.

In his youth he was engaged in the Indian Wars, and was for a time a captive to the Indians. His sufferings at this time affected his mind, and in later years he was at times partially deranged, and when in that condition he delighted to perform Indian feats for the amusement of his grandchildren. He was admitted as Freedman of Saybrook 1768, and his cattle mark is entered there Jan. 18, 1770. He was a Revolutionary soldier also, but no record has been preserved of his regiment or of his services. After the Revolution he removed to Stephentown, N. Y., where he died March 13, 1806.

Benjamin Doty was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He served as a private in Captain Martin Kirtland's Saybrook company in Colonel Erastus Wolcott's regiment, the Nineteenth Regiment of Connecticut militia, and was in service in New London, Ct., Feb. 28, 1777. He subsequently was granted pension for this service.

His grandson, Rev. William D'Orville Doty writes:

"He resided at the old Doty homestead and carried on farming, tanning and the manufacture of shoes. He and his wife were members of the Congregational Society of Saybrook. They resided there until after the birth of all their children, and in 1797 sold the homestead and started for a new home at New Durham, Greene County, N. Y., in the Catskill Mountains, where their son Benjamin had preceeded them. The journey was made by sloop from Saybrook to Catskill Landing on the Hudson River, two weeks being consumed by the trip. Here the family were met by their son Benjamin and Mr. Daniel Coe with horses and oxen to transport them and their goods to New Durham. The roads were newly made, being cut through the dense forest with an axe only, and with the youngest children carried on the loads of furniture and the others trudging on foot by their side the journey of twenty-four miles consumed three days, when the party arrived toward evening at Mr. Coe's house. Here the wagons were left and the almost exhausted travelers started on foot upon the last mile over a "follow" that was but just cleared of trees, leaving the ground covered with logs and broken branches, brush and briers. It was late at night when they arrived at their final destination, but the warm welcome and bountiful repast which greeted them soon changed their sorrow to joy. The old log house gradually gave way to a better tenement, the schoolhouse and church made their appearance, and the parents lived to see the wilderness turned into a prosperous settlement."

As appears on an old Bible record, Benjamin Doty d. March 12, 1826, aged eighty-three years seven months and fifteen days. Mrs. Phebe Doty d. Jan. 16, 1806, aged fifty-nine, and they are both buried at Durham, N. Y.

79. JAMES OTIS, son of James Otis and Mary Allyne, b, Barnstable, Mass., Feb. 5, 1724–5; m., Boston, Mass., 1755, Ruth Cunningham, b. Boston.

James Otis, well known as "The Patriot," was the orator of the times preceding the Revolution, and one of the earliest and boldest asserters of the great principles which led to our national existence. He graduated at Harvard College, 1743, began practice of the law at Plymouth, Mass., but soon after settled in Boston. He was appointed Advocate General at the Court of Admiralty, and very soon distinguished himself by pleading against the "Writs of Assistance," a government measure which had provoked great opposition. His argument and oration are said to have electrified his audience, and it has been well said that then and there the child of Independence was born. President John Adams in later years wrote: "I do say, in the most solemn manner, that Mr. Otis' oration against writs of assistance breathed into this nation the breath of life."

His effort secured him a commanding popularity with the friends of their country, and the terror and vengeance of its enemies. In May, 1761, he was chosen to represent Boston in the Legislature, where his eloquence, wit and force of argument gave him great influence.

Before the year 1770 no American, Dr. Benjamin Franklin only excepted, was so well known in the other Colonies and England. The cause of American Independence was identified abroad with his name, and it was thought, foolishly enough, that if he was taken away the cause would perish.

In 1770 he was attacked by a royalist named Robinson, cruelly beaten, his head cut open, and he was picked up bleeding and faint, a spectacle of ruin. His wounds, though not mortal, had destroyed his reason and left him but the wreck of what he once had been. The great man was no longer feared by his enemies—the enemies of liberty—but lived a melancholy monument to his friends for several years. He was struck by lightning while standing at the door of a house in Andover, Mass.,

May 23, 1783, and instantly killed, a form of death which he had frequently prayed for.

Unfortunately his speeches were not recorded, his papers have all perished, and he having been cut off before the Revolution actually commenced, his name is connected with none of the great public documents that are familiar to our nation. He published a number of pamphlets on political and literary subjects, for besides his legal and political knowledge he was a complete master of classical literature.

Tudor, his biographer, has summed up his merits in the following extract:

"In fine, he was a man of powerful genius and ardent temper, with wit and humor that never failed. As an orator, he was bold, argumentative, impetuous and commanding, with an eloquence that made his own excitement irresistibly contagious. As a lawyer, his knowledge and ability placed him at the head of his profession. As a scholar, he was rich in acquisition and governed by a classic taste. As a statesman and civilian he was sound and just in his views. As a patriot, he resisted all allurements that might weaken the cause of that country to which he devoted his life, and for which he sacrificed it. The future historian of the United States, in considering the foundation of American independence, will find that one of the cornerstones must be inscribed with the name of James Otis."

His portrait is in the old State House, Boston. A sketch of his life may be found in "Sparks' American Biography," vol. 2 of second series, and a more elaborate account in "The Life of James Otis." by Wm. Tudor. His widow, who survived him, died Nov. 15, 1789. She was the daughter of a Boston merchant, very beautiful, and possessed of a dowry considered in those times very large. At her death it was divided between her daughters.

Children:

161. i. JAMES, b. 1755; entered the navy as a midshipman, but d. at twenty-one years of age.

162. ii. ELIZABETH, m. Captain Brown, an officer in the English army.

163. iii. MARY, m. Benjamin, son of General Lincoln, of the Revolutionary army.

81. MERCY OTIS, dau. James Otis and Mary Allyne, b. Barnstable, Mass., Sept. 14, 1728; m. 1754, her cousin James Warren (No. 72) b. Plymouth, Mass., 1726, son James Warren and Penelope Winslow.

They were very prominent in the history of the times. In 1757 he was appointed High Sheriff, a position which he held until the Revolution. In 1773 he proposed the establishment of committees of correspondence, and after the death of General Joseph Warren at the battle of Bunker Hill, he was appointed President of the Provincial Congress. In 1775, when the army was in Cambridge, Mass., he was made Paymaster-General, and afterwards Major-General of the militia. After the adoption of the consitution of his State, he was for two years Speaker of the House of Representatives and was offered the position of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington, which he declined.

Mrs. Mercy Warren is best known as the historian of the Revolution. She had an active and powerful mind and took a part in politics, holding correspondence with some of the active statesmen of the times. Her brother, James, being for many years the chief leader and adviser in all the councils of the opposition, and her husband being earnestly engaged in the same cause, she could not fail to become acquainted with the principles and occurrences of the period, in which her disposition and training led her to be deeply interested. She wrote, during the war, several satirical poetical pieces which are full of patriotic feeling and heroic sentiments. Her history of the Revolutionary War is an excellent work of its kind, and was published in three volumes (8 vo.) in 1805. It shows great research and sound judgment, and her descriptions of the various battles have been highly esteemed. She held a free pen and was perhaps too suspicious of aristocratic feelings, which caused a sharp correspondence between her and John Adams, whose portrait she had drawn. This correspondence has recently been published by the Massachusetts Historical Society. The matter was amicably settled and notes of courtesy passed.

Her writings show great ability and her poetry has been much admired. The house in which she wrote is still standing in Plymouth, at the corner of North and Main streets, and is known as the "Warren House." She died there in the Autumn of 1814, aged eighty-six.

General Warren died in 1808, also at Plymouth, and both are buried in the family plot on Burial Hill.

Her birth is given by the family as January 2, 1732, but the date given above, as well as that of her parents' marriage, is taken from Saybrook records, and more probably is correct. The difference between old style and new style would account for the date of the month, but the year on the record is almost positively correct. The baptisms of the children are

Samuel Doty was born in that part of Saybrook now known as Deep River and probably lived, after his father's death, with his mother till his marriage to his cousin in 1758. He was a carpenter and millwright by trade, and after his marriage continued to reside at Deep River, probably near his mother's farm. At the breaking out of hostilities in the Revolutionary War he at once enlisted in the Continental army, as did also his brother John, and his brother-in-law, Elijah Ward, and later, several of his sons. Tradition states that he served throughout the war faithfully and with credit.

The record shows that he enlisted May 8, 1775, as a sergeant in the company of Captain John Ely, of Saybrook, of Colonel Samuel Holden Parson's regiment—the Sixth Regiment Connecticut Continental Infantry—and served at the siege of Boston, and until honorably discharged by expiration of enlistment, Dec. 18, 1775. He enlisted again as a private, June 15, 1776, for one year in Captain Lathrop Allen's company of Colonel Samuel Elmore's regiment — Connecticut Continental Infantry — and marched with it in July, 1776, and joined the Northern army, and on Aug. 25, 1776, marched into Tryon County, N. Y., and was stationed at Fort Dayton, German Flats, until discharged by expiration of enlistment. In 1780 he was ensign in the Seventh Regiment Connecticut militia, under Colonel William Worthington, of Saybrook, and was detached April, 1780, and appointed ensign of Captain Jacob Whitmore's company, of Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding Bezaliel Beebe's regiment, Connecticut State detached militia and was in United States service until Oct. 17, 1780. He probably served to the close of the war, 1783, as ensign of Captain James Smith's company, in Colonel M. Mead's regiment Connecticut militia.

At the conclusion of the war he returned to Deep River, but his mother died soon after and her estate having become much impaired during the absence of her sons at the war, he decided, about 1786, to remove to Stephentown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., where several of his sons and other relatives had already preceded him. Here he followed his trade for a time, and also had charge of a grist mill. He also lived at Nassau and at Brainard, in the same county, but later removed to Albany County, N. Y., where he resided at Westerlo, and probably also at Berne. In 1810 he was residing with his son, Ethan, at Rensselaerville, Albany County, N. Y., as appears by a power-of-attorney, filed at Saybrook, authorizing his son to collect all unsettled claims there. After this they resided with their son, Ethan, and both died quite aged, in Albany County, N. Y., the exact date and place not being determined.

Captain Samuel Doty, as well as all of his sons, was of tall stature and powerful frame. He was a good workman, and a man of excellent character, a kind neighbor and a loved parent. Mrs. Mercy Doty was an exceedingly active and energetic woman, of great intelligence, probity and strength of character; a worthy wife and a devoted mother.

Children:

181. i. SAMUEL, b. Saybrook, Ct., prob. 1759. He was a Revolutionary soldier. After the war removed to Stephentown, N. Y., where he m. and d. 1793, leaving no issue. The record shows that he enlisted Jan. 27, 1777, "for the war," in Captain William Richard's company of First Regiment Connecticut Continental Infantry, under Colonel Jedediah Huntington, and was appointed corporal Sept. 1, 1780. He served at battles of Germantown, Valley Forge and Monmouth, and continuously with the army of General Washington until 1781, and then with General Lafayette at the battle of Green Spring, Va., and at the Siege of Yorktown. In Nov., 1781, he was returned to the Highlands of the Hudson and honorably discharged Nov. 3, 1783. He became a pensioner, giving his residence as New York State.

William Doty was a quartermaster in the Revolutionary army and served throughout the war, at the conclusion of which he returned to Saybrook and married as above. The records at Deep River, Ct., contain this item: "William Doty and wife, Ruth, were received into the Covenant, Aug. 17, 1783, and the same day their daughter Sally was baptised." Soon after this they removed to Stephentown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., and settled upon a farm in that part of the town known as West Stephentown. Some years later his father, Edward Doty, removed there and lived with them.

William Doty was a man of ability and became a substantial farmer. He was a devote and consistent church member, and was known throughout the town as Deacon William Doty, to distinguish him from his relative, Captain William Doty of the same town.

Mrs. Doty died at Stephentown, N. Y., April 26, 1831. He removed about 1835 to Rome, N. Y., where his son Edward had preceded him, and died at Blossvale, N. Y., August 22, 1839, at the age of eighty-five years.

The following "In Memoriam" is taken from the Windham, N. Y. Journal of March 27, 1879:

"On Thursday of last week Captain William Doty, one of our oldest inhabitants, died at the residence of his son in this village at the advanced age of nearly eighty-eight years.

"The following incidents of his life have been furnished us and we have no doubt they will be of interest to our readers, many of whom have enjoyed a long acquaintance with the deceased.

"He was born May 13, 1791, in the second year of Washington's Administration, at the old Doty homestead in Saybrook, Ct. He was the youngest of a large family of children, and in the year 1798, at the early age of seven, he came with his father to Durham, N. Y. At that time the country was unsettled and in many places a dense wilderness through which they cut their way in their journey to the place which had been selected for a future home.

"A log house and a log barn were soon erected and they commenced life as pioneers of a new country. The site of these log buildings is the present residence of Mr. Cunningham, at West Durham. Here he resided with his father until he arrived at the age of fifteen, when his time was given him, and in the course of a year or two he returned to Essex, C.., where he learned the blacksmith trade with his uncle, Mr. Pratt, and commenced the study of vocal music with a Mr. Gilman. At the age of twenty-one he came back to Durham and married Julia, daughter of Captain John Newell. In December, 1828, at the solicitation of Henry Osborn and Orrin Robinson, who were appointed a committee for that purpose by the people of this village, he sett ed here, where he conducted the business of blacksmithing for many years. At the same tlme he continued teaching and leading sacred music, to which a large portion of his time was given from the year 1809 to 1854.

"This work was not confined to Windham, but his services as a singing teacher were sought and obtained by the people of the whole surrounding ountry. He taught at nearly all the towns of Greene, Schoharie and Albany Counties with great success and popularity.

"After he came here he worshipped at the old church, two and a half miles west of this village, until the new church was built at the village in 1834, he being one of the fifty-four who separated from the old chuch for the purpose of forming the new. He lead the music at the dedication of the new church and continued to led the choir for a large number of years. He also led the music at the dedication of the Methodist church in this village.

"His wife died in the winter of 1852, and in the fall of 1854 he married Mrs. Catharine Post Stannard, who is still living with her own children at Westbrook, Ct., at about the age of eighty-seven.

"In the year 1823 he was commissioned by Governor Yates as an ensign in the Forty-ninth Regiment of State Infantry, serving as such until the following year, when he received a commission from the same source, as lieutenant, and in 1825 he was promoted to the captaincy in the same regiment, receiving his commission from De Witt Clinton, who was then Governor of the State. In this capacity he served for a number of years. This regiment was then commanded by Colonel Platt Adams, who is now over ninety, and still living, as we are informed, in New York City, in the possession of all his faculties. Captain Doty's last services as a music teacher, as our readers will well remember, were the conducting of an old folks' concert in this village, and at Durham, about eleven years ago, when he was near seventy-seven years of age.

"His life was a complete and a successful one, and his feeble and familiar form will be missed for a long time by our people. His funeral was attended at the Presbyterian church in this village on Sunday last, the pastor, Rev. Mr. McCarthy officiating. In the course of his remarks he said:

"'It is seldom we are called to lay out of sight one so venerable in years and whose presence on earth had been such a blessing to the community. Like a true patriarch, he died in the arms of his children and is laid by them to rest with his kindred. "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in, in his season."

"'Soon after his connection with this church, he was ordained to the office of ruling elder, in which he was an example to the flock. Though a man of great natural modesty, he was a leader in every laudable enterprise in his community. As a music teacher he had few, if any, equals in all this region of country. Always affable and kind, he possessed the rare faculty of eliciting from his pupils both reverence and love, and many who were trained by him will receive the sad tidings of the death of their singing teacher with unaffected grief.

His integrity, energy and prudence, his interest in the welfare of society, combined to make him one of the most valued citizens of his county. Whether we view him as a neighbor, as a friend, as a Christian, or as an officer in the Church of Christ, he was a model.

"' One of our venerable townsmen remarked to me the other evening: "There is not a man that can say aught against Captain Doty." Without an enemy in the world, yet he was a man of strong character and decided views.

"'Few men leave behind them such a blameless record, and it takes a long lifetime to build up such a character. He has left to you the rich heritage of a good name, "which is above all price."

"Rev. O. B. Hitchcock, being present, said of the early history of the church building in which the services were held:

"'At the opposite end of the church, "over against" the pulpit, the central figure in the singers' gallery, was a man, like his associates, of Puritan origin, like them in many respects, in others unlike them all. The work to which he was divinely called, the office of praise to which the Master summoned him, required this—required that there should be in his constitution an element of almost feminine delicacy and sensibility to fit him for his work. Only so could he have been the leader that he was in the service of song. A certain grave humility, a certain reverential and subdued manner, a calm, deliberate expression, gave to that service its appropriate chararcter. His leadership could scarcely have been more impersonal if he had been a disembodied spirit. It had never happened to me to hear just such another voice as Captain Doty's when at its best. It fitted so perfectly the text of the hymn, so perfectly adapting itself to time and place. It was a haunting voice, like the chiming of the bells of Shandon, which followed the wanderer across land and sea. Those years of constant service were not to him, or to others, without a large reward. The peculiar gift entrusted to his keeping was full well employed. How many weary, care-laden souls has it cheered and comforted, and in his turn he received a blessing to himself. The sermon might be unedifying, his song of praise was not. The sermon might bring no comfort, the voice of praise brought healing on its wings.

"'The congregation, as he had known it, was all but gone, his brethern in the church were mostly in their graves, and in his own home, where his earthly life was centered, he had suffered much from death and loss. He felt the loneliness of life that outlives its fellows.

"'His had become a pathetic figure upon the street. Later bereavements finished the work, completed the discipline of his life. The Master's voice said, "It is enough." His life went to its setting as sets the morning star, that goes not down behind the darkened west, but melts away into the light of heaven. Even while we speak these words as our farewell,

"Servant of God, well done Rest from they loved employ," his ear has caught the music of the skies, the singer has resumed his song.'

"Before the remains were taken from the church, the Rev. D'Orville Doty, pastor of Christ's Church, Rochester, N. Y., son of the deceased, impressively recited the 'committal service.'"

Mrs. Doty's parents removed from Dutchess County, N. Y., to Coeymans, Albany County, N. Y., while that region was still almost a wilderness. Her father was uncle of Daniel D. Tompkins, who was later Governor of the State of New York and Vice-President of the United States. The Tompkins family are said to have descended from John Tompkins, who came from the north of Ireland to the Plymouth Colony in its early settlement. The "Church" family also came from the Plymouth Colony to Dutchess County, N. Y. Mrs. Doty was a very intelligent and active woman, devoted to her husband and children.

Mr. Doty's father had already engaged in the Revolutionary War before the birth of his son, who was named after the patriot who had but just made one of the earliest and most brilliant successes of the war by the capture of the fortress at Ticonderoga with its garrison, and whose fame was already dear to all Connecticut patriots.

Mr. Doty was bred a carpenter by trade, and removed with his parents, at the close of the war, at first to Stephentown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., and later to Albany County. In 1810, he was living at Rensselaerville, Albany County, N. Y., and removed from there to Nassau and again to Brainard, both in Rensselaer County. Later he engaged in the hotel business, and in 1821 kept a tavern well-known as the "Checkered Shed," on the Schenectady turnpike, two miles from Albany, and a few years later, in 1827, he kept a tavern about four miles from the city on the same road. He was an intelligent man, fairly educated for his time, but not successful in financial or business pursuits. About 1840 he removed to New York City and afterward resided with his son, and died at Brooklyn, N. Y., April 4, 1861. His widow died two months later, June 19, 1861.

An obituary notice published at the time of his death gives the following items: "Mr. Edward Doty departed this life at his residence in the town of Rome, Onedia County, N. Y., May 9th, 1871, aged seventy-four years and two months. He had been a great sufferer in body for a long time. For the past two years he was confined to the house, seeking some position in which he might rest, but without success. He was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., and lived there for over forty years, and moved from there to the valley of Fish Creek, in the town of Rome, where he died. He was a man who read and thought much. Even within the past year we have found it edifying and instructive to converse with him. He was eminently a pious man, a great lover of liberty and equal rights for the whole race of man. He gave one son to the cause of liberty in the late conflict—the Rebellion. Formerly a member of the Presbyterian Church, latterly his church relation was with the Wesleyans. He served this church as a class leader for a number of years. He leaves a wife and one daughter and many friends who feel that they have lost much in his departure, but we believe that it is a gain to him. May his mantle fall upon the son-in-law who will still keeps guard over the household bereft."

The following extract is taken from the Attica, N. Y., "News" of March 19, 1885:

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

"On Monday, March 16, 1885, there passed away from among us one who, by reason of long residence, wide acquaintance, and honorable character, deserves more than passing notice.

"James S. Tolles was born in Orwell, Vt., September 19, 1800. He was the eldest son of John Tolles, who was the first settler in the town of Bennington, having moved into that town in February, 1803, bringing with him his family, consisting of his wife and two children, the youngest, James S., then three years old. From that time till the day of his death he continued to reside in close proximity to the spot upon which was built the little log cabin which was the home of his childhood. Without the advantages of schooling in youth, we find him a school teacher while yet a young man, having acquired, under circumstances most discouraging, an education far in advance of his day. Possessing more than ordinary ability, nothing but the loss of hearing, which calamity came upon him while yet a young man, prevented him from being called to positions of honor and trust. He was a man of clear convictions and sterling integrity, and his counsel and advice was often sought after by neighbors and friends.

"He possessed a warm and sympathizing heart, ready to respond liberally to any call made upon him. Mr. Tolles first married, April 8, 1824, Nancy Harriet Doty, sister of Kirtland Doty, lately deceased, and Leonidas Doty, Esq., of Buffalo, by whom he had nine children. She died November 15, 1844. In 1846 he married Almeda L. Hamilton, who died in 1853. They had one son who died in February of the same year. He was again married to Mrs. Susan Brower in December, 1854, who survives him. There was one child born to them, who died June 13, 1862. Of eleven children born to him, eight died in childhood. One son, Ralph N., was killed in the War of the Rebellion, and his eldest son, George H. Tolles of Buffalo, N. Y., died a few years ago, leaving a son, Frank J. Tolles, grandson of the subject of this sketch. Only one child survives him, Mrs. Kate T. Norton, wife of A. L. Norton, now of Bennington.

"Although called upon in the mysterious ways of Providence thus to follow a large family to the grave, and to often pass under the rod of affliction, he was never known to repine nor to doubt the goodness and love of his Heavenly Father. For more than half a century he was a member of the Presbyterian Church of this place, from which he was borne to burial in Forest Hill Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. Tenderly and lovingly the aged patriarch was laid away to rest, in the confident and assured hope of a blessed resurrection. Thus another link which binds the present generation with the past is sundered."

See Morse Genealogy, "Memorial of the Morses" by Rev. Abner Morse, A. M., Boston, 1850.

Leonidas Doty was born July 1st, 1812, on a small farm owned by his father, and situated about two miles west of the village of Prink (now Durham), Greene County, N. Y. Here he lived with his parents until he was nine years, when his father sold the little farm and moved to what was called the Holland Purchase, two miles west of the village of Attica in Genesee County, N. Y. Mr. Doty's memory of that "moving" is very vivid, and the story is interesting enough to be inserted here.

No Pullman palace car attached to a sixty-miles-an-hour express train took them, it was simply one large lumber wagon, filled with household goods and a few farming implements of the most primitive pattern, and a one horse wagon, in which were bestowed the mother and children, both wagons covered with white canvas, the first drawn by two yokes of oxen headed by one of their horses, while the other horse was duly harnessed and attached to the family wagon. These made up the little procession which was soon to start for the far off, the "Great West."

Although comparatively few years had been passed on that little place in the Catskill Mountains, still, when the time came for them to leave, the last meal was eaten with a peculiar sensation of sadness, and the eyes of the older ones were seen to be swimming in tears as the choking word of command came from the father to "go!" The first few hours were passed in silence. The older brother, Kirtland, a manly boy of sixteen years, trudged on before driving the oxen headed by the horse, while the father followed closely in the rear, having an eye out to the welfare of the train.

Our little "Leon," at that age, was a keen observer of everything which took place. He remembers seeing the dear old mountains slowly and gradually fade away in the east, as they pursued their toilsome journey to the unknown "West," and when they came in sight of Skaneateles Lake, the first great body of water his eyes had ever rested upon, surprise took entire possession of the lad, who had never before looked upon anything larger than the running brook which merrily leaped over the rocks and down the mountain side. But Cayuga Lake presented to him another wonder, and this was a bridge one mile long, which spanned the outlet, and as they rolled over this astonishing piece of engineering the journey was shortened to the older ones by listening to the exclamations of the younger. The questions of the boy were listened to with patience, and by the time the bridge was passed there was added to the youth's mind a large portion of valuable information. Uneventful was the journey until they had passed Batavia, when all at once they found themselves "stuck in the mud," but they were released from their annoying condition by the friendly services of some neighboring farmers, who brought several yokes of oxen to their help. Finally, after a wearisome journey of thirty days, they arrived at their newly found home. A log house with a mock hospitality received the family under its shelter. A "dutch back" furnished a large fireplace, while a few long and uneven sticks, thickly plastered with mud, made up the rude chimney. A door at either end of this cabin had been used by the family who had previously lived there for dragging to its place the great back log, so necessary for keeping the fire, in those days almost destitute of lucifer matches. The house was full of wide cracks between the logs, which the boys filled up with mud. This, together with a bright fire on the hearth, gave comfort and the best of ventilation. This log house was their home for a year, at the expiration of which time a very good frame house had been erected, the comfort of the family being thereby greatly increased.

Soon after the household had arrived at their home the father bought a pig, and, as he supposed, had him safely housed in a stout pen, but the very first night the family were awakened by a great noise and a vociferous squealing. The father and elder son rose hurriedly to investigate the situation and to their amazement found that the pig had disappeared. Following the cries of the poor piggy they soon discovered him in the clutches of a bear. The enemy was put to flight, and the pig restored to his pen.

The new farm consisted of a very few acres only partly "cleared," but during the first year they had twenty acres ready for seed. They were, however, obliged to go twenty-five miles for the seed wheat, and then pay $3.00 per bushel for it. It was sown in the Autum, and carefully watched through the long and cold winter; the crop proved to be a good one; they cut it with sickles and soon had it ready for the market, but, to their great disappointment, it brought only thirty-one cents per bushel, and that, too, in "barter." At this time one bushel of wheat would buy one pound of tobacco.

For eight years the market was low and the family had a struggle to live. In the midst of it all the death of the wife and mother, who was the mainstay of the family, brought great grief upon them. After this trial they managed as best they could to carry on the household until the father married again.

The new mother proved to be an excellent woman and fulfilled her arduous duties to the admiration and comfort of them all. It must be remembered that at this time they spun and wove the cloth for their garments, cut and made them after their own "fashion plates," and their shoes were also the work of their own hands. The educational advantages of the country at that day were rather primitive and hence limited, but the children were all blessed with what was called a "good common school education."

When the youth reached his twentieth year, the farm being small and the father able to make simply his living, the boy determined that, with his father's consent, he would go away from home and endeavor to make his own living. He therefore went to Attica and engaged to work for the owner of the mills at $12.50 per month with board. The young man, with that spirit of fairness and justice which has characterized his whole carreer bargained to give his father $60 for his time until he should become of age. He remained at this post of labor more than two years. He then rented a farm adjoining his father's and worked that one year. At the end of this time, the spring of 1835, he found himself without a penny of debt and the happy possessor of $500.

A trip to Michigan convinced him that there was no money in buying a farm which was nothing but a forest, so he returned to Attica, and without any knowledge of the business bought out a small grocery store and swung out his sign. His business grew to such an extent, and was so profitable, that he remained there twenty years.

At the end of this time, 1856, he began the banking business in Attica. Dean Richmond, a man of wealth and notoriety, was associated with Mr. Doty, and the capital of the bank was $50,000. In 1860 Mr. Doty bought out Mr. Richmond, and moved the bank to Batavia. This proved to be a very wise thing, for it was now the beginning of the War of the Rebellion, and money being in great demand his discounts were largely multiplied, and his success was somewhat phenomenal.

The bank was owned by Mr. Doty, who associated with him Mr. John Ward. At one time he also owned a one-half interest in the First National Bank at that place, but in 1880 he sold his interest at a premium of fifty-four per cent. As a general thing Mr. Doty always remained at home and was absorbingly devoted to his business. The only vacations he ever took were an extended trip in Europe, taking with him his family, and another through the West and South of our own country. The impression which these two jurneys made upon him was to make him all the more proud of his own native land.

In the course of his long life he made an ample fortune, and to his praise it can be said, he did not keep it all. He bestowed many and valuable gifts of money upon his own family and the families of his brothers and sisters, in all amounting to over a quarter million of dollars. At the birth of every grandchild he made a present of a thousand dollars, which he invested in mortgages and kept the accrued interest well invested. He was accustomed to say, he did this to show them what $1,000 will earn in twenty-one years if "kept without spending."

In 1876, Mr. Doty bought an elegant residence on Delaware avenue, in Buffalo, where he thereafter resided. He was an active vestryman in Trinity Church and a generous supporter of the services. Though he lived to be over seventy-five years of age he was an active and energetic business man, and in his palatial residence enjoyed the abundant wealth which was the honest fruit of a busy, self-sacrificing, economical and useful life. He died at Buffalo, N. Y., April 21, 1888.

The following obituary notice, published at the time of his death, gives some account of his character and life :

"The death of Deacon C. C. Day, of Avon, Ct., the father of Mrs. Dr. L. Darling, Jr., of this place, was terribly startling and heartrending to his own immediate family, and to the community in which he had so long lived and labored. He was deacon of the Congregational Church, and for thirty years had been the strong arm upon which that society rested, and they feel keenly and sensibly the loss.

"Mr. Day was a pure, Christian gentleman, a kind neighbor, and the sorrow evinced by all classes as they stood around his grave was touching to those who witnessed these sad and mournful rites. His death was instantaneous, having been paralyzed by being in the circuit of three separate divisions of the tremendous bolt that struck the lightning rod, and when it reached the point where the insulator was not intact it left the rod and went into the building in three separate places, but the fluid seemed to concentrate in the well room and porch on the back of the house.

"He was on the porch and entering the well room where he was overpowered by this subtle and mysterious fluid. He met his death instantaneously and without pain.

"And this translation to the arms of the Saviour he loved and devoutly served for many years was in keeping with his Christian life.

"Mr. Day was a man of wealth and influence, and he used both in the upbuilding of the Church and the cause of Christ, that to him seemed the only great cause worth laboring for. He was as strict in all matters of business as in his everyday life, and he died with his business all closed up. Spiritually he was ready at any moment for any cross he might be called upon to bear, and was prepared to go as his Lord and Master might direct. In temporal matters his business was all arranged and was entirely free from anything that would require litigation.

"He made his will and arranged his business so that no matter how quickly he passed away he was prepared.

"Mr. Day left an only daughter, the wife of Dr. Lewis Darling of this place. He had two sons, Carlos E. and William D. Day, now in business in Brooklyn, N. Y.

"These, with the widowed wife, constitute the members of the bereaved family, and to them he left his estate by will, to be equally divided among them."

James Jewell and Mary Clark. He was a practicing physician at Catskill, Greene Co., N. Y., and d. there May 15, 1884. She d. Moran, Kan., Dec. 22, 1884.

The following facts are taken from a memorial notice published at his death:

"Dr. James Jewell, who died Thursday morning, May 15, 1884, at the residence of his son-in-law H. L. Bassett, Catskill, N. Y., was born in West Durham, December 6, 1818. His father was the Rev. James Jewell, pastor of the Congregational Church of West Durham. Dr. Jewell received an academic education at Jefferson Academy. He studied medicine with Dr. King of Cairo, N. Y., and attended lectures at Albany, N. Y., and at Castleton, Vt., at which latter college he graduated in 1844. The son of a country clergyman, it is needless to say that he made his way to an education along the difficult path of self-support.

"Working on a farm till he attained his majority, he afterward taught school to maintain himself until he should be qualified to enter his chosen profession.

"He was married July 25, 1844, to Almira, eldest daughter of Deacon Erastus Day of Conesville, and began the practice of medicine in Plymouth, Chenango County, N. Y., where he remained two years. Thence he removed to Wellsburg, Chemung County, where he practiced his profession fourteen years. In the Spring of 1860 he came to Catskill. Here he spent the last twenty-four years of his life. For about forty-four years he was an active and useful Christian. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church of Wellsburgh, and for several years superintended the Sabbath-school of the Reformed Church in Catskill. A wife, daughter and three sons are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and wise and loving father. During the time passed in Catskill, nearly a quarter of a century, he had, by diligence and skill, acquired quite an extensive practice. He was a close student, never relaxing his studies, no matter how exacting his duties, and the result was shown by the success with which he combatted the various diseases which flesh is heir to.

"As a citizen he took a lively interest in all matters of local improvement, and, in the highest sense, was devoted to the interest of the country. His gospel, that which controlled his life, was the doing of good to others, and this was done in the simplest and most unostentatious manner. To this he added the dignity of Christian manhood and exemplified its rule by living the Christian life. The memory of that consistent life, as well as of his words of counsel and of cheer given to many when most needed, will not soon fade.

"That he was truly a Christian physician was manifested by one touching fact. Among those constituting the congregation at his funeral were many whose circumstances are such that they could be present only by a sacrifice of time which could not fail to be felt.

"Among other duties laid upon him during several years was that of attending examinations at the Free School. In recognition of his faithfulness to this duty the teachers and pupils of the school united in preparing a most beautiful floral tribute.

"Though an invalid for many years he performed all his duties until within three months of his death, and it was sad to see how, one by one, he was compelled to give them up. Late in April he went to Philadelphia, there to consult eminent physicians. But they could give no hope, and after a short time he returned home, only to enter upon his rest.

"The funeral services, held in the Reformed Church, of which he was a member, were conducted by Rufus Clarke, D. D., of Albany, assisted by George A. Howard, D. D., of the Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Edmund Lewis, of the M. E. Church. Dr. Clarke, though a stranger to Dr. Jewell, spoke most kindly and appropriately. Those who assisted him had long been personal friends of the deceased. Many of the friends of the one who had fallen asleep gathered to pay to him the last direct tribute of respect.

"The remains were buried at West Durham on Sabbath afternoon by the side of his parents' bodies, which have rested in that quiet cemetery for about sixty years.

"Resolutions of respect to his memory were adopted by the Medical Society of Greene County, N. Y., at their meeting in Catskill, N. Y., June 10, 1884."

Mrs. Jewell was the worthy daughter of worthy parents and every way fitted to be the wife of such a husband. Her life was quiet and unobtrusive, yet her influence was felt by a large circle of friends and relatives.

Mrs. Doty is a sister of Hon. Lucius Robinson, formerly Comptroller and Governor of New York State.

Mr. Doty, like his father, became a blacksmith, and has carried on a prosperous business at Windham Centre, N. Y., for many years. He is a man of intelligence and influence, greatly respected in that community. Like his father, too, he has devoted much time to the study and practice of church music, and in commemoration of his fifty years of service as member and leader of the choir of the Presbyterian Church of Windham, January 20, 1885, he was presented with a gold watch by the people of the church and village. In the course of an address made at this presentation by Rev. Benjamin Parsons, pastor of the church, he paid the following fitting tribute to Mr. Doty's services and character:

"Let me assure you that our people most profoundly appreciate your long-continued and invariable fidelity in the discharge of your duties as a citizen, and your courtesy, patience, promptness and perseverance as a member of the choir for twenty years as its leader, as well as the countless acts of kindness which constitute the service which for fifty years, and without other remuneration than your own consciousness of well-doing, you have rendered in their behalf. When death has entered any of our dwellings you, whatever and however pressing your employments at the time, have at once dropped them and devoted your time and your musical talents to the work of ministering for the consolation of the bereaved and afflicted. I am glad to bear witness to our high appreciation of your ready co-operation in every good word and work, and your gentleness, patience, promptitude and assiduity, and your kindness in the church and the outside community are among the choicest things which lie treasured up in our memory."

Mr. and Mrs. Doty celebrated their golden wedding in 1892, of which the following pleasant report appeared in the "Journal" of Windham, N. Y., May 5, 1893:

"The fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Doty was celebrated at their house in Windham, on the 28th ult. About thirty guests were present, nearly all relatives of the host and hostess. Their four children, an unbroken circle, with three grandchildren, were all together at the old homestead on the occasion, viz.: Mrs. J. H. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Peck, Messrs. L. R. and W. A. Doty and wives, Masters Lucius and Percival Doty and Miss Alice Doty McKee. Rev. J. H. McKee and son Harry were necessarily absent. There were also present the two sisters and only remaining brother of Mr. Doty, Mrs. J. N. D. Harvey, of Brooklyn, Mrs. G. W. Potter and husband, and Rev. Wm. D'Orville Doty, D. D., Rector of Christ Church, Rochester, with his daughter Marion. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stedman, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Newell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bagley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brockett and daughter Edna, and Miss Katharine Edwards, of Catskill. The Rev. C. C. Thorne, the honored pastor of Mr. and Mrs.

Doty, was present, and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion by well-chosen remarks following the collation, which was spread at the good old-fashioned hour of eight, to imitate the proceedings at the wedding feast fifty years ago. Mr. Thorne called the attention of those present to the fact that it was during the administration of William Henry Harrison that this couple were married, and that the grandson, Benjamin Harrison, was now occupying the Presidential chair. His remarks were followed by the reading of a poem by Mrs. C. C. Peck.

"Letters of regret and congratulation were read by Hon. C. C. Peck; one from Miss Kitty Van Dyck, daughter of the clergyman who officiated at the marriage, one from Burrit S. Stone, Esq., of Brooklyn, and one from Miss Nellie Robinson, daughter of the late Governor Lucius Robinson. The serious illness of his wife detained Colonel D. C. Robinson and his sister at home.

"Rev. William D'Orville Doty then spoke of the marriage of his brother, of the guests present on that occasion and their appearance in his boyish eyes as, seated on a little stool in the corner, he reviewed them. He spoke warmly and affectionately of Captain Eli P. Robinson and wife, father and mother of the bride, and Captain William Doty and wife, the parents of the groom. At the close of his remarks he pronounced the nuptial benediction over the long-wedded pair.

"Many valuable gifts were presented and sent by absent friends with expressions of warm and kindly feeling. Roses and carnations were sent from a distance, together with a spray of orange blossoms for the bride of fifty years.

"After a pleasant evening of social intercourse the company sang to the tune of Gratitude, 'My God, how endless is Thy love,' etc. Rev. Mr. Doty then read appropriate passages of scripture, and Rev. Mr. Thorne offered prayer, after which all joined in the Doxology, 'Praise God,' etc."

TO FATHER AND MOTHER.

Hark, the joyous peal of bells;
On the air it falls and swells,
At the closing of the day—
The golden bells of Memory.
Half a century ago,
Pealed out the rhythmic flow
Of the merry wedding bells;
And the wizard, Memory, holds
Back the curtain, and unfolds
Pictures to our backward view
Of eighteen hundred forty-two.
The square front room of the Captain's home,
Aglow with candlelight;
By twilight's gloom the guests have come—
The scene is gay and bright.
The bride, O, she was fair to see
In her silken robe of gray
With a satin stripe, and coat sleeves tight—
Too fair to give away.
O, she was little and sweet of face,
And her dress was trimmed with white blonde lace.

The groom, alack! wore solemn black,
But of manly beauty there was no lack.
Up rose the Reverend Van Dyck—
The world has seldom seen his like;
Briefly but strongly he tied the knot
That never loosened a single jot
Through the ebb and flow of years,
The light of smiles, the fall of tears;
Through worse or better, sickness, health,
Prosperity, or lack of wealth.
As this dear pair draw near old age,
The close of Life's short pilgrimage,
May golden rays light up the way
That leadeth to the closing day.
May Life's calm evening give them rest,
And children's children call them blest;
And when the allotted years have rolled,
Their glad feet tread the streets of gold.

305. WILLIAM D'ORVILLE DOTY, son William Doty and Julia Newell, b. Windham Centre, Greene Co., N. Y., Dec. 28, 1834; m.

Boston, Mass., June 10, 1869, Sarah Elizabeth Haskell, b. Marblehead, Essex Co., Mass., Sept. 3, 1851, dau. William Thomas Haskell and Sarah Elizabeth Girdler.

Originally intending to follow a business career, his early education was obtained in the schools and academies of the neighborhood. While engaged as a bookkeeper in a commission house in New York City he became personally interested in religion and in the Episcopal Church, and received the rite of confirmation at the hands of the Bishop of New York, Dr. Horatio Potter, in the Church of St. John Baptist, of which the Rev. C. R. Duffie, D. D., was rector. At the instigation of a very dear friend, the Rev. Gordon M. Bradley, then rector of Christ Church, Quincy, Norfolk County, Mass., he determined to enter upon a course of study for the sacred ministry.

In 1859, after due preparation, he entered Kenyon College, Gambier, Knox County, Ohio, where he was graduated B. A. in 1862. In October of the same year he became a candidate for holy orders in the diocese of New York, and was matriculated as a student of the General Theological Seminary. Here he passed the junior year, but in consequence of ill health he accepted a position as lay assistant to the Rev. William Stevens Perry, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Portland, Me.

With Mr. Perry he continued his course of preparation for orders, availing himself of the opportunity of prosecuting his studies in Exegesis and Hebrew with the Rev. Thomas Mather Smith, D. D., for many years professor in the Theological Seminary of Ohio, who was at that time an inmate of the household of Mr. Perry, his son-in-law. While in Portland Mr. Doty received his M. A. from his Alma Mater, and on occasion of a visit to Lennoxville, Canada East, he received the same degree, causa, honoris from Bishops' College, the church university of Lower Canada. Having been transferred from the diocese of New York to that of Massachusetts, Mr. Doty completed his studies for orders under the direction of the Rev. John Singleton Copley Greene, M. A., M. D., rector of Grace Church, Newton, Mass., to whom he rendered assistance in parochial work.

On the 20th of June, 1864, he was admitted to the Holy Order of Deacons by the Rt. Rev. Manton Eastburn, D. D., LL. D., at Grace Church, Newton, Mass., the Rev. William Stevens Perry (afterward Bishop of Iowa) preaching the sermon. He immediately became assistant minister to the Rev. Mr. Greene at Newton, where he remained until Sept. 1, 1864, when he accepted a call to become assistant minister of St. Paul's Church, Boston, the Rev. Dr. William R. Nicholson, rector. While thus engaged opportunity was afforded him to attend the theological lectures of the celebrated Edward A. Park, D. D., LL. D., at the Andover Seminary. On the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul, Jan. 25, 1866, Mr. Doty was admitted to the priesthood by the Bishop of Massachusetts, Dr., Eastburn, his old friend, the Rev. Gordon M. Bradley, preaching the sermon.

On Christmas day, 1867, he assumed the rectorship of a new mission, All Saints', Brooklyn, L. I., to which he had been called. In this field of labor Mr. Doty built a church and gathered a large and attached congregation, and remained at his post, though again and again called to larger and more remunerative positions. Family reasons at length required a removal to a more healthy location, and on Easter day, 1871, Mr. Doty entered upon the rectorship of St. Paul's Church, Waterloo, in the diocese of Central New York. After a ministry of singular success, in which the parish enjoyed unexampled prosperity, a chapel was built, several missionary points were opened, endowments were secured and large classes presented for confirmation.

On the first Sunday in Advent, 1877, Mr. Doty began his work as rector of Christ Church, Rochester, in the diocese of Western New York, in which position he has displayed the same energy, success and devotion which have characterized his previous rectorates. Here he has freed the parish from a burdensome debt, and has attached to himself and to the church a large and constantly increasing congregation. Mr. Doty has been a deputy from the diocese of Western New York to the General Convention in 1880 and 1883 and for five years was the editor of the diocesan newspaper. In June, 1884, he received the degree of doctor in divinity from Griswold College, Davenport, Iowa.

This sketch of the Rev. Dr. Doty's life would be incomplete without the addition of the following well-deserved testimonials, which, though primarily referring to his rectorate at Waterloo, are equally appropriate, as indicating his whole ministry and his standing as a Christian man and minister.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

At a meeting of the rector, warden and vestry of St. Paul's Church, Waterloo, held Nov. 20, 1877, the following communication was received from the rector :

ST. PAUL'S PARISH RECTORY,
WATERLOO, N. Y., Nov. 15, 1877.

To the Wardens and Vestry of St. Paul's Church :

DEAR BRETHREN—It is with intense pain that I hereby offer you my resignation of the rectorship of St. Paul's, Waterloo, to take effect after the services on St. Andrew's day next. In parting from you, my dear brethren, and from the parish you so faithfully serve, I would most gratefully record my thanks for the generous and never-varying kindnesses poured upon me and mine during my happy rectorship of nearly seven years. Never has a pastor been more highly favored than myself, and it is a matter of great satisfaction to me that, in looking over this period, I cannot recall a moment when there has been even so much as a misunderstanding between my beloved people and myself. All has been peace, harmony and love, and I do assure you that nothing but a solemn and imperative sense of duty could ever move me to relinquish my present united and beloved parish.

St. Paul's, Waterloo, will always hold a strong place in my affections, and will ever be connected with the holiest associations of my ministerial life.

May the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost be amongst you and remain with you always.

Sincerely and devotedly yours,

WILLIAM D'ORVILLE DOTY.

After which, on motion of Judge Hadley, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, our rector, the Rev. Wm. D'Orville Doty, has presented his resignation of the rectorship of this parish; therefore Resolved, That we, the wardens and vestry of St. Paul's Church, Waterloo, N. Y., on behalf of the parish, do receive and accept said resignation, not from choice, but as we would any other afflicted chastisement beyond our control, bowing in Christian faith to the Great Head of the Church, "whose ways are not our ways," but who always does right.

Resolved, That while we profoundly regret our loss, we are comforted in knowing that he goes to a thriving, beautiful city, with an appreciative population, where he can have a larger sphere for exerting his active energies, and where he and his beloved family can embrace greater opportunities of social enjoyment and be beloved by more, but not better, than here, trusting that his new wardens and vestry may be as harmonious and happy with their new rector as we have been with our old one, and that when duty shall call him elsewhere his departure will be as deeply and universally regretted there as it now is here.

Resolved, That we congratulate the parish of Christ Church, Rochester, in securing the services of one so discreet, so learned, so devoted to his high calling, and so accomplished in all the duties and relations of his profession, in the church and elsewhere, one always a christian gentlemen, and ever ready to meet his wardens and vestry more than half way in every good work.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on our records, and a certified copy be delivered to Mr. Doty.

[Extract from Waterloo Observer, Nov. 21, 1877.]

The Rev. W. D'Orville Doty has accepted a call to Christ Church, Rochester, and assumes the duties of his new position on Sunday, the 2nd of December next.

Upon the high festival of Easter, now nearly seven years ago, Mr. Doty became the rector of St. Paul's Church, Waterloo, entering upon his duties, as successor to one, who, dearly beloved by his people, left a parish that felt a sense of great loss in his departure. In the vigor of early manhood, earnest, enthusiastic, with heart and mind fully consecrated to his great work, the new rector began his labors, and in a space of time incredibly brief, won for himself the highest esteem and ardent affection of his flock. The love so soon and happily gained time has only served to make more deep and lasting. Courteous and charitable, with a spirit quick to comprehend the public weal and ever ready to give his time and talents generously towards its promotion, his influence spread far beyond the limits of his own congregation, and he obtained, and has ever preserved, the thorough respect and regard of the entire community, and now that, called by an imperative sense of duty to another sphere of labor and usefulness, he is about to sever the connection so long and happily existing as rector between him and his parish, and, as a citizen, between him and the community in which he is so greatly esteemed, we cannot forbear to extend to him our heartfelt wishes for his future well being, and the assurance of the universal regret felt at his departure.

[From The Church Press, May 21, 1887.]

On the first Sunday in Advent, 1877, the Rev. W. Doty commenced his labors as the rector of Christ Church, Rochester, in the diocese of Western New York. Several times he has been a delegate of this diocese to the general convention, and for five years was the editor of the diocesan church paper. In June, 1884, he received the degree of doctor in divinity from Griswold College, Ohio. Dr. Doty posseses great energy of character, unusual executive ability and practical common sense, and wherever he has labored church growth has followed his rise and earnest ministrations. His ability as an efficient rector, his earnest and untiring labors, his benevolent disposition and sincerity of manner, have caused him to be much beloved by the parishes to whom he has ministered.

The Rev. Dr. Doty's interest for the temporal and spiritual welfare of the young has induced many to seek his counsel and to follow his advice, and for his paternal interest in their welfare they ardently love him. No young clergyman who becomes his assistant can fail to be greatly benefitted by learning from his example how to wisely perform parochial duties and prevent parish difficulties; for when called to be the rector of a parish he will know how to avoid a course of parochial administration that would hinder his usefulness, however brilliant as a preacher, if destitute of tact or of common sense. Dr. Doty is a sound churchman, and without deviating from "the old paths" respecting ceremonial, adopts what will add to the solemnity and impressiveness of public worship, and deepen devotion in the worshippers in Jehovah's Holy Temple. His surpliced choir is a model of the demeanor that should characterize those who lead the praise offered to the Triune God during the other services of public worship. Dr. Doty is a good reader and an impressive preacher. He does not "whine the prayers," nor vocally obscure the lessons, nor preach as if his audience were up in the roof of the church, nor down in its basement; but by a natural common-sense tone he causes his hearers to realize that he is preaching directly to those before him. The attendance at the Lenten services were larger than ever before, and the congregations have become so large that the vestry contemplate the enlargement of the present edifice, or the erection of a new church.

Alanson Doty is described to have been, like all his brothers, of tall stature and heavy frame. He was a farmer and removed from Niagara County, N. Y., about 1832, to Michigan, where he afterward resided, in Washtenaw County, at first in the town of Pittsfield, later in Ann Arbor, and then in Northfield, where he died. He was of genial disposition and in comfortable circumstances, leading a pure and upright life, and greatly respected for his many amiable qualities.

An obituary notice published at the time of his death says: "Alanson Doty died at the residence of his son, in Northfield, January 23d, 1866, aged sixty-five years and eight months. Mr. Doty was one of the early settlers of Michigan, and was widely and well known. He came to this State in the fall of 1832, and, with the exception of a few of his later years, has resided here. His character as a citizen, neighbor, friend, and, above all, as a Christian, needs no eulogy. In this community he has been well known for years; in business relations as an honorable and consistent gentleman, one whose dealings with his fellow-men were ever conscientious and upright; in his social life as kind, genal and affectionate, respected by his acquaintances, loved by his friends and revered by his family. His illness was typhoid fever, was protracted and full of suffering, yet throughout it all he showed the utmost patience and trust.

"It was reserved for the last months of his life to intensify and fully reveal the strength and steadfastness of his Christian faith. Through much of trial in a long and varied life it had been an anchor and a shield to him, and as the end drew near his suffering was relieved, his pain and weariness soothed by the glorious certainty it gave him of rest and reward in 'that house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens.'"

Seneca Co., N. Y., Nov. 26, 1810, dau. Isaac Kingsbury and Polly Judson. Isaac Kingsbury was born at Canaan, Ct., and was a grandson of Capt. Isaac Lawrence. Mrs. Almira Doty d. Royalton, N. Y., Oct. 16, 1833, leaving no chil. He m., 2d, Nov. 6, 1834, Hannah Lawrence Kingsbury, sister to his first wife, b. Hector, Seneca Co., N. Y., Dec. 7, 1806.

They removed West shortly after their marriage, stopping first in Ohio, but in the latter part of 1835 removed to Washtenaw County, Michigan, at first in the town of Pittsfield, but in 1837 they settled permanently in Ann Arbor, where they subsequently resided. He was a farmer of fair means, of very tall and powerful frame, physically very strong and of uniformly good health, always interested in everything that added to the educational facilities of his town and to its general well being. He lived to see the small village which he chose for his residence grow to be a flourishing town with a university of national repute, with manufactories and other evidences of business thrift.

He was fortunate in having a wife whose intellect was of a high order, and with nature and character rare and beautiful. With her help and co-operation their children received their utmost care and devotion in their younger years, and were well educated and fitted for the struggles of life. Mrs. Hannah Doty died at Ann Arbor, Michigan, September 6, 1882. He died also at Ann Arbor, February 27, 1884, aged over eighty-one years.

The following extracts are from an obituary notice published shortly after his death, and from the pen of one of his talented daughters.

"For nearly half a century he was one of the most familiar figures in the region where he lived. He was a man of genial nature, great kindliness of heart, credulous of good, incredulous of evil, helpful to those in need of help, stable, constant and generous in the character of relative, neighbor and friend.

" In his young manhood he was of such athletic physique that it is said of him, by one who knew him well, that 'nothing but a deer could outrun him.' His strength was spared to him in a remarkable degree, until the death of his wife, which occurred September 6, 1882. Then for the first time his faithful steps began to show signs of failing.

" His spirit was buoyant as his body. He was fond of mirth, full of anecdote, with a wit bright as lightning, yet never used to destroy. He had the happy power of making the simplest duty an attractive thing. He never harmed in thought or deed the humblest of God's creatures.

" He knew nature well, not alone from books, but from his own fine perceptions and habits of thoughtful observation. His house, in which he lived forty-six years — 'Heart's Content'—and which was burned just a year before his death, was a little out of the city, and he traveled many thousands of miles back and forth over the familiar road, year in and out, on his round of daily duties; yet he was wont to say, he never went that routine path without seeing something new and interesting.

" He was an eager reader, and kept, almost to the last, the freshest interest in all the active affairs of the world. His best energies were given to the education of his children, and he spared nothing for their advancement.

" The thought of death was to him by no means unfamilair nor unwelcome. He said, 'to me death is but the opening of a door.' In his last sickness there was much suffering. But, as with the patience of his entire life, it was all borne with meekness and without complaint.

" His children survive him. Out of affection and reverence for him they could never go far from him nor stay long away without seeing him, and they were all present at his funeral."

DIED.

DOTY—Entered into rest September 6, 1882, at Ann Arbor, Mich., Hannah Lawrence, wife of Samuel R. Doty, and mother of Duane Doty of Pullman, Ill., Helen Doty Compton and Clara Doty Bates of Chicago, Eliza Doty and Charlotte Doty Finley of Ann Arbor. While her life was one of devotion to her family, her hands were never empty nor idle for the needy or unfortunate. Her intellect was of a high order, and her nature and character rare and beautiful. Her children arise up and call her blessed.

Children by second wife:

665. i. DUANE, b. Amherst, Lorraine Co., O., Sept. 13, 1835.

666. ii. HELEN ANN, b. Pittsfield, Co., Mich., July 17, 1836.

667. iii. CLARA, b. Pittsfield, Mich., Dec. 22, 1937; m. Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 2, 1869, Morgan Bates, b. Albany N. Y., May 4, 1841, son Rev. Merritt Bates and Eliza Tomlinson Woodward. They removed first to Detroit, Mich., and later to Chicago, Ill., where they subsequently lived. Mrs. Clara Doty Bates was well known as an authoress and published a number of volumes of poetry and of works adapted to the instruction and entertainment of the young. Many of these works were illustrated, the designs being furnished by her sister, Mrs. Finley. Mr. Bates is also a writer for the press and author of several popular dramas. In private life Mrs. Bates was a most lovable woman and companion and endeared herself to a large circle of friends. During the World's Fair at Chicago she had charge of the Children's Building, and made a most amiable and charming hostess there. She d. Chicago, Oct. 14, 1895. The great esteem in which she was held is shown in the extracts here given from the notices of her death which appeared in the leading Chicago newspapers.

[From the Chicago Tribune of Oct. 15, 1895.]

After suffering severe physical pain for five years Mrs. Clara Doty Bates died yesterday morning at the Newberry apartments, No. 323 Dearborn avenue.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock there will be a service of tribute by her friends held at the home of Mrs. John C. Coonley, No. 620 Division street. The Rev. Mr. Mercer of the New Jerusalem Church, Mrs. Wilmarth representing the Fortnightly Club, Mrs. Coonley, Dr. Leila G. Bedell, and others will speak. This will not be a funeral service. It is the wish of Mr. Bates and his friends that the service be as cheerful as possible.

This evening the remains will be taken to Ann Arbor, Mich. The funeral service will be held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Bates' sister, Mrs. Homer P. Finley, and burial will be at Ann Arbor.

Early in life Mrs. Bates showed decided literary tastes of the highest order. When only 10 years of age her writings received approval. She soon developed a marked faculty for writing poetry, prose, and short sketches appealing to juvenile readers. Her work was not wholly confined to writing for children; occasionally she contributed to periodicals read by the learned and cultured classes.

But it was as a writer of stories and sketches to please the litlte ones that Mrs. Bates was best known. She was a frequent contributor to St. Nicholas, The Youth's Companion, and Golden Days, and a regular contributor to Wide Awake. As late as last September The Youth's Companion published a poem of hers. Her literary ability was first recognized by Charles G. Leland while he was editor of Graham's Magazine. Her efforts frequently appeared in the pages of Godey's Lady's Book and Peterson's Magazine. She was a lover of nature and wrote that those who read might profit by it.

The first book published by Mrs. Bates was a work for children, "Blind Jakey." It was a Sunday school book and had a wide sale. "Æsop's Fables in Verse" was her most successful work. "Heart's Content," another of her books, was so called in honor of her childhood home in Ann Arbor, the name of which was "Heart's Content." Her last published volume was a collection of verse, "From Heart's Content."

Mrs. Bates had resided in Chicago for the last ten years. She was an earnest worker in everything pertaining to the elevation and improvement of her sex. She was the first vice president of the Fortnightly Club last year and took an active interest in the work of all women's clubs. She was the hostess at the children's library room in the Woman's Building at the World's Fair. She was at her post every day during the continuance of the Fair, and received mothers and little ones from all parts of the world. Two years previous to the opening of the Fair she worked to gather together a model children's library and succeeded in doing far more than she expected. She installed the library herself, and at her solicitation nearly every publishing house in the world contributed to it. Publishers exhibited for the enlightenment of the children the process of book and magazine making from the time the manuscript was received until the book or periodical was ready for the reader's hands. The Youth's Companion sent for exhibition its original bound file of the first volume of the publication, as well as a bound file of the last volume, for the purpose of showing the wonderful advance in the methods of turning out great newspapers, as well as their improved appearance, when modern appliances are used. She was awarded diplomas and a medal for her services by the Committee of Awards of the World's Fair.

Mrs. Bates presided Children's day during the sessions of the Literary Congress of the World's Fair and devised the work and programme of the day.

Mrs. Bates' name is known and revered in every household in the country where the best character of literature for children is read. It has been said of her that she has touched the hearts of more children than any writer. She was a great lover of everything noble and elevating and beautiful in character and person. To know her was to admire and love her, and in her death the literature of the West, and especially of Chicago, has suffered an irreparable loss.

Before marriage Mrs. Bates was Miss Clara Doty. Twenty-six years ago she married Morgan Bates, and their life together had been a singularly happy one. She leaves no children. For the last few years she had practically been an invalid, but she never ceased indulging in her chosen life work until absolutely compelled to do so a few months ago.

[From the Chicago Times-Herald, Oct. 15, 1895.]

Before women who have never been journalists in the true sense and never will be began the folly of parading their attempts to be, a young woman was doing editorial work in the office of a Detroit newspaper. Her name was Clara Doty. To-day Morgan Bates, blessed in her companionship, mourns a wife.

Several years hence, when archivists in what women did and did not talk about are gathering their facts together, many, when the record shall be published, will find for the first time the name of Clara Doty Bates. Not that the name itself is obscure. There is no hearth to which St. Nicholas and like periodicals go that will not mourn for the author of so much that abides in the memory of childhood, formless but yet substantial, story, sketch, poem, all gentle, sweet, melodious; the little world, its engaging conceits and fair inventions that

* * * softly move along,
A sweet procession, without care or weight
Like disembodied song.

Clara Doty Bates passed from the post of responsible reviewer on a daily newspaper to writing of literature for children, and to the latter she carried the fine equipment of the former. Of sound acquirements, she was sound of conscience; sound of conscience, she knew no compromise with the morbid; and as for the worse than morbid, of that alone she was intolerant. Her love of childhood was her passion, her pain and her ecstacy. Madonna-like in face, beauty permeated all her work, and it was a philosophic development of this passion that led her to undertake an unprecedented task, formation of an ideal library for children. The Children's Building at Jackson Park was her daylight home while it endured. Many of the daintiest features of the programmes there were of her devising. Few ever saw to know who she was; so modest, withal a personality, full, nevertheless, of energy and endowed with rare executive force in a frail body.

With the children's plays, their library and their gymnasium, Clara Doty Bates associated a real school of art. Only an artistic organization like hers could have seen the natural harmonization of play and study with life, health, normal growth along even lines, and it was part of her ambition so to write and so to influence life about her that art, in its highest spirit, should surround childhood, not to weary with abstractions nor vex with paradoxes, but to bless with love of beauty and truth, for that is the supreme blessing of art, though pedants write pyramids to prove it more or less.

The library then gathered together has been kept intact and will be placed in time in the building to be somewhere as a memorial of woman's part in the Columbian Exposition. Years hence, when this shall be, many who are children to-day will pause before a well-beloved name, there to be duly written. Many who never saw the one who carried much into their early lives will say with the poet of Giotto's chapel:

> Here dedicate to art and poetry
> Her simple chapel stands, and painted here
> Upon its walls a pictured life we see,
> Inspired by feeling, earnest and sincere,
> What faith, what simple dignity and grace
> Art since hath lost are in this cloistered place.

THE SINGER.

[Written on the occasion of the funeral of Mrs. Clara Doty Bates at Ann Arbor, Oct. 16, 1895.]

> Passing along the pleasant grove my listening spirit heard
> A stream of music coming from some dear leaf-hidden bird;
> I know it was a song of love, a strain of heavenly bliss,
> Caught from the purer world above and scattered over this;
> We cannot see the flinger
> Throwing music to the throng,
> We cannot see the singer,
> But we listen to the song.
> Passing along the path of life I listened to a strain
> A spirit bird was singing which cheered my heart again;
> It called me up toward it from the somber valley's care
> To the calm, serener beauty of the pure, unsullied air;
> We may not see the ringer,
> But the bell brings out the throng;
> We cannot see the singer,
> But we listen to the song.
> I never saw this singer, but I listened to her strain;
> I only know she did not give her melody in vain,
> And if there come a silence and we think the singer gone,
> Yet somewhere in God's universe she still keeps singing on;
> So know, O music-bringer,
> That the toiling, traveling throng
> Who cannot see the singer,
> Still keep listening to the song.

Ann Arbor, Mich. REV. J. P. HUTCHINSON.

I cannot better close this notice than with the following most beautiful tribute of Eugene Field, made more affecting by the fact that he himself was lying on a sick bed and survived her only a few days:

[From the Chicago Record, Saturday, October 12, 1895.]

As we write these lines there lies at the point of death one of the sweetest characters it has ever been our fortune to meet—a gentle, heroic lady whose life has been devoted to deeds of tenderness and sweetness. For many months Clara Doty Bates has suffered with a malady from which recovery is impossible; within the last week eternal release from human suffering has seemed close at hand; perhaps when you read these words the death-angel will have summoned the weary, but patient soul to its last rest. It is with a heart full of sorrow that we speak of the separation that bereaves the world and us of so good and dear a friend.

Clara Doty Bates has so very many friends that one could almost say that she is universally beloved. Who that has read her sweet little tales and poems, full of the optimism of faith, of hope and of charity, has not been attracted to this kindly nature by influence stronger and tenderer than those of admiration? But to have known her face to face, to have known the magic of her gracious personality, to have known the sympathies in which her heart abounded, to have known the works at which her hands were constantly employed, to have seen and felt the purity, the simplicity, the loyalty, the compassion and the valor of this great nature—this was the inestimable fortune of us, too few, who shared her companionship.

One who for many years has shared with us the gracious companionship, says now of Mrs. Bates: "She was always for others; always unselfish, always loving, gentle and devoted. In the heroic endurance of awful pain and the shielding of others from even the sorrow she knew would come from a knowledge of her malady, she has gone on silently, smilingly, cheerfully. Such bravery is but natural in one whose earliest ancestors in this country stepped from the Mayflower, and whose later ancestor was Ethan Allen. She had Puritan blood in direct line on her father's side, while from the mothers came the stately dignity of the Virginia families of Lawrence and Washington. I need not tell of her own sweet nature; we all knew her in the days of active usefulness. The sterner side of her Puritan character was softened by the all-abounding quality of love and the constant exercise of charity. She loved nature. Her rare fancy found delight in simple things and those usually unobserved trifles that lie close to the heart of nature. Broad in her affections, she gathered to her, according to her means, the poor and suffering ones who most need human sympathy. The humble blessed her, and the strongest in earthly possessions yielded unhesitating love."

Mrs. Bates' publications have been, in chronological order, as follows: "Æsop's Fables in Verse," "Heart's Content," a story of child life; "From Heart's Content," a volume of poems. For many years she contributed to juvenile publications; many a young heart (and many an older one, too) will grieve to hear that the gentle singer, Clara Doty Bates, will sing no more in this world of ours.

Mrs. Bates was identified with every manner of good work in this city. We recall particularly the zealous interest she took in the Children's building at he World's Fair; she was, if we mistake not, hostess in that building during the period of the Fair. Mrs. Bates declined the presidency of the Fortnightly Club, but was induced to accept, in spite of failing health, the vice-presidency of that notable organization. It was, however, in the quieter spheres of usefulness that this lady preferred and loved to move; her retiring nature found congeniality in those secret ministrations for which the poor, the sick and the afflicted, whom she succored, now bless her memory.

This is a heavy time with us who know this brave, gentle lady. And yet we know that, could she raise her dear hand now, it would be to brush away our tears, and that could she speak to us again, it would be words of comfort and of cheer—so compassionate, so sweet, so boundless was her love.

John Gardner and Lydia Gardner. He was a farmer at Stephentown, N. Y., and d. there March 6, 1882. His widow d. there.

Though quiet and retiring, she was a woman of marked traits of character, with a heart full of sympathy for the sick and suffering. Her active life was filled with deeds of kindness and love. "To do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God" seemed, in a marked degree, to be the controlling spirit of her life. With the same heroic fortitude with which she had borne many severe trials, she calmly awaited the last summons. A fitting close to a beautiful and unselfish life. She was buried in the family plot in Hancock, where lie five generations of her kindred.

"An honored life, a peaceful end,
And Heaven to crown it all."

An obituary notice published at the time of his death says, "He received the usual district school education, working on the farm at the same time, and after his marriage, resided in that part of Hancock, Berkshire Co., Mass., adjoining the line of Stephentown, N. Y., until about 1860, when they removed just across the line into the latter town.

"He was a man of more than common intelligence, a great reader, and throughout his life took a special interest in all educational matters, promoting, as far as lay in his means, the best interests of the schools of his district, and securing the most advanced course of studies in them. He took an intelligent interest in public affairs, and represented Hancock for one term in the Legislature of Massachusetts.

"He was a great lover of nature, and living among the Berkshire Hills, of whose beauty he never tired, their constantly varying hues under the changing seasons, ever afforded him delight. He was an ardent angler. No trout, in any brook for miles around, but greeted him and jumped for the fly he so deftly threw.

"But his most distinguishing feature was his exceedingly genial and generous disposition, and his happy temperament. His was the mission to carry the sunlight into the dark places, and no house was too humble for his visit. His cheery words greeted alike the widow in her lonely home, the child on the way to school, the farmer in the field, the preacher in the Church, and brightened the pathway for each. No gathering was complete without him. 'His ways were ways of pleasantness and all his paths were peace.'

"He died as calmly and peacefully as he had lived. Sick but a week, conscious from the first that the illness would be fatal, he had only pleasant words for the friends and family who attended on him, and met his death without a tremor. He was buried in the family plot at Hancock, by the side of the dear children who had gone before, and there was no dry eye among the neighbors who filled the Church and listened to the words of consolation from the minister when he said: 'We have all lost a friend.'"

Children:

691. i. AMY, b. Hancock, Mass., April 21, 1838.

692. ii. ALBERT, b. Hancock, Jan. 6, 1841; m. there Jan. 22, 1867, Emily Jane Mason, b. there Feb. 4, 1848, dau. Rufus L. Mason and Jeannette Potter. She died Hancock, Oct. 6, 1867. Captain Albert Doty graduated at the Normal School of Westfield, Mass., in June, 1861. He immediately after, June 18, 1861, enlisted as private in the 34th Regt. New York Volunteers. They were at once ordered to the seat of war, with the Army of the Potomac. He was promoted March 20, 1862, to be 1st Lieut., and Jan. 28, 1863, to Adjutant of his regiment. He served with great gallantry at the battle of Ball's Bluff, and subsequently with the Army of the Potomac. He commanded his company through the seven days fighting before Richmond, Va., and was mustered out with his regiment March 25, 1863. Having never taken a furlough, he now proceeded to his home to visit his parents and take a needed rest. Though a man of great ability and brave almost to rashness, he was singularly modest about his services in the army. After having once risen by his merit alone to the rank of Adjutant, prefering to earn promotion rather than to seek the easier position of an officer, he again enlisted, Jan. 27, 1864, as a private in the 57th Regt. Mass. Vols. He was promoted 1st Lieut. July 28, 1864, and Aug. 18 of the same year was brevetted Captain "for gallant services in the operations on the Weldon Railroad." In the subsequent movements and battles of Grant's Army around Richmond he served with conspicuous bravery and ability, and at the close of the war, again with the rank of Adjutant, was mustered out of service. July 30, 1865. Returning to Hancock, he settled down for a while and married, with the brightest prospects of a happy life, his old playmate and sweetheart. Her early death, a few months later, greatly affected his sensitive nature, and subsequently unsettled his mind. For, though he removed to Chicago, Ill., and applied himself to the study of architecture with much diligence and had reached a point where success in his profession seemed to open up before him, he never recovered from the loss of his wife, and finally, in a fit of aberration, died by his own hand, Sept. 27, 1873, at Springfield, Ill., where he was engaged upon some public works.

He graduated at Williams College in 1837 and began preaching as a Presbyterian minister at Sand Lake, N. Y., in 1850. Subsequently removed to Greenbush, N. Y., where he kept school and preached from 1852 to 1860. He then became principal of the seminary at Oneida, N. Y., but in 1863 returned to Stephentown, where he taught and preached until his death, December 22, 1880. He early manifested a talent for painting, and without any special instruction to that end became a portrait painter. Many of his portraits of distinguished people were painted for Trowbridge's Albany Museum, where they were for a long time on exhibition and formed one of its chief attractions. Munsell, in his "Annals of Albany," says: "Doty's paintings were part of the attractions of Biven's Vauxhall Gardens, in North Pearl street, in 1826. They were afterward merged in the collection at Trowbridge's Museum." Shortly after the death of his wife and youngest child, he removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he died February 15, 1841.

352. WARREN SAMUEL DOTY, son Ethan Allen Doty and Keturah Long Tompkins, b. Rensselaerville, N. Y., May 6, 1810; m. Niscayuna, N. Y., Oct. 15, 1830, Sarah Mehitable Child, b. Troy, N. Y., Sept. 18, 1810, dau. Rev. Caleb Child and Sarah Bramhall.

Rev. Caleb Child was a descendant of Benjamin Child, who came from Great Britain in 1630 and settled at Roxbury, Mass. A full account of this family will be found in the "Genealogy of the Child Family," published by Rev. Elias Child of Utica N. Y.

The Bramhalls were an early Plymouth family, Sarah Bramhall being from a branch that had emigrated to Amenia, Dutchess County, N. Y., where she met and married Rev. Caleb Child.

Warren S. Doty and wife, shortly after their marriage, removed to New York City, where for a time both were engaged in the mounting of maps for a large map publishing house. About 1835-6 he established an engraving, printing and paper business, which was carried on under the firm names successively of Pollock & Doty, Doty & Jones and finally as Doty & Bergen, under which name it continued till his death, which took place at Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 14, 1855. Mr. Doty was of tall but rather slender frame, cheerful disposition, with a quaint, dry humor, which seems to have been common to all of the descendants of Samuel Doty of Stephentown, N. Y. He was exceedingly industrious and energetic and of great probity, qualities which made him successful in business, while he at the same time won the respect and esteem of all who knew him. His solicitude was entirely for his family, to whose care and education his life was largely devoted. About 1847 he removed his residence to Brooklyn, where he afterward resided.

Mrs. Doty was a woman of superior natural gifts, self-reliant, energetic and thoroughly devoted to the care of her family circle. She died at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 23, 1878. Affectionate, kind and devoted parents, their memory will ever be cherished by their children.

James McFarlan and Margaret Cronk; they reside Brooklyn; no chil. Mr. Doty attended the public schools of New York City, and subsequently the Free Academy, now known as the College of the City of New York. His first occupation was in 1852, as assistant librarian at the Mercantile Library of New York City, and this was followed by a position as librarian of a large library in Brooklyn.

He then became the bookkeeper of a book publishing house, which position he retained for a year, and upon the sickness and decease of his father, entered the business of Doty & Bergen, first as bookkeeper, but subsequently succeeded to his father's interest in that house. He purchased, in 1862, the interest of his partner, and entered into a new partnership with his brother-in-law, Edward McFarlan, and the firm of Doty & McFarlan, succeeded in 1888 by the firm of Doty & Scrimgeour, has been for many years one of the leading and most prosperous houses in the manufacture of fancy papers, with their manufactory in Brooklyn and offices and warehouses in New York City. Mr. Doty removed to Brooklyn with his parents in 1847 and has since resided there, becoming identified with many of its institutions and with some of its history. He was, in 1883, a member and chairman of the Civil Service Commission of the city.

In 1889 he accepted the presidency of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Brooklyn, which position he still retains, 1897. Is a member of the Chamber of Commerce of New York and director in several financial institutions. Is somewhat active in politics as a Republican, though an independent one. Mrs. Doty is active in educational and benevolent work, being specially interested in the prosperity and management of the Brooklyn Orphan Asylum, of which she is a director. She is a member of the Woman's Club, and interested also in the introduction and maintenance of kindergartens.

The following sketch of his life is from the pen of one of his accomplished daughters:

Early in life he felt it to be his mission to preach the Gospel to the heathen, and studied for the ministry with that aim in view, being prepared in his studies at Rutger's College and New Brunswick Theological Seminary. An historical pamphlet of the Sabbath school of the Reformed Church at Berne, N. Y., says: "On November 3, 1832, Elihu Doty, one of our scholars, entered into full communion with this church on confession of faith. In April, 1833, he was recommended as a fit person for the ministry. He graduated from Rutger's College, 1835, and from the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J., in 1836."

Quoting from a "Manual of the Reformed Church in America:" "His first aspirations after missionary life were formed in the Sabbath school. In his studies he was known for his faithful application and excellent scholarship—not showy, but solid—developing excellent judgment and great balance of mind, and winning respect and confidence by his earnest and decided piety. He was somewhat advanced in age when be began his preparation for the ministry, and by the advice of others overleaped two years of his college course.

"His integrity, intellectual and moral, was complete, and no one ever dreamed of questioning his conscientiousness. His missionary ardor was increased by the magnetic presence and contagious enthusiasm of David Abeel." He graduated from the seminary in 1836, being licensed to preach by the Classis of Schoharie, N. Y., in the same year, and in June he sailed for Java, in company with Elbert Nevius, William Youngblood and Jacob Ennis, under the care of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church, which believed the Dutch Government established there would show some interest in the missions of a church whose fathers had come from Holland. But, on arriving at Batavia in September, they found no friendly welcome or protection, so finally Borneo was assigned as their location, and they reached Sambas, Borneo, June 19, 1839, after three years of disheartening labor and delay in Batavia and Singapore, only to meet further disappointments, for, in a few months, Mr. Nevius was obliged to leave on account of his wife's broken health, and Mr. Ennis proved himself a very unfit man. Notwithstanding his mental endowments, he was dismissed and finally deposed from the ministry, thus leaving the work so newly established to be carried forward by Mr. Youngblood and Mr. Doty.

Messrs. Pohlman and Thompson soon joined them, when the former and Mr. Doty devoted themselves to the Chinese who came to Borneo for purposes of trade; but after a few years' residence in Sambas and Pontianak, it became evident they could do more efficient work among the Chinese, if in their own land; accordingly they went to Amoy, China, in 1844, reaching this seaport town in Southern China at the close of June.

Shortly before leaving this country in 1836, Mr. Doty married Clarissa D. Ackley of Washington, Ct., a lady highly spoken of and esteemed. Upon their arrival in China, when their little family must have been knit together closely and peculiarly, among a strange people, these two were shown there were other ties to break than leaving home, lands and friends tried and true, for, after three weeks, they laid away their only son, six years of age, and memory recalls, even now, the peculiar tenderness with which that father would speak, in years long after, of this child, who went out from them then, and in the October following, 1845, Mrs. Doty died, leaving two little girls whom their father brought to this country, together with the motherless children of Mr. Pohlman, in March, 1846. These having been left with kind friends, he married Eleanor A. Smith of Troy, N J., in 1847, and returned to Amoy in August of that same year.

Although so discouraged in the outset of their work, the missionaries felt greatly encouraged in China, those who embraced Christianity in most cases showing by the fruit of their lives the genuineness of their conversion, and through the course of Mr. Doty's life from this date his was the work of building up that for which he, with his associates in the earlier days, laid the foundation; also the widening of the field and work back into the country. His experiences were much the same that all laborers in foreign fields have felt; there were the discouragements of blind prejudice and ignorance, and of the naturally wicked heart in these heathen, as in all others of humanity; there were the outbreaks and the riots instigated by the priests against the Christians, both foreign and native, and the civil wars imperiled life at times, as in 1853, when it raged through that part of the Empire, and the City of Amoy was beseiged, and all the horrors of war among a half-civilized people were perpetrated on its streets, and in its harbor filled with war junks, during the cannonading of which many balls and bullets lodged in Mr. Doty's house, one of which just escaped hitting Mrs. Doty and an infant in her lap.

Mr. Doty was very much engaged during the later years of his life in translations into the Chinese language of such works as were deemed suitable. The "Manual," quoted from before, says: "He was admirably fitted for this department, by his habits of accuracy, his candor, judgment, and freedom from caprice and prejudice. He was a laborious man; there was no romance in his character. A stern, determined worker, he sturdily pressed on. He met difficulties with a quiet heroism, but turned not aside. He never spared himself until his friends compelled him."

His publications were: Anglo-Chinese Manual of the Amoy Dialect, Translation and Revision into Amoy Dialect of Milner's Thirteen Village Sermons, including Milner's Tract on the "Straight Gate," Some Thoughts on the Proper Term for "God" in the Chinese, Narrative of a Tour in Borneo, Translation of Sacramental and Marriage Forms of Reformed Protestant Dutch Church into Amoy Colloquial.

It was during 1858 that Mr. Doty acted as American Consul during the absence of the appointed Consul, Mr. Hyatt, and his judgment was so clear and just that throughout his life he was constantly sought for advice and counsel. The necessities of a missionary's life tend to develop one's genius in every channel, and in the absence of a dentist Mr. Doty often rendered assistance in that line, and by performing slight surgical operations, while his knowledge of Natural Philosophy often aided others and himself in securing comforts and helps which seemed little short of witchery to the simple natives. His publications were also bound under his supervision and direct aid, the press being in his study. At certain seasons of the year he was a great sufferer from asthma, many times being unable to lie down or rest in any position, while at all times he was never robust. Death entered this fold also, taking the oldest and the then only son, again and later the babe for whom the mother gave her life for, in February, 1858, Mrs. Doty died, leaving the tender mother-father the solicitude of four other little ones whom he brought to the care, so kindly and generously offered, of his wife's parents and sister, in 1860.

After spending one year in this country, recruiting in health and starting his children in their education, he again turned his face to the work to which he gave himself for life, and continued in arduous labors, through different vicissitudes, national and ecclesiastical, until his gradual but certainly failing physical powers told him his work was done. Then with mingled feelings he embarked on the "N. B. Palmer" for the United States, on November 30th, 1864, and as he stood on her deck, bade farewell to the home of his adoption, the land where he had lived into nearly the whole of his life experiences, where most of his associations were formed, and where he had passed through the deeper passions that stir one's soul, the joys too deep for utterance and the sorrows in which "the heart knoweth its own bitterness;" but within four days of his destination the worn-out body could no longer hold the fettered spirit, and breaking its bonds he was with his God, and at rest, March 18th, 1865. The funeral services were held at the Middle Dutch Church, Lafayette Place, New York City, and also in the church in Parsippan y N. J., and his precious remains lie in the cemetery in that place.

The following despatch which, appeared in a New York City paper, April 29, 1880, will establish Mrs. Folwell's reputation for courage under trying circumstances:

"Buffalo, April 28.—As Miss Flora Doty, daughter of Leonidas Doty, the wealthy banker of this city, was walking along Delaware avenue to-day, near Tupper street, she saw a well-dressed young man approaching her. Miss Doty carried a well-filled purse, one of the fashionable pattern, suspended from a handle. As the two were about to pass each other, the young man seized the purse and attempted to jerk it from her hand. Miss Doty was plucky, and clung tenaciously to the handle. The young man also hung on, and in attempting to wrest the purse from her hand, it was forced open, allowing the bank notes and silver to fall upon the flagstones. The thief then released his hold, and darted through Tupper street, and was soon lost to sight. Miss Doty had a similar experience in New York, several years ago, while in company with her mother and her sister, Mrs. Westervelt of New York. The ladies were walking in Twenty-first street, near Gramercy Park, when two men came up behind them. They passed the ladies, one on either side, and as one passed Mrs. Doty he seized her watchchain, gave it a pull and darted away. The chain was broken from the fastening at the neck and at the watch in the belt. The charms and parts of the chain jingled on the sidewalk. The action of the thief was seen by Miss Doty, and as he darted away she gave chase. The thief ran fast, but Miss Doty was equally fleet, and she kept him in sight for about two squares. Then the villain leaped into a sewer trench where men were at work, and seizing a shovel, began work as though he belonged there. Miss Doty called a policeman who was passing, told him the story, and identified the thief. He and his accomplice were arrested and arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court. Both men were tried, the robber getting twenty years and the accomplice ten years in the State prison. It was a plucky thing for Miss Doty to do, and for a time gave her much unsought notoriety."

491. PHILEMON ROCKWELL DAY, son Erastus William Day and Indiana Tolles, b. Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 11, 1838; m. Avon, Ct., June 1, 1864, Henrietta Minerva Woodford, b. Avon, Aug. 29, 1840, dau. Ira Woodford and Minerva Potter.

He is a minister of the Congregational Church, is a graduate of Williams' College and Auburn, N. Y., Theological Seminary. He spent the first four years of his ministry in the city of Troy, as city missionary, in the employ of the Young Men's Christian Association. As a part of the fruit of his labors, in connection with this associate band of workers, several churches were organized which are to-day strong and prosperous.

Later he accepted a call to become associate pastor with Dr. Sawtell, of the First Congregational Church of Saratoga, where he was greatly beloved. Called by the death of a brother-in-law to the care of the aged parents of his wife, he moved in the Spring of 1871 to Avon, Ct., where for ten years he was engaged in active business life, preaching for destitute churches on the Sabbath, and attending to various business enterprizes during the week.

During these years his fellow townsmen appointed him to various offices of trust, having been at different times Selectman, Secretary of the Board of Education, Justice of the Peace, and Member of the House of Representatives of Connecticut.

In 1881, he was called to the Seventh Presbyterian Church of New York City (formerly Dr. Hatfield's), from which he resigned in April, 1885. Under his pastorate in New York, and at his suggestion, "The Hatfield" was built (upon a vacant lot owned by the church) for the purpose of providing an attractive home for workingmen, and at the same time the securing of an income for the church, to enable it to do an enlarged mission work in that old historic field.

In October, 1885, Mr. Day was appointed Superintendent and Pastor of the Albany, N. Y., City Tract and Missionary Society. For this work he had by his previous training a special fitness. He accepted the call and entered immediately upon the work there. At the City Mission of Albany, Sunday evening, October 25, 1885, Rev. Mr. Day, in response to a few words of welcome, replied in part as follows:

"I hardly know how it was I came here, I was unacquainted with this field. The place was unsought. And yet I am glad to be in this work. I love it for the following reasons. First, on account of its undenominational character. And it is just because I learned, in the early experience of my ministry, that love for Christ and for souls is deeper, broader, grander than any creed. Further, I love this work because you are united in a kind of church organization, with the broad platform of love to God and love to man. This comes the nearest to my ideal of a true aggressive mission work, made up, as it is, of the combined spiritual forces of all creeds. The commingling of kindred denominations indicates my ideal of what a mission church ought to be and what this mission society may be. I might find illustration of the same thing by turning your thought to the resultant of the concentrated but different forms of church government.

"Still more marked is the happy influence of the different nationalities brought together here. The German, skeptical, but open to proof, and reaching for it, and, when found, standing upon it; the Scotch, grounded in the faith, believing in the Bible and the catechism; the Irish, quick-witted and often running across lots to truth, while their staid neighbors take 'the farthest way around as the safest way home,' and the Yankee, born with a 'why' in his mouth, full of push and inventive of ways and means for doing good, all these and others act and re-act upon each other in an organization like this and unitedly help to build it into a temple of worship to the glory of the Master Builder. Again, I love the work because I love working men. And I ought to love them, for I have experienced in my own life the necessity of toil and have garnered its disciplinary fruits.

"I was left an orphan at an early age with only my two hands and a resolute will with which to clear a path before me. With God's blessing they have done me good service ever since. Your kind words of welcome and cheer give me hope to find my way to all these hearts and homes. Remember that the door of my own heart is ever open to you all, and that my hand is that of a brother to help you to help yourselves in every possible way."

Mr. Doty wrote, Dec. 12, 1885: "Having lost my mother by death at the age of four years, I was taken to my grand-parent's house in Raisin, Mich., where I resided till I was twenty-one years of age. I then went with my father, who had just returned from California, to Texas and engaged in driving cattle from there to Kansas the two following Summers. Being struck with the beauty and fertility of the soil, I, in company with a Mr. T. H. Winn, made the first settlement in the Township of Darlington (taking the land from the Government), where I now reside and where both my children were born. I was here during the grasshopper raid, but by the death of a distant relative occuring about that time, I came into possession of sufficient means to buy out my neighbor Winn and to establish myself in comfortable circumstances. I think highly of the country and am contented and satisfied, which is as good as a fortune."

THE FAMILY OF JOHN DOTY.

3. John Doty, or Doten, as his name was sometimes written, was born atPlymouth, Mass., in 1639–40. He was the second son and child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke. The date of his birth is established by an affidavit taken in a suit to settle a boundary line, when, under date of 6th May, 1684, he says, he was " about forty-four years of age."

Despite the fact that he appears in his early days once or twice upon the records of the town in breaches of the peace or in disputes, it is certain that he soon became a blameless and highly respected citizen, honored by his townsmen, thirfty, industrious and prosperous.

He was a farmer and probably the only one of Edward Doty's children that settled down in Plymouth and remaining there devoted himself to this occupation. He early secured lands there, for, besides what he received from his father's estate, he was granted by the town, at a meeting held 8th January, 1665–6, " three acres of meadow land at the Turkey Swamp." He probably also took charge of the lands and property of his mother in Plymouth as early as 1660. And upon her marriage and removal to Marshfield in 1667 with her younger children, he undoubtedly became her representative in Plymouth, and in 1671, by a deed, which she acknowledged before Governor Prince, his mother conveyed to him all her right and title to her share of her late husband's property, not only at Plymouth but elsewhere.

The records show, 1666–7, several disputes on trivial matters with John Barnes that were carried into the court and decided.

In 1667, 2d July, as noted before, " Libertie is granted Edward Dotey and his brother, John Dotey, to look out for some supplyes of land."

17th January, 1667–8. He conveyed to John Smith, the same party who subsequently bought the interest of all the heirs, his share of the estate of his father " at Poaksett in Dartmouth."

31st January, 1668–9. He was granted at town meeting, thirty acres at Indian Pond.

1669, July 5th. John Dunham, Sr., complained that John Dotey met him in the highway and cruelly beat him, for which offence John Dotey was held to keep the peace. Nothing more serious than this appears against him at any time.

In "An Exact list of all the names of the Freemen of Plymouth," made 29th May, 1670, the name of John Dotey is the only one of the family that appears.

His name appears in the records on coroners' and petit juries at various times, spelled in various styles. In 1675 and 1676 as John Dotey. In 1679 and 1680 as John Doten. In 1683–4 again as Dotey and a year later as John Dotye.

In the "Old Colony Records," Vol. 5, we find, under the date of "1676, July 7, at a court held in Plymouth; in reference vnto the issueing of a difference between John Doten and the executors and overseers of the last will of Jacob Cooke deceased, and the rest of the children concerned in that estate, touching fiue pounds demaunded by the said Doughtey, comitted to the finall determination of this Court, this Court, haueing heard and considered theire mutuall pleas, doe order that the said John Doughty shall haue allowed vnto him by the sonnes that enjoy the lands of the said Jacob Cooke apportionable theire respectiue ptes by them enjoyed, either two acrees of the marsh lying together out of the six acrees lying at Joneses Riuer, or forty shillings in current New England mony, and forty shillings more to him in current country pay out of the estate belonging to the sisters according to theire respectiue ptes."

In 1671 John Dotey was elected at town meeting "Surveyor of the Highwaies" at Plymouth; and again, in 1675, he was re-elected to the same position. In 1680 he was elected Constable.

In 1681 and 1682 he had several suits against Nathaniel Southworth, who had failed to fulfill a contract to build a house for him, the name being spelled in the same suit both Dotey and Doten.

His cattle mark is entered 10th May, 1683. On May 17th, 1686, he was granted four acres upon Mahucket Brook.

From the Old Colony Records, Vol. 6, we quote:

"1690, April 1. The selectmen of Duxborough having reported that two of their inhabitants Henry Clarke and Thisten Clarke, by reason of their age, indiscretion and weakness of understanding are incapable of their own support notwithstanding they have an estate sufficient, and John Dotey of Plymouth their nephew having promised to take prudent care of them, is allowed to recoup himself from their estate," under certain provisions.

In 1695, after the death of his brother Edward's widow, he and Elmer Faunce were appointed guardians for her minor children.

In 1894–5, Jan. 25, John Nelson, John Dotey and Samuel Lucas were authorized to divide up the "gurnett," a piece of land at a headland on the coast near Plymouth.

In the early part of 1701, shortly before his death, he was granted by the town a considerable plot of ground which afterward proved to be valuable.

In 1716 his sons united in a deed of this land to their sister Elizabeth, wife of Joshua Morse, "as they knew it was their father's intention to do before his death." This plot was situated mainly on Court street, in Plymouth, and will be found described in Davis' "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," pages 201–3.

In 1667, the exact date not being on the record, John Doty married Elizabeth Cooke. She was born at Plymouth, 18th Jan., 1648–9. Her father, Jacob Cooke, was born in Holland, and was a son of Francis Cooke, who, with his son John, came in the Mayflower, but whose wife, with Jacob and other children, followed in the Ann three years later. Jacob Cooke married, in 1646, Damaris, daughter of Stephen Hopkins, in whose family Edward Doty came as servant in 1620, and Elizabeth Cooke was the oldest child by this marriage.

John Doty and Elizabeth, his wife, had nine children, as appears by the record, when she died, 21st Nov., 1692. About two years later, or perhaps early in 1695, he married a second wife, Sarah, whose maiden name does not appear on the record. Certain facts make it probable that she was Sarah Rickard, daughter of Giles Rickard of Plymouth. John Doty, by Sarah, his second wife, had three children, whose births are also recorded.

He died on the 8th of May, 1701. His will, made 15th of April, 1701, and proved 3rd of June of the same year, gives his name, and is signed "John Doty Sr.," but by his mark, and is as follows:

"The last Will and Testament of John Doty senr. of Plymouth.

And I desire my loving brother John Rickard to be helpful to my sd wife in the management of it."

"This, I do acknowledge to be my last will and testament whereunto I have set my hand and seal this fifteenth April, 1701.

"The mark X of John Dotey, Senr. [SEAL.]

"Signed, Sealed and delivered in ye presence of

"William Ring,

"Eleazer Ring,

"William Shurtleff.

"Memorandum. That on y^e^ day aboves^d^ y^t^ Sarah Dotey relict of y^e^ s^d^ John Dotey, deceased & sole executrix of y^e^ within written will before probate & allowance of y^e^ same declared that she did & doth reserve to herself the benefit of y^e^ law respecting her dower or third in y^e^ housing & lands of y^e^ s^d^ deceased, anything to y^e^ contrary thereof, contained in s^d^ will."

At the same time that the will was admitted to probate "Samuel Dotey, one of the orphan children of John Dotey, Sr., deceased, late of Plimouth, chooses his uncle, Jacob Cooke for his guardian." Elisha Dotey chose his brother, John Dotey, Jr., to be his guardian. Sergeant John Rickard, probably a brother of the widow, was appointed by the court, guardian of Josiah Doty, and William Wing was appointed guardian of Martha Dotey. Later on, Desire, the youngest daughter, was adopted by Giles Rickard, who, if not her uncle Giles, was probably his son.

John Doty's widow married on the 23d of August, 1704, Joseph Peterson, and it is possible that she may have been a widow when she married John Doty. She was was living 1708, her son, Isaac having on the 2d of January, of that year purchased all her interest in the estate of her late husband, John Doty.

Many of the descendents of John Doty have lived and some still reside at Plymouth, while several generations of others lived in the inmediate vicinity, at Plympton, Carver and Kingston, and others at various settlements on the coast of Maine.

It is among the descendants of this family that the spelling of the name Doten has obtained, and especially among those who have remained on the eastern coast. It is in this family, too, and this one only, that traditions relating to the ancestors at Plymouth, and to the early history of the family there, have been found, and quite naturally, as in the long residence there, papers, records and old heirlooms of various sorts and every description are more likely to meet with long preservation than in those families who, by succesive migrations, have been dispossessed not only of their superfluous and bulky possessions, but gradually of all recollection of their ancestry. It quite frequently happens that in these some tradition or trait of character in the maternal branches are mistakenly referred to as showing the supposed origin of the male branch of the family. But those who have remained at or near the original settlement have generally preserved correctly such traditions as have withstood the test of time, and it is largely through their aid that local historians are enabled to piece out the town and church records and to fill up the gaps that occur in them. It need not be wondered at, therefore, that the descendants of this family should hold tenaciously now to the name Doten, believing that to have been the original spelling, and the weight of evidence would be with them from the fact of their continuous residence at Plymouth, were it not that the early records, as we have seen, show the first generation, as well as all of their descendants who left the coast before the Revolution, to have spelled the name with the final y, as Doty or Dotey.

The descendants of John Doty have shown very little of the pioneer spirit, such as actuated the families of his brothers. Edward Doty's children emigrated to Saybrook, Ct., and in a generation more his descendants were in the wilderness of northern New York, from whence they have steadily pressed westward. Joseph Doty died at Rochester, Mass., but his children had reached the western borders of Connecticut within a few years after, and from there moved out again North and West, till now they are to be found in almost every Western State and Territory.

Samuel Doty himself emigrated to New Jersey, and his descendants have been the most energetic pioneers in the family, constantly moving on to new fields and homes. Isaac Doty's children, too, left their Long Island birthplace to find new homes in the North and West. But the descendants of John Doty, for generation after generation, remained at the old homesteads in Plymouth and Plympton, dividing the home farm and making new homesteads, again to be divided by the next generation, their only departures being to the villages or towns immediately adjoining. It must not be inferred, however, that they lacked enterprise. Very many of them followed the sea and sailed to every clime on the face of the earth, braving all sorts of perils and dangers, as New England seamen were wont to do in that day. The Revolutionary War found some of its bravest privateersmen among the representatives of this family. Others were merchants of wealth and renown, but the majority have been farmers, well-to-do, prosperous and substantial, neglecting no duties, pursuing the even tenor of their way, educating their children well, but living the peaceful life of farmers. The Revolution found them thus, and though there were many ardent patriots among them, many others were loth to leave their comfortable firesides to engage in the struggle for independence, and gave the cause of the Colonies only lukewarm support, and in some cases almost active opposition.

This led at the close of the war to an emigration of some of the loyalist families to Nova Scotia, and there had been earlier some emigration to the coast of Maine. But it was not till after the Revolution that there was any movement toward the West, and even then the emigrants chose the well built up settlements rather than to open up the wilderness.

Her father having d. in 1701, she was adopted by Giles Rickard of Plymouth, who was probably her uncle. He had no other chil., and by his will left to her some property.

In 1720, Desire Doten of Plymouth, sells a plot at Wellingsley, which came to her from her father-by-adoption, Giles Rickard, late of Plymouth.

Of the above Edward and Jacob, the 2nd and 3rd sons, probably died young as they are not named in their father's will, or elsewhere, except as above.

He d. there 1747; she d. there April 15, 1754.

John Doten, Jr., as he was called on the records until after his father's death in 1701, was a wealthy farmer with extensive lands. He succeeded to a large part of his father's estate, which was increased by lands received by his wife from her father's estate, as well as by subsequent grants from the towns of Plymouth and Plympton and by purchases. He early made his residence in Plympton, Mass., where his father had made considerable purchases, and his name appears in the list of persons first entitled to vote for Selectmen at Plympton, 1708–9.

In 1731, he and his sons, John, Jr., and Jacob, petitioned with others to be set off as a separate precinct. They lived in the southern part of the town of Plympton, which part was erected about 1800 into a town and called Carver, and it was probably there that the Doty's Plain and Doty's Meadow named in his father's will were situated.

In 1706, John Doten and Mehitable, his wife, sold to her brother, Samuel Nelson, lands which they received from her father, John Nelson, deceased. John Nelson, born 1647, was the son of William Nelson who came early to New England and married at Plymouth, Martha Ford. The date of Mrs. Mehitable Doten's death does not appear on the record, but probably occurred not long previous to 1745, at which time John Doten married, as his second wife, Hannah Sherman, daughter of Samuel and granddaughter of William Sherman, the ancestor of that family.

John Doten's death is not on record, but his will is filed at Plymouth, signed "John Doten of Plimton," dated April 29, 1746, and proved July 14, 1747. Of his children it names only "his oldest son John," his daughters and Jacob. It gives his estate, after providing a life interest for his widow, Hannah Doten, to his grandson, Edward Doten, oldest son of his son, John Doten, but instructs him to pay legacies:

"1. To my daughter, Mehitable Lucas, wife of William Lucas; 2. To my son, Jacob; 3. To my daughter, Susannah Finney, wife of John Finney; 4. To my daughter, Lydia Lucas, wife of John Lucas." His oldest son, John Doten, Jr., is appointed executor. Mrs. Hannah Doten's will is also on record at Plymouth, dated 1754. She left her estate to her brothers, Joshua and Caleb Sherman.

1706–7. Isaac Doty buys the shares of his brothers, Elisha and Samuel in their father's estate.

1708–1712. Several deeds are on record from Isaac Doty of Plymouth.

Isaac Doty, Samuel Doty, Elisha Doten and Josiah Doty, all sons of John Doty, late of Plymouth, unite in a deed of land there, to their sister, Elizabeth, wife of Joshua Morse, "as they know it was their father's intention to do before his death." This plot is located by Davis in his "Landmarks of Plymouth" as lying on Court street. It was sold by Joshua Morse about 1739.

1720. Isaac Doten and Josiah Doten agree to divide between them the plot which came from their father to his four sons, Isaac, Samuel, Elisha and Josiah.

In the early deeds from 1707 to 1716, his name is generally spelled Doty; later, 1720 to 1724, it is always written Doten.

He held property in Barnstable County, where an inventory was filed 1724.

1159. JOHN DOTEN, son John Doten and Mehitable Nelson, b. Plympton, Mass., Feb. 5, 1700; m. there July 8, 1724, Lidiah Dunham, b. there about 1704; he d. there Jan. 1750. His widow was living, apparently in 1766, when her son Edward's affairs were administrated upon.

The Dunhams were early at Plymouth, John Dunham being there in 1733, and several branches of the family settled at Plympton. Ebenezer was a favorite name in the family, and as several of that name lived early at Plympton it is possible, though not certain, that Lidiah was the daughter of one of them.

John Doten was a farmer of considerable property at Plympton, Mass. In 1729 he received, by deed of gift from his father, a large farm there, and was a man of prominence and influence in the southern part of the town, now known as Carver. At the town meeting in 1736 he was elected Surveyor of Highways.

His will is on record at Plymouth, Mass. It is dated January 19, 1748, and is as follows:

"In the name of God, Amen.

"I, John Doten of the Town of Plympton, in y^e^ County of Plymouth, in the Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, Husbandman, being convinced of the certainty of death and of y^e^ uncertainty of the time when and being through Gods goodness at this time of a good disposing mind and memory do make this my last will and testament as followeth. In the first place I commit my sole to God who gave it and my body to the earth to be buried in a decent christian manner at y^e^ discretion of my Executor hereafter named, and as to my temporal estate which it has pleased God to bless me withall my will is that it be improved & disposed of in y^e^ following manner & after my just debts and funeral charges paid.

"Imprimis. I give to my beloved wife Lydia Doten one third part of my Real and personal estate during the time of her widow-hood and then return to my children hereafter named to be divided amongst them in y^e^ same manner the other two thirds are.

"Item. I give unto my son Edward Doten 2 5th parts & an half of two third parts of my real & personal estate to his heirs & assigns forever.

"Item. I give unto my son Ebenezer Doten one fifth & an half of two third parts of my real and personal estate to his heirs & assigns forever.

"Item. I give unto my daughter Elizabeth Fuller the value of one fifth part of two third parts of my real & personal estate to her heirs and assigns, to be paid to her in money or out of my personal estate, one fifty pounds old tenor to be paid twelve months after my decease and the remanding part to be paid to her yearly at 50£ old tenor a year till y^e^ whole be paid & my will is that my son Edward Doten and my son Ebenezer Doten pay the afores^d^ sums to my daughter Elizabeth Fuller equally between them.

"Item. I give unto my son Nathaniel Doten one fifth part of two third parts of my real and personal estate to his heirs and assigns forever.

"Further my will is that if my son Edward Doten or Ebenezer Doten should die without issue that the part of my real estate which they then possess shall belong to the surviving brother of the two, to his heirs and assigns forever. Furthermore I do by these presents constitute and appoint Ebenezer Spooner of Plymouth in y^e^ County of Plymouth, Cordwainer, sole Executor to this my last will & testament.

"In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this nineteenth day of January A. D. one thousand seven hundred and forty eight.

"Signed Sealed and declared in presents of us. "Johnn Doten Seal.

"William Lucas.

"Elisha Wyton.

"Rebecca Robbins."

It is evident it was intended by this will to devise two and one-half fifths of the two-thirds of the estate remaining after the widow's portion was set off to Edward Doten; one and one-half fifths to Ebenezer and one-fifth to Nathaniel Doten, while the daughter, Elizabeth Fuller, received one-fifth, to be taken equally from the shares of Edward and Ebenezer. By this, eventually, Edward received two shares or fifths and the other children one share or fifth each.

The births of their children are not upon the town records, and it is possible that there may have been others, as there is a tradition in the family to that effect; but if so, they probably died early.

Children, b. Plympton Mass.:

Plymouth County Deeds, 1753, Feb. 28. Deborah Doten, widow, sells property of late Jacob Doten. 1752. Joseph Rickard of Middleborough, appointed guardian for Sarah and Zephaniah Doten, minors. 1752. William Lucas was appointed guardian for Jemima and Jacob, minor children of late Jacob Doten. He was a brother-in-law of the widow and Elisha Whitton a cousin, Joseph Ricard was probably her brother.

It is possible that the widow married second, Seth Fuller, for a deed on Plymouth Records, 1753, shows that Seth Fuller and Deborah, his wife of Plymouth, release to Solomon Doten of same, their share of the estate of the late Jacob Doten. Davis' "Plymouth Genealogies" says, however, that Seth Fuller married, as second wife, the widow Deborah Cole, which may be an error. On the record at Plympton, the names of this family are all spelled Doting. At Plymouth they are Doten or Doty.

Rev. John Doty had an eventful live and occupies a prominent place in the church history of the State of New York, in Revolutionary times. Sketches of his life will be found, not entirely accurate however, in the "Documentary History of New York," vol. 4, p. 305, edited by Dr. E. B. O'Callaghan, and Bolton's "History of the Church in Westchester County, N. Y." The following sketch is, however, corroborated by letters and by items taken from his diary.

While the paternal ancestors of Rev. John Doty were of the strictest Puritan stock at Plymouth, his mother was the daughter of an English military officer, stationed in New York. This union brought to him some means and good familyconnections, a conservative tendency in politics and religion, and a desire for culture, position and influence. He was the oldest son of his parents, and, 1768, entered King's College of New York City, now Columbia College. He graduated in 1770, and during the Summer of that year officiated as lay reader. In the fall, he sailed for England, and Oct. 23d, 1770, received deacon's order in the Chapel Royal, Westminster. In the same chapel, Jan. 1, 1771, he received priest's orders from the Bishop of Norwich, being licensed to officiate in the Province of New York. He returned at once to America and July 16, 1771, was appointed rector of the parish of St. Peter's and ordained for the church at Peekskill, Westchester County, N.Y. Here he remained till 1773, when he removed to Schenectady, N. Y., to which place he was appointed at the request of the wardens and vestry.

Rev. William Andrews to whose place he succeeded, wrote 16th August, 1773, to Sir William Johnson: "This gentleman, who now officiates in my room is personally known to Col. Johnson, and I believe would, if agreeable to you and the people, accept the mission. He is a relation of Mr. Ellice's, a person of good abilities and a fair character."

Rev. John Doty remained at Schenectady, till 1775, when the first hostilities of the Revolution having broken out, divine service was suspended in his church on account of the troubles and he became the object of much harsh treatment. He was annoyed by several arrests and finally on Whitsun Monday, 1777, he was taken into custody by the Revolutionists on account of his loyalty to the king. He now deemed it prudent to apply for liberty to remove to Canada, which he obtained, and Oct. 23d, 1777, left the State of New York for Montreal, Can., where he arrived Nov. 17, 1777, and was appointed chaplain of His Majesty's Royal Regiment of New York. In June, 1778, he left with his regiment for Quebec, and in August following went to Sorel, Can. Oct. 23d, 1781, he sailed with his wife from Quebec for England, under a convoy of sixty sail in the ship Integrity, and arrived in London, Jan. 4, 1782. He left London for Canada, April, 1782, leaving Mrs. Doty in London, but Nov. 3, 1782, sailed again from Quebec for England and landed at Plymouth, England, Nov. 26, 1782.

Having been appointed missionary at Sorel, Canada, he left London in April, 1784, on the ship Ranger and arrived at Quebec, June 13th, and immediately entered on his mission. At Sorel for the first four weeks he performed the divine service in the Roman Catholic Church and afterward in the barracks, where he resided. In Sept., 1784, he received an invitation to become pastor of St. Peter's Church at Albany, N. Y., and the next summer went with his wife on a visit to Albany and New York, but returned again to Sorel.

On Christmas day, 1785, he completed the first Protestant Church built in Canada, and opened it for divine service. In 1786, he was appointed Justice of Peace of Province of Quebec, and made Magistrate of Sorel. In the Spring of 1793, Mrs. Doty went to New York for the benefit of her health and in August, he followed there and received an invitation to become rector of St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. It has been supposed that he accepted this, and the records of the Missionary Society, 1794, say: "It is with concern that the society has received information that they are deprived of the useful services of this worthy missionary, Mr. John Doty, by his removal to his native country, to take charge of St. Ann's Church at Brooklyn in Long Island, in the Province of New York."

But Rev. John Doty's diary shows that in Sept., 1793, he returned to Sorel, and was appointed chaplain of the 60th Regt. His R. H. Prince Edward visited Sorel in Dec., 1793, and Mr. Doty had the honor of dining with him there. He continued at Sorel till 1803, when he resigned the mission. An entry in the diary, Oct., 1795, shows that his mother was now eighty years old, and was living at Albany, and that he had a widowed sister, living probably at Schenectady. He probably, soon after this, removed to Three Rivers, Canada, where he subsequently lived. His diary is entirely silent as to his domestic relations, but it is known that he was divorced from his 1st wife, and m. here a 2nd wife, who outlived him. The records of Albany Co., N. Y., show that 1815, Aug. 28, John Doty, clerk and Jane Bostwick, widow, both residing at Three Rivers, Can., quitclaim to Adonijah Moody, certain property as heirs of John Price. And 1821, July 28, Rev. John Doty of Three Rivers, Lower Can., buys woodland at Schenectady, N. Y., which in 1830, with Rachel, his wife, he sells.

He is reported to have d. Three Rivers, Can., in 1844, having nearly completed a century of a very active life. Portraits of Rev. John Doty and his 2nd wife are in possession of her family, and he is said to have prepared a bioghaphy of his own life, the manuscript of which was placed with some publishing house and neglected.

The will is as follows: "Samuel Doubtey of town of Plymouth in Boston Government," Jan. 15, 1763, gives to his "brother Nathaniel Doubtey and sisters Hannah, Johannah and Elizabeth Doubtey all his share in prizes or prize money taken by the ship General Johnson whereof Samuel Little was commander in which I went on cruise against his Majies enemies." There would appear to be some error in the date of this marriage, though given on the record as 1738. But in that year Phebe Phinney was but thirteen years of age and Edward Doten but twenty-two. Such early marriages were not then common, and the dates of births of the chil. make it prob. that the m. occurred several years later. They lived Plymouth. He was a mariner.

1749. He buys at Plymouth. 1757. Deeds his house at Plymouth to Perez Tillson and Thomas Doty, merchants.

There is little on the records at Plymouth to tell the story of Edward Doten's life. Tradition reports that he lived at Plymouth, but removed about 1757 to Nova Scotia, where he lived for some years, but returned again to Plymouth, Mass., where he died 1775. Before his death the troubles antecedent to the Revolutionary War broke out. Party feeling ran high, and several of his sons espoused the side of the king, while the others remained faithful to the cause of the Colonies. The members of the family thus became estranged and separated, and at the close of the war the loyalists removed to Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, and further communication with them ceased.

Plympton, Mass., May 4, 1725; m. there Nov. 23, 1749, Joanah Whiting, b. there May 26, 1731, dau. Elisha Whitton and Joanah Rickard, widow Israel Dunham; he d. Plympton, April 17, 1765; the date of his widow's death does not appear, though she survived him.

He was a wealthy farmer at Plympton, in that portion of the town now called Carver. He received a considerable estate from his grandfather which was increased by his thrift and management, and by his share of his father's considerable property. On the records of the town his name is written both Doten and Dotin, while his wife's name, now generally called Whiting, is there written as Whitin and Whitton.

April 27, 1766, Elisha Whitton of Plympton, was appointed administrator of the estate of Edward Doten, late of Plympton, yeoman. Samuel Lucas, Rowland Hammond and Zebedee Chandler were appointed to make an inventory. They set off one-third to Joannah Dotey, his widow. The land was bounded by land which Ebenezer Doten bought of the late Edward Doten, also by land set off to widow, Hannah Doten. Debts were found due the widow, Lidiah Doten, Ebenezer Doten and others. The dates of births of the children are given here as they stand on the old town record at Plympton, Mass. It differs slightly from records furnished by members of the family, but the difference of eleven days between the old and new style of reckoning will account for the most of this.

His father having died in 1747, Joseph Rickard of Middleborough, probably, his uncle, was in 1752 appointed guardian for him and his sister Sarah. He probably lived in Middleborough, Mass., and died there. His name as well as that of his children is written upon the records at Middleborough, Mass., sometimes as Doten and other times as Doty. His descendants seem to have been divided about the spelling, and some are called Doten and others Doty. In 1794 Zephaniah Doty is recorded as living in District No. 1 of Rochester, Mass., which was near the line of Middleborough.

1275. THOMAS DOTY, son Edward Doten and Phebe Phinney, b. Plymouth, Mass., March 6, 1747-8. It is quite certain that he m. twice, 1st prob. Plymouth, but the name of his 1st wife has not been discovered. He m., 2d, prob. Nova Scotia or Maine, Rhoda Rounds, or perhaps Runnells.

The accounts received of his life may not be entirely accurate; coming from different sources they do not always agree. He espoused the Royalist cause in the Revolution with several of his brothers, and at the close of the war removed to Nova Scotia and resided for a time at Halifax. In 1818 he was living at Norridgewock, Me., and being then seventy years of age, it is probable that he died somewhere in that vicinity.

Active investigation and correspondence has failed to obtain any more facts in regard to the descendants of this interesting family, other than those of his son Paul. It will be noted that while Paul and his descendants write the name "Doty," other children write it "Doughty."

1537. i. PAUL, b. Halifax, N. S., March, 1787.

1276. JOHN DOTY OR DOTEN, son Edward Doten and Phebe Phinney, b. Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 9, 1750; m. a wife, Zebiah. He prob. m. early and removed to Taunton or Dighton, Bristol Co., Mass., or possibly to Rehoboth in same county. After the close of the Revolution, about 1786, he removed with a portion of his family prob. to Rensselaer Co., N. Y., perhaps to Troy or vicinity in that county. About 1792 there was a Joseph and Elias, or perhaps Elias Doty, at Berlin, N. Y., members of the Baptist Church there—which may have been this family. Church records at Bristol, R. I. Nov. 19, 1795, Benjamin Ward Doty, son John and Zebiah Doty, m. Rebecca, dau. Sarah Walker.

There is no record of the family of John Doty, or tradition through the families of his brothers. However, the very circumstances that caused the estrangement of the brothers during the Revolutionary War and led to their separation, give good reasons to believe that he was the ancestor of the family that follows:

Mr. Doty removed, 1819, to the residence of his son, James, Bernardston, Mass., and d. there suddenly May 20, 1826.

At the opening of hostilities in the Revolutionary War James Doty joined the patriot army; he was present at the fortifying of Dorchester Heights, and after the evacution of Boston by the British, he was with the army about

New York City and New Jersey. His rank was Commissary Sergeant. He was with Washington when he crossed the Delaware in December, 1776, and was present at the battles of Trenton and Princeton. For six months further he served in Rhode Island and then joined a privateer, of which Captain Hardy was in command, and made several trips with him. His sons relate that on one occasion, when delivering beef to the different mess squads, he came to a barrel marked "Beef T." suspecting that it was a choice morsel he rolled it to one side till his own squad came up and delivered it to them. They found it to contain beef tongues, all meat and no bones. At the close of the war he married and settled in Leverett, Mass.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gilbert Doty is said to have been a most excellent wife and mother, with an intellect above the average and very well educated for the time in which she lived, indeed, as her grandchildren report, of superior attainments, and nearly all her children partook of the strong thirst for knowleege that she possessed. Many letters, still in existence, show her to have been of a poetic nature, and after the fashion of the day she wrote an acrostic for each of her family containing some kind wish and words of encouragement.

It will be noted that James Doty alone of the children of Edward Doten spells, as do all his descendants, the family name Doty. He was probably the first of his family to leave his native town of Carver, and in doing so to adopt the spelling generally accepted by the family away from the coast.

Bristol, March 15, 1824, aged 55 years. He prob. m. 2nd, Mrs. Sarah Bishop. He d. Bristol, Aug., 1844, aged 72 years.

It is reported that at the time his father with the rest of the family removed to New York State in 1786, he, being then 14 years of age, came to Bristol, R. I., where he subsequently lived. He thus became separated from his relatives with whom he had little further communication, though it is said that he visited them about the year 1800. His children, who give these particulars, also remember having heard him tell about the old house at Plymouth, Mass., which corroborates to some extent this account of his ancestry.

Asabel King and Lydia Alexander. She d. Bernardston, Mass., April 18, 1836. He d. at the house of his dau., Mrs. D. P. Foster, Shelburne Falls, Franklin Co., Mass., Jan. 9, 1857, but was buried beside his wife at Bernardston. He was a carpenter and builder and lived at Bernardston. He was a man of large intelligence, and one of the founders of the Universalist Society there.

His grandson, Dr. E. W. Foster of Boston, Mass., who was his favorite grandchild and knew him well, writes:

"At the age of eleven years James Doty met with a severe accident by cutting one of his knees, and came near losing the use of it; indeed, it rendered him permanently lame for life. At the age of fourteen years he was apprenticed in due form to Major Orra Shelden of the town of Bernardston (some dozen miles north of Leverett), to learn the carpenter's and joiner's trade. At the age of twenty-one years, having served his time, he received his 'freedom suit' and a set of tools, as per indenture. Many buildings, mills and churches in his adopted town, even to-day, attest his thoroughness and reputation in this direction of labor.

"He was an uncommonly well-informed man in many of the great departments of human knowledge. History, botany, geology, geography, astronomy and mathematics were his favorite studies, including also mechanics and philosophy, and his knowledge of these was very accurate and extensive. He had many occasions to put such varied information to use, chiefly, however, in behalf of the public school teachers, who were wont in every stress to seek his counsel and advice. At the request of the schools, Mr. Doty at one time made a fine and perfectly mounted globe for their use, every portion of which he made himself with such accuracy of detail as to be truly considered a masterly achievement for those times, and the more so as perhaps no one in the town had ever seen one before. All these studies were pursued in the intervals of rest after hard days' labor and at all other possible times. His thirst for knowledge was ever intense, and up to the time of his death his mind was as active and eager for new truths as ever it had been from the first. In the line of ancient and colonial history he was exceedingly well read. This fact, together with the possession at times of a quaint, dry humor, made his conversation on these and kindred subjects not only amusing, but interesting and instructive. He could wield a trenchant blade in argument, and all sham, hypocrisy and the like, met an uncompromising foe in him. He was always a liberal and independent thinker, and was one of the founders, and the first clerk of the First Universalist Society of Bernardston. He was quite alone in religious views from all the rest of his family, but was prepared to maintain them, which he did to the end. Mr. Doty had at this time the most extensive library in town, and it is true also that none were better read than his.

"In stature, he was a little under medium height, and in strength was compact and sinewy, and capable of a great deal of labor, mental and physical, both of which his constant zeal and industry worked up to their maximum capacity. He is pleasantly remembered by all the old inhabitants of Bernardston, as no one of their number was more generally or favorably known for many acts of kindness and benevolence."

Many of his children have been well known teachers, partaking of his characteristics.

An obituary notice published at his death, reads: Elder John Doty died in Smithfield, Pa., May 17, 1867, aged sixty-seven years. He united with a Baptist church in early life. In 1830, he graduatd from the Hamilton

Institution and was ordained in 1832 as pastor of the Smithfield church. After sustaining this relation for seven years he resigned, and preached in destitute neighborhoods, having his home still among the people of his first choice. He was also a teacher for several years, labored with his own hands upon his little farm and endeavored to bring up his children in the fear of the Lord. Five of them are now members of the church that enjoyed the earliest ministerial labors of their father. He was respected and esteemed as a good man and a Christian. After years of suffering he died peacefully in his own home surrounded by his wife and younger children.

He had a wide reputation as a civil engineer and mathematician. His computation of the altitude of the Vermont mountains is accepted as authoritative. For a long time he kept a meteorological record for the Smithsonian Institution.

The following obituary of Hosea Doton is from the Rutland, Vt., Herald of Jan. 20, 1886:

"There died at Woodstock, Sunday afternoon, one of the best and most useful men in Vermont, who had yet lived a long life so quietly that comparatively few people outside his immediate vicinity ever heard of him, and only those near the man who had looked and thought carefully realized how much he had done. He shrank from everything approaching notoriety, and patiently did the duty that came to his hand, but yet goes to his grave honored as very few men can be.

"His father was a farmer and land surveyor, and he passed his younger days on the farm and had a common school education with his brothers and sisters. After leaving the school, however, he pursued his studies alone and unaided, following mathematics with special interest and until his acquirements in that science were probably equal to those of any man in the State, and, in recognition of this, Norwich University in 1845 gave him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. He readily took up his father's work of land surveying, and in the winter of 1828–9 began what was to be the great work of his life when he went to finish a term of district school in the western part of his own town, which his brother had been compelled by sickness to leave. He took a school in the town the next winter, took another in Woodstock the next season after that, and had in all five terms in the town last named up to the year 1842. He had a private school in his home district in the fall and winter of 1840–41, a private school in Woodstock in the fall of 1842, and again in 1843; taught a public school in Hartford in the winter of 1842–3, and the next season began work in his home district, to be stopped by sickness. He had a private school in Norwich in the fall of 1845, and another in his own district the next fall. And then came the beginning of what stands as the great work of his life. It happened that there were a number of young men and women in Pomfret who wanted to fit themselves for teaching better than they could in the common schools, and in the spring of 1850 Mr. Doton opened a select school to meet this demand in the district north of his own, and from this beginning came a series of schools, conducted in the most unpretentious way, with some irregularly as to terms, sometimes with assistant teachers and sometimes without, which was continued through thirty-four terms, the last being in the winter of 1865–6.

"The plan Mr. Doton adopted was to have private schools in the spring and fall, and to teach the public school, with the right to take pupils of his own, in the winter. The attendance was of course mostly from Pomfret itself, but there were a good many from without the town, and the number in all ran one term as high as 65. The original purpose of the enterprise was never forgotten, and the success of the work will be understood when it is said that fully 150 of the pupils became practical and successful teachers, and that nearly all of them got their whole preparatory training in this school. Mr. Doton's last teaching was done in the winter of 1866–7, when he took the school in his own district once more, but work on the Woodstock Railroad began soon after the term opened, and Mr. Doton took charge of it as engineer for the corporation and continued until the road was finished, and held the place as engineer as long as he lived. Mr. Doton worked as engineer in building the Northern New Hampshire Railroad and in some other enterprises, so that his teaching was a good deal interrupted, and, first and last, did an endless amount of land surveying. He made astronomical calculations for a register published at Woodstock in 1843, and continued the work until the publication was stopped with the issue of 1856. He began the calculations for Walton's Vermont Register in 1858, and continued them until the present issue. He also furnished the work for a New Hampshire register for the last eight or ten years. He invariably went as far as possible from seeking office, but an election to the State Senate was fairly forced upon him in 1865, and he was re-elected in 1866. Mr. Doton was in person a thick-set, medium-sized man, with full and regular features, and a remarkably kind presence.

"His character was pure gold, and refined gold, and he had such a power of impressing himself upon those around him as is very rarely met with. This was the more remarkable as his manner was very quiet, he talked by no means easily, and from anything in his exterior seemed entirely unlikely to assert himself in any positive way. The fine, strong character was there, however, and no man ever came in close contact with him and failed to feel it. With this there seemed to be a strong love of teaching born within him. He had for a long time a large part of the brighter boys and girls of Pomfret under his charge at just the time when the mind is forming and outside impressions are of the most importance, and it is entirely within bounds to say that, outside of family influence and the atmosphere of the place, Mr. Doten stands for by far the greatest single influence toward the right in the town's life, and it is a thing such as no other town ever had. He taught his pupils things from books, to be sure, and taught them well, but he taught them something better from his own head and heart, and in the most wonderful way. He interested himself in the life of each one, and worked in season and out of season putting the right ideas into his mind and wrong ones out. He lacked nothing in firmness, but attracted all by charm of mind and manner, and won such affection as gave him almost absolute control over them.

"His success in reaching young folks of all sorts was remarkable. He said once that he never failed to touch the right chord but once—in the case of a peculiarly intractable boy—and that he blamed only himself in that case; there was a way to reach that boy, and with more time he believed he could have done it. This was a striking statement to come from a man who spoke of hundreds of boys taken just as they come in public schools. The pupils are now scattered literally, from Maine to California, but everywhere they remember their teacher with a kind of supreme respect and affection, which seems a peculiar feeling reserved only for this man. How much the influence they so gratefully cherish has changed their lives and the lives to come after them for the better, no man can tell; but, first and last, few people in this world accomplish so much in turning men's feet aright as has Hosea Doton. He goes to his grave universally beloved, and loved and respected most by those who knew him best."

In the issue of the following week, January 27, 1886, the Rutland Herald contained these further tributes:

"The recent death of Hosea Doten at Woodstock has called out a great many expressions in regard to the character of the man, and from a width of range which is very remarkable in view of Mr. Doton's retiring habits and disposition. As a teacher he was perhaps more like Dr. Arnold of the English Rugby school than anybody else known to the public, but his work had even more of the personal element. It was, in fact, all personality, the school he built up entirely vanished the moment he left it, and his teaching of young people in the best sense never stopped so long as any were within reach of his voice. Judge Barrett, who knew Mr. Doton well, writes some interesting suggestions, thus:

"The patent traits of Mr. Doton's character and the quality and value of his professionol work as teacher, engineer and meteorologist need no further description or elaboration. As he made no show of himself beyond what was incident to the practical work he was doing, he was not known to those not his intimates as having a wide range of mind or attainments. To those who knew him intimately and appreciatingly he was as ample and worthy outside of what constituted his professional work and its incidents as he was within that limit. He was thoroughly a proficient in the various fields of the best literature of our language. Though mathematical and physical science was more congenial to his natural bent and early training, as concomitant with that he had become an eager and successful student of history, biography, romance and poetry. His ample library was well stored with the standard works of those kinds, and that library had grown to its full dimensions by additions from time to time of books for use, not for show. In the department of ethics—in all that appertained to religion and morals—he was not only book-wise, but he was thought-wise. He had profoundly studied and profoundly reasoned and mediated upon the subjects involved, and had become clear and mature in his ideas and views of the subjects. Whatever faith he had, he held it upon the most ample and intelligent reasons. The contemplation of such a character and such a practical life suggests the real worth and value of it—quiet and unshowy as it was—as compared with many, nay most, known as pretentious, self-seeking, ever-challenging notoriety and eclat.

"One of the pupils of the unpretentious Pomfret school expresses himself thus:

"I have known few men who had so full a measure of the very success that he most desired. He never seemed to covet wealth or official power or popular applause. One of the most diffident and retiring of men, yet full of just that knowledge and power which is most needed—he lived to see the grandchildren of his pupils growing up in a wisdom and control that emanated from him. He saw his pupils become teachers. He saw his students on the bench, at the bar, in the editorial chair, in business, and in all those places he could still perceive the impress that he had placed on the youthful mind leading to a higher plane of usefulness. He always seemed to me such a Christian as Socrates might have been if he had lived at a later day. Mr. Doten never seemed to hate anyone. He didn't love some men; he wanted nothing to do with them; but he wished them no harm. On the other hand, he loved his friends most abundantly. It is to such men that the town, the State and the country are indebted for more than they can repay."

Shortly after their marriage they removed from Greenfield, the shire town of Franklin County, to the neighboring town of Shelburne Falls, a stirring, picturesque town on the Deerfield river. Mr. Foster became a well-known carriage builder, and they resided there till 1865 when they removed to Waltham, Mass., where she still resides. They celebrated their golden wedding May 10, 1887.

One who knows her well writes: "She is largely possessed of the industrious and enquiring mind of her father, and has always been actively interested in all the great practical topics of human interest, whether in art, science or literature. An extensive reader, of excellent judgment and memory, there are few women of her otherwise domestic tastes so well informed, especially as to the antiquity and general history of both England and America. These considerable and practical acquirements, whenever called for, were freely given during the early education of her children, and in her home, ever industrious, conscientious and self-sacrificing, her children and grandchildren will never fail to testify to the strength and integrity of her mind and character which have long honored alike her Pilgrim descent, and her high office as mother, adviser and helper. Both partners have ever been cheerful and liberal to a degree in their religious beliefs, while socially their home has always been known among their friends and relatives far and near, as an open harbor of genial hospitality and good will."

Children:

2835. i. Edwy Wells, b. Shelburne Falls, Mass., Aug. 6, 1838; not m. He was for a great many years a prominent dentist, on Bacon street, Boston, Mass., but retired 1886 to devote himself to literary pursuits. In 1875 he graduated in Boston as Doctor of Medicine, and at the public exercises of the University in Tremont Temple, delivered the valedictory. He also wrote the class poem and the class song. The year following his graduation was invited by the faculty to institute the Chair of Dental Pathology and Therapeutics. He is a graduate of several other schools and colleges, and holds membership in several professional societies, dental and medical. During his professional calling of nearly 25 years as a dentist, has also been an author, critic and composer to a considerable extent, and in the latter direction has composed as his greatest musical work thus far, an historical opera called "Ye Pilgrims." The libretto, also written by him, is founded on the exact chronological events of the first year of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, and every character and principal event are strictly historical. The whole work comprised a continuous effort of over five years and is the grateful tribute of the author to the memory of his Pilgrim ancestor, Edward Doty, and the other heroic compatriots of the Mayflower, who survived the melancholy first winter at Plymouth. Besides also a smaller operatic work, on a "Legend of the Shetland Islands," he has composed nearly 100 songs, duetts, trios and quartettes, which have been published in various cities of the country from time to time during the last 15 or 20 years, and among them are several which enjoy a standard popularity, both at home and abroad. From the first of his professional career he has been a regular contributor to certain principal medical, dental and musical journals, and in 1885 had several volumes of an ancient, historical and biographical nature in various stages of preparation for publication.

In the early part of the War of the Rebellion he enlisted in the 27th Mass. Vols., one of the original regiments of Burnside's expedition, and served in the battles of Roanoke, Va., Newbern and other fields in North Carolina. In the two monster musical "Peace Jubilees" (National, 1869, and International, 1872), held in Boston under the presidency of Mr. P. S. Gilmore, the originator, he was one of the first flutes in both grand orchestras, which numbered each 1000 selected players from all the principal cities of the United States.

Y., July 22, 1822, son Horatio Gates Hough and Martha Pitcher. He d. Lowville, N. Y., June 11, 1885. His widow lives there with her children.

Dr. Hough was a celebrated historian, biographer and statistician. He entered the academy at Lowville, N. Y., at fourteen years of age, and September, 1840, entered Union College, from which he graduated in 1843. After teaching for several years in New York State and Ohio, he published, in 1846, his first work, a catalogue of the plants of Lewis Co., N. Y., and then entered the Medical College at Cleveland, O., from which he graduated, M. D., in 1848, and began the practice of his profession at Somerville, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. After four years experience in his medical practice, he became interested in the subject of local history, and deciding to adopt literature as his profession, he removed, in 1852, to Lowville, Lewis Co., N. Y., and began his "History of St. Lawrence and Franklin Counties, N. Y.," which he published in 1853.

From this time on his life was almost wholly occupied in literary, historical and statistial work. His list of published works includes thirty-three on history, twelve on scientific subjects, seven relating to constitution and laws, and nine on statistics, besides a number of biographies. He was the superintendent of the census of the State of New York, 1855 and 1865, and made the preparations for the census of 1875. He originated, in 1861, the "New York Civil List," and in 1872 published "The Gazatteer of New York." He prepared an "Abstract of the Laws of New York, 1777-1885," a work of great research and labor, which is yet in manuscript, but being of immense value will probably eventually be published by the State. During the War of the Rebellion he served as surgeon of the 97th Regiment, New York Volunteers for nine months, and four months more as an inspector of the United States Sanitary Commission. A fine sketch of his life by his friend, Henry R. Stiles, A. M., M. D., with a portrait was published in the "New York Genealogical and Biographical Record" for April, 1886; a sketch of his life also appears in the Report of the Regents of the State of New York, 1886.

He prepared for college and graduated from the New Bedford High School December 31, 1849, being then fifteen years of age.

He says: "In March, 1850, took clerkship with H. V. Davis & Co., chemical and oil manufacturers. After four years with this house, was three years with James G. Howland, oil manufacturer, and in 1858 moved to New York, continuing in the oil trade, traveling in the Southern States until Dec., 1860, where my experience was closed at Charleston, S. C., as it was not safe for a Northern man to remain. Returning to New York, and being an ardent supporter of the Union, I was elected a member in April, 1861, of the eighth company, Seventh Regiment, but did not go with them to Washington, as I could not get a uniform.

"In May, 1861, I commenced raising a volunteer company for the Fortieth New York (Fernando Wood's Mozart) Regiment. This organization, coming from Democratic source, and I being a New England abolitionist by training and belief, I succeeded in transferring a full company of maximum strength—eighty enlisted men—to the Plymouth Church, "Beecher Regiment," which was mustered into the United States service June 20, 1861, as the First Long Island Regiment, becoming in May, 1862, the Sixty-seventh New York State Regiment, to help out the State's quota, said State not recognizing them in 1861, but needing their number in 1862. I was originally commissioned as Second Lieutenant, Company E, promoted to First Lieutenant, thence to the regimental staff as Regimental Quartermaster, and lastly commissioned as Captain and honorably mustered out of the United States service for expiration of enlisted term of three years, July 4, 1864.

"In 1865 I made a new connection in the oil business, travelled extensively through the South, seeing the ruins of my former trade and the almost complete annihilation of their industrial system. In 1867 I went after a fortune in boring oil wells in Canada; did not succeed, and made my great mistake in life by leaving the oil trade, as I was disgusted with anything relating to oil. I took a Government situation in the United States Internal Revenue Department as inspector, and subsequently became Deputy Collector in the First New York Collection District, remaining for eight years in charge of returns of legacies and successions, banks and bankers, and bonds and assessments. My political head was cut off by Cleveland's first election, and then I took the average American's experience in Wall Street, with the usual lack of suecess. For the past six years I have been connected again with the oil trade."

Since 1860 he has been a member of Crescent Lodge, No. 402 F. and A. M. In 1867 became a comrade of the G. A. R. He lives Brooklyn, N. Y., and is a member of the Union League Club of that city.

THE FAMILY OF THOMAS DOTY.

4. THOMAS DOTY, or DOTEN son Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, was probably their third child. He was born about 1641. He was a seaman, but lived and died Plymouth. He was one of the first purchasers of Middleboro, Mass., 1662, and his interest there remained in the family till disposed of by his grandson, but it is probable that he never lived there.

In 1667–8, January 17, he conveyed to John Smith all his interest in the land at Dartmouth received as his share from the estate of his father.

He was granted, 1670, Dec. 13, by the town of Plymouth "1½ acres. Alcarmus field to sett a house upon." This plot, to which he subsequently added by purchase, lies on Mount Pleasant Street in Plymouth, and will be found described in Mr. Davis' excellent work, so often referred to here, "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth," page 323, where it is stated that the house built by Thomas Doty at this time is still standing.

A fairly accurate inventory of his property about this time is probably given, for having gotten into a difficulty which obliged him to leave town, we find recorded, 1671–2, March 5: "In reference to a frame of an house framed by Josias Wormall according to agreement with Thomas Dotey, the said Dotey being departed the goument (etc.), the Court ordered that a proffer be made to Joseph Dotey the agent of the said Thomas Dotey to fulfill the couenants of his brother and take the frame, or if he refuses the said Wormall to sell."

And Oct. 30 of the same year 1672, "Mary Churchill complaineth that Thomas Doten is departed the gourment, and it is doubtful whether hee will returne againe and hauing left her in a poor deplored condition and hath sued out an attachment on such goods and chattles and all dues and rights appertaining to the said Doten to be for her support." The jury, finding in her favor, she thereupon attached "Item. Thomas Dotens third of a boate in ptenorship with Lift. Morton and Thomas Howes: his third likewise of a psell of netts in the same ptenorship, with his third of the roads ankers and sailes appertaining to the said boats; as alsoe a gun in the costody of Ephraim Morton; a rapier at George Mortons; forty shillings for the hier of the boate due from Richard Willis, and a psell of boards in the costody of diuers psons."

Thomas Doty did return, however, to Plymouth, and, as noted above, completed his house there and lived in it, and as he married there shortly after this a wife whose name was "Mary," it is to be hoped, and will be here assumed, that it was this Mary Churchill whose heart was once more made glad.

The foregoing and following items would seem to indicate that fishing was his special employment.

1673. Oct. 29. "In reference to the complaint of Edward Gray and John Rickard against Thomas Dotey and his companie or boats crew, in reference vnto theire running theire boate against the said Grayes boate, the Court orders that the said Dotey and his said companie shall pay the sume of twenty and fiue shillings towards the losse of an anchor and pts of a road which was lost by the said boates running one against another, which sume is to be payed to the said Gray and Rickard, vnto whom the said anchor and road belonged, and whereas the said mr of the boate was much to blame respecting the prmises, it is ordered by the Court, that hee shall beare a double share of the said award, and that the witnesses who witnessed in the case be allowed seauen shillings."

After this he was probably more discreet on both land and sea, for no further complaints are on record against him. Several deeds recorded show that he was thrifty and industrious. It is probable that he died early in 1679. His will is dated Dec. 4, 1678, and proved March 3d following, and leaves all his property to his wife, Mary.

She married at Plymouth, February 8, 1687–8, Henry Churchill of Plympton, Mass., who was born at Plymouth, 1658, and was a son of John Churchill and Hannah Pontus, his wife. There does not seem to have been any issue from this second marriage. Henry Churchill and wife continued to live at Plympton and deeds on record show that he conveyed his extensive property to his wife's son by her first marriage.

1714. July 8. Henry Churchill of Plimton conveys "in consideration of love to my dutiful son-in law Thomas Doty of Cape Cod" all his lands in Plymouth, Plimton and Rochester, to be his at the decease of said Henry and his wife Mary Churchill. The title "son-in-law" used here undoubtedly means "stepson."

1721–2. March 6. Mary Churchill of Cape Cod, late of Rochester, widow of Henry Churchill of Plimton, conveyed "in considn of love godo will and affection toward my Grandson Thomas Doty of Cape Cod" "all her tract of land in the 16 shilling purchase at Middleboro." By these deeds her grandson came into possession at his majority of a very considerable estate.

Thomas Doty and Mary, his wife, had children:

3222. i. HANNAH, b. Plymouth, Dec., 1675.
3223. ii. THOMAS, b. Plymouth, July 22, 1679.

3223. THOMAS DOTY, son Thomas Doty and Mary Churchill, b. Plymouth, Mass., July 22, 1679; m. there Feb. 24, 1702–3, Elizabeth Harlow, b. there Feb. 3, 1683, dau. William Harlow and Lydia Cushman.

1702. Thomas Doty sells a plot of land at Plymouth. 1708. Thomas Doty, cooper, buys of Return Waite a house in Plymouth, one-half of which he sold in 1711; and though other deeds of property to and from him are on record at Plymouth 1718 and subsequently, it was probably about this time that he removed to Truro, on Cape Cod, Mass.

Here he did a prosperous business as cooper and amassed considerable property before his death. As has been noted before, 1714, July 8, his stepfather, Henry Churchill of Plympton, conveyed "in consideration of love to my dutiful son-in-law, Thomas Doty of Cape Cod" all his lands at Plymouth, Plympton and Rochester, to be his at the decease of said Henry and his wife Mary Churchill. Though Thomas Doty did not live long enough to come into possession of this property, inasmuch as his mother survived him, he probably had the care of it.

His wife Elizabeth died at Truro probably before 1720. In 1721 her brother, Thomas Harlow of Plymouth was appointed guardian for her son Thomas. And it was probably about this time that Thomas Doty married a second wife, Mercy, whose family name has not been discovered, and who survived him. He died Truro, Mass., probably January, 1722. His widow married September, 1722, Jonathan Barnes, b. 1684, son Jonathan Barnes and Elizabeth Hedge, as his second wife, and by him had children.

Thomas Doty's will is on record in Barnstable County, Mass., dated May 9, 1721, and probated February 8, 1722. It begins as follows:

"Thomas Dotey of Cape Cod in the Constablewick of Truro, County of Barnstable, being languishing under sickness" and gives 1st, to wife Mercy, 20£—and use of house; 2d, "to Joseph Abbitt the child that now lives with me" 20£—when he reaches the age of 21 years. 3d, to my son Thomas Dotey all the rest of my estate, he to maintain his grandmother Mary Churchill during her natural life.

By other papers on record in Barnstable County it appears he had a cooper's shop and warehouse on Cape Cod, and several other houses, all amounting to considerable value; also that he left but one child, his son Thomas, for whom Joseph Hatch was appointed guardian. March 8, 1722, an inventory of his estate in Plymouth County was also taken, showing him to be a large property owner there.

Thomas Doty had but one child, and that by his first wife, Elizabeth.

3235. THOMAS DOTY, only son Thomas Doty and Elizabeth Harlow, b. Plymouth, Mass., Jan. 26, 1704.

Colonel Thomas Doty, mariner, soldier and innkeeper, was undoubtedly the last member of his branch to bear the family name, Doty. His was an eventful life. At his majority he came into possession of the lands in Plymouth, Plympton and Rochester deeded to his father by Henry Churchill in 1714, and to considerable estate at Middleborough, Mass., through the gift of his grandmother, Mary Churchill, in 1722. To this was added more property at Plymouth, which he received by the will of his grandfather, William Harlow, and almost the entire estate which his father had accumulated at Truro on Cape Cod. His subsequent history must be gleaned largely from the entries on the records at Plymouth and Cape Cod.

1725. May 1. Thomas Doty of Truro, cooper, sells the house in Plymouth and other plots there that belonged to his father.

1726. Thomas Doty of Truro sells land which formerly belonged to his grandfather, William Harlow, and given to said Thomas in his will.

1726. Dec. Thomas Doty of Cape Cod buys the house in Plymouth formerly owned by his father.

1733. April 5. Thomas Doty of Provincetown, on Cape Cod, seafaring man, sells part of his property at Middleborough to Samuel Bartlett, and this deed was witnessed by his cousin, John Doten.

1743. Thomas Doty, mariner, of Plymouth, sells more land at Middleborough, Mass.

1744. He mortgages certain property at Plymouth, which mortgage was satisfied and discharged October 23, 1745.

From this time on he appears frequently on the records as loaning money on bond and mortgage, and as buying and selling at Plymouth and Middleborough ; but from 1747 to 1755 his name is generally entered as Thomas Doty, gentleman, of Plymouth. There is nothing in the records at either place to indicate that he was ever a resident of Middleborough.

The name of Thomas Doty appears among those of the "Louisburg Soldiers" in 1745, at first as Lieutenant of the First Company and later as Captain of the Tenth Company of the Ninth Regiment, Col. Joseph Dwight, and he undoubtedly took part in the expedition which laid siege to and captured the French town; and when what is known as the "French and Indian War" broke out, ten or twelve years later, he was again called into service, this time in command of a regiment, and Colonel Thomas Doty with his regiment, which appears to have been enlisted mainly in Plymouth County, was on duty at Fort William Henry, on Lake George, and took part in the expeditions of 1758 and 1759 that finally resulted in the capture from the French of Fort Ticonderoga.

At the close of the war Colonel Doty returned to Plymouth, and in 1759 bought there the cooper shop and warehouse of Perez Tillson, his son-in-law, and the firm of Doty & Tillson was in existence there for several years, doing a general business as merchants. He soon after this, however, removed to Boston, as 1761, Thomas Doty, Esq., of Boston, Mass., sells to Perez Tillson the shop and warehouse above conveyed.

And now the successful cooper, mariner, merchant and soldier betook himself to a new profession, and one which was to make him better known to future generations than any of his previous employments or services could do. In Boston, in 1760, and for several years after he kept a favorite public house at the sign of the "Lamb." Just how long he kept this or at what time he removed is uncertain, but probably at least as early as 1770 he was located at Stoughton, at that time in Suffolk County, now in Norfolk County, Mass., in the house which has become historical under the name of "The Doty Tavern."

Mr. D. T. V. Huntoon, writing in the American Monthly of July, 1876, describes the old tavern and its owner, as follows:

"The Doty Tavern at Stoughton. This old house is situated at the foot of Blue Hill, the highest elevation in Eastern Massachusetts. The attention of the traveler is at once directed to the house by its quaint and old-fashioned appearance. It stands modestly back from the 'Taunton old road,' in former days the King's Highway, between Boston and Taunton, which passing it crosses Doty's Plain and ascends Cherry Hill.

"It strikes one as a house that has a history of its own. Above its old-fashioned gambrel roof rise two chimneys of huge proportions, and its narrow windows serve to remind us of pre-revolutionary times, of its better days, and we would fain listen to the stories it might tell, could it speak. It was originally owned by a man who was prominent in the affairs of town, county and State. Captain John Shepard built it about the year 1737.

"One hundred years ago it was a famous hostelry, celebrated for its good cheer. Here could be found entertainment for man and beast. The proprietor was jovial Tom Doty, known among more quiet and sedate persons as Colonel Thomas Doty. He it was who kept the best viands, and could mix the best glass of grog of any landlord in all the country around. No stage driver so ignorant as not to know where Doty's Tavern was. His inn was the centre of all gossip; around his capacious hearth were wont to congregate on winter evenings the village wiseacres, and discuss over pipe and bowl questions pertaining to town and province.

"John Adams tells us that there were many such taverns in his day, and that the landlords exercised a potent political influence in their immediate vicinity. Without doubt 'mine host' Doty was a man of some pretensions to political knowledge; certain it is that he was known at the time of which we write to be highly indignant at the treatment the provinces had lately received from the mother country, and he favored the embryotic movement soon to burst into open rebellion. The time had come when the people of the Province of Massachusettes Bay had become enraged at the blind policy of George III., and his Parliament; bold patriots resolved that throughout the thirteen Provinces, 'Congresses,' so called in order to obviate the provisions of the Regulating Act, which forbade town-meetings except by permission of the Governor, should be held in the several counties, and in this matter Suffolk County took the lead. After it was decided to hold such congress, the grave question which presented itself to the patiots in Suffolk County was, 'Where shall we hold it?' 'At what town shall it convene?' In the first place, the spot should be central, retired. Neither Boston nor Salem possessed these requisites, and Samuel Adams, who expected the gravest results from this assembly, strenuously desired that some inland town should be selected, where, free from interference, the congress might meet, with none to molest or make them afraid. This desire was communicated to Doctor (afterwards Major-General) Joseph Warren, and it was agreed that a congress should be held as soon as practicable, and the town of Stoughton being, by its geographical position, central, and Doty's Tavern of good repute, it was decided that the meeting should take place at the town and tavern aforesaid.

"On the morning of Tuesday, the 16th of August, 1774, all was hurry and bustle at the wayside inn. The delegates from the several towns in the county were to assemble here, and the landlord Doty must put on his best 'bib and tucker.' From the farm-house over the way, which, built in the time of the Indian wars, had for protection its second story projecting over the first, Squire Royall sent his slaves to assist the slaves of Colonel Doty in making preparation for the distinguised guests.

"Early in the forenoon the delegates began to arrive. The members from the inland towns came on horseback, while young Dr. Warren with his Boston friends, drove up in a stylish berlin, drawn by four horses, with a coachman in livery on the box and a footman on the rumble. From old Stoughton came Parson Dunbar, in gown and bands; a stout old soldier he, for things temporal as well as spiritual. He had fought for king and crown in other days, when his Majesty needed help against the French; but the oppressive acts of the British Parliament had forfeited all claims upon his loyalty, and he came, against the advice of many af his friends and his own son, who held a civil office under the crown, to meet with the county congress at Doty's Tavern.

"Before this congress adjourned, the following resolutions were passed:

"'WHEREAS, It appears to us that the Parliament of Great Britain, to the dishonor of the king, in violation of the honor of the nation, have, in direct infraction of the charter of this Province, contrary to Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the national and constitutional rights of British subjects, by an act called the Boston Port Bill, a bill for amending the charter of this Province, and another bill for the impartial administration of justice, with all the parade and administration of justice, attempted to reduce this colony to an unparalled state of slavery; and

"'WHEREAS, Several Colonies being justly and properly alarmed at this lawless and tyrannical exertion of power, have entered into combination for our relief, and have published sundry resolutions which they are determined to abide by, in support of common interest, we earnestly recommend to our brethren in the several towns and districts in this county, to appoint members to attend a county convention to be held at Dedham on the sixth day of September next, to deliberate and determine upon all such matters as the distressing circumstances of this province may require.'

"It would appear that, although all present at Doty's Tavern were unanimous and firm and determined to resist the encroachments of Great Britain, the delegates did not deem themselves especially authorized to negotiate the affair of a county congress. They therefore adjourned, and at a subsequent meeting passed the celebrated 'Suffolk Resolves,' which, drafted by General Warren, were approved by the Continental Congress at Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, on the seventeenth of September, 1774, and which, in the words of Galloway, 'contained a complete declaration of war against Great Britain.'

"During the siege of Boston the old tavern was occupied by refugees, and some of the exiled town officers sought its secure retreat. Beneath the roof of the Doty Tavern the Marquis de Lafayette rested while journeying from Newport to Boston; it was during the war, and the news spread quickly that the gallant Frenchman was a guest at the old inn. In the morning, when he had paid his reckoning and was ready to depart, he found the townspeople gathered in the road before him, who with cheers and good wishes bade him God speed. The great man of the town, the first General to fall in defence of his country, the leader of France, the old parson, and the old landlord, have passed away; but the old house still stands under the shadow of Blue Hill, from whose summit the sentry with tinder-box in hand has long since been removed, and the Doty Tavern, with its associations and remembrances, must, while it stands, bear an honorable place among the historic mansions of our country."

Col. Doty at this time was too old to take part in the active hostilities that followed, but he gave such substantial aid and comfort to the patriots as he could, and throughout the Revolution his house was a general rendezvous and assembly for those who favored the cause of the Colonies. He lived to see that cause successful and the independence of the States recognized. In 1790, he was still living at Stoughton, and sold in that year the last of the land at Middleborough, which had been deeded to him nearly seventy years before by his grandmother, Mary Churchill.

The exact date of his death is not known, but as he was at this time eighty-six years of age, it probably occurred soon after and at Stoughton; nor is there on record anything to indicate the date of his marriage or the name of his wife. Tombstones on Burial Hill at Plymouth, alone furnish the items that show that he had an only daughter.

THE FAMILY OF SAMUEL DOTY.

5. SAMUEL DOTY was the fourth son and child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, and was born at Plymouth, on the High Cliff, probably in 1643.

He was the ancestor of the very large and influential branch of the Doty family, who, from the State of New Jersey, have gone forth as pioneers to the West and the South. He is first mentioned on the records of Plymouth, January 1st, 1667–8, as one of a coroner's jury in an inquest on a child kept by John Smalley, Sr., of Eastham, on Cape Cod, which had been found dead in the woods. His name is there written, Samuel Doten. In the same year, 1668, July 16, it is recorded that "Samuel Dotey of Eastham in the government of New Plymouth, in New England" conveys to Benajah Dunham of the said town of Eastham for a consideration of 8£, "all his upland and meadow land in the township of Dartmouth in the government of New Plymouth, which was granted to said Samuel Dotey, as his dividend by the will of his father, Edward Dotey, deceased, and in said Dartmouth, commonly known as Coaksett." This deed is signed Samuel Dotey. Benajah Dunham was a son of the John Dunham who resided next to Edward Doty on the High Cliff at Plymouth, in the house that the said John bought in 1649 from Thurston Clarke.

Samuel Doty's name next occurs in an affair which is thus mentioned in "Freeman's History of Cape Cod." "In the year 1669, a vessel was cast ashore on Cape Cod, and a controversy arose between Thos. More, the claimant and owner of the cargo, and Samuel Doty and others of Eastham, in regard to salvage: and agreement was finally concluded October 29th, 1669, and sanctioned by the Court." "Prince's Chronicles of Plymouth" states, "14th 2d month 1668 Thomas More's vessel cast away at Cape Cod in ye storm wrin 4 persons perished and much wealth was lost."

And in the records of the Colony we find 1669, Oct. 29. "At a court held at Plymouth. Whereas there hath bine a joynt agreement by and between Mr. Thomas More and Samuel Dotey and seuerall others of the towne of Eastham about laboure in takeing vp of monies cast away in a wracke belonging to the said More att Cape Cod and the said More haueing alowed vnto the said Dotey four shillings a day there remaining vpon account due the sume of three pounds and seauenteen shillings due vnto the said More from the said Dotey, hee haueing layed out the said sume in a mare and colt the mare being a blacke mare the top of the left eare being cut-off, and a little bitt cutt out vnder the farr eare hee haueing nothing els to pay and leaueing it to the determination of the Court, the Court haue ordered that the said mare and colt be taken vp and apprised by two indifferent men att mony prise and to be responsible to answare vnto the said More or his order the said sume and charges of takeing her and her colt vp; and incase the mare and colt comes to more then the said sume and charges, then the ouerplusse to be returned to the said Dotey."

No further mention of Samuel Doty appears in the records of Plymouth or vicinity. The old town records of Eastham, Mass., are now at Orleans on Cape Cod. A careful examination of the births, marriages and deaths, also of the proceedings of town meetings, all of which seem to be entered quite fully between the years 1648 and 1705, and later, reveals no trace or mention of either Samuel Doty or of Thomas More. The "earmarks" seem fully recorded and there are lists of the freemen in 1654, 1675 and 1684, but nothing to indicate a residence of either. The next mention of Samuel Doty is in the town records of Piscataway, Middlesex County, N. J., where in 1675 he was commissioned Lieutenant of the military company of New Piscataway, of which Francis Drake was Captain, his commission being renewed in 1678.

The village of Piscataway lies about two miles east of New Brunswick, the county seat of Middlesex County, N. J., and is a place of far less importance to-day than in 1678, at which period it was one of the most flourishing settlements in the State, and in its hotel the Governor and Council frequently met to enact laws and hold general court. In 1665 Philip Carteret, the new Governor of New Jersey, despatched agents into New England, who published what was known as the "Concessions of the Lord Proprietors." These concessions, by their liberal inducements, such as property in estates and liberty in religion, resulted in quite a migration. Several settlements were formed, and to Piscataway there seems to have come representatives of many families from Eastham and other towns on Cape Cod, among them Benajah and Benjamin Dunham, John Smalley, Hopewell Hull, Francis Drake and Samuel Doty. While the date of this emigration does not appear with certainty, it is probable that it was soon after 1670.

In 1678, Samuel Doty of Piscataway was licensed to marry Jeane Harman of the same town. 1682, his name is in list of freeholders. From 1678 to 1696, his name appears in frequent deeds as a purchaser of lands in the vicinity.

1687–8. Jan. 21. Samuel Dotey sells 104 acres at Piscataway, part of that which he bought in 1678.

1690. Jan. 6. Samuel Dotie buys 100 acres there from Benjamin Hull.

1695. Oct. 3. He buys 100 acres there of the Proprietors.

1696. He buys 125 acres more.

Samuel Dotie's "cattle mark" appears on the town records of Piscataway, being the third name in the original entry which, though not dated, appears to have been made before 1686.

In the first list of Freeholders in 1689 his name appears as Samuel Doty. In a list of "All the Inhabitants," made at about the same time, he is entered Samuel Dotey, and again in a similar way in the list of 1698.

The first congregation of Seventh Day Baptists in New Jersey had its origin in this township, in the following manner: "In the year 1700, Edmond Dunham, a Baptist exhorter and the owner of 110 acres of the town lands, felt called upon to admonish Hezekiah Bonham for working on Sunday; whereupon Bonham defied him to prove Divine authority for keeping holy the first day of the week. Dunham, after investigation, failed to do so to his own gratification, consequently he himself renounced the observance of the first day. In the year 1707 he formed a congregation of Seventh Day Baptists, and was appointed its first pastor. His ministrations continued until 1734, when he died at seventy three years of age, being succeeded by his son Jonathan, who preached until his death from smallpox at the age of eighty-six years, in 1777."

The first record of members of the Seventh Day Baptist Church of Piscataway is not dated, but was apparently made, 1707, or previously, and in it appear the names of Samuel Doty and John Doty, his son.

Samuel Doty's will is on record in the office of the Secretary of State of New Jersey, at Trenton. It is dated Sept. 18, 1715, and was proved Nov. 8, 1715, showing his death between those dates. It reads: "Samuel Dotie Sr of Piscataway, Middlesex Co., N. J., yeoman, being very sick and weak of body, but of sound mind," etc., and bequeaths to his "well beloved son Samuel Dotie, five shillings;" and the balance of his estate to "his dearly beloved wife Jane," whom he appoints sole executrix of the will. His friends, Edmund Dunham and Hugh Dunn, are the witnesses.

It is probable that each of his sons had been given farms previous to his death, for before this time they were all in comfortable possession of lands and their "cattle marks" were entered on the town records. His widow was living, 1717, as appears by the will of her son Edward of that date. The date of her death does not appear.

In all the records of whatever nature, State, county, town, church or private manuscripts in which Samuel Doty's name appears in New Jersey, it is never spelled as Doten. It is written in various ways, Doty, Dotey, Dotie, Dottey, Dote, but never with the termination "en." Nor among his descendants, wherever they are found, has there been any indication of the use of that termination, which seems to have been peculiar to Plymouth and the Eastern coast. It is true that the third generation of descendants of Samuel Doty in New Jersey did to some extent adopt the name "Doughty," and their descendants have in some few cases kept that name, the great majority, however, returning to the original spelling, "Doty." This change to Doughty was an error and the result of imperfect information, caused unquestionably by the presence in the same vicinity of members of the "Doughty" family.

The English family of Doughty, which is a numerous one, had a number of representatives in the early settlement of this country, and by 1750 nearly every county of New York and New Jersey had its family, which frequently included men of prominence and influence. Further, by this time both States were completely controlled by the English, and not only the Governor and Council but the subordinate officers were generally of this nationality. Grants of lands, etc., were perhaps not only more readily made to applicants of their own nation, but wherever these or other "orders" were recorded, the names were anglicised, and thus it happens in a nnmber of cases that parties who always wrote their name "Doty" have received grants of lands, etc., by the name of "Doughty" which is so entered on the official records of the State, the officials assuming that the name must be a corruption of the name of Doughty, with which they were more familiar.

One very prominent family of Doughtys in these States was descended from the Rev. Francis Doughty, the son of a Bristol (England) Alderman, who had been vicar of Sodbury, in Gloucester, and who came to Taunton, Mass., in 1639, but having some difficulties with his people there removed about 1642 to Maspeth, now Newton, on Long Island, in New York State. His son, Elias Doughty of Flushing, L. I., became a very large landholder there and a man of high position and great influence. By 1750 his descendants were to be found prominent not only on Long Island, but in New York City, in Westchester, Dutchess and Ulster counties, N. Y., and in Somerset, Morris, Middlesex and other counties in New Jersey, in a great many cases owning farms or lands in the immediate vicinity of descendants of Samuel Doty. It is not to be wondered at that this generation of Dotys in New Jersey, surrounded by the more English families and influences, having lost all knowledge of the emigration of its ancestor from Cape Cod, should have assumed that in some way the name had been corrupted, and that they were of the same origin as their neighbors of the Doughty family. The mystery is, that the succeeding generations should return so universally to the original 'Doty," for there was still no knowledge of their eastern ancestry, and the investigations made for the purpose of this history have been to the modern generations of Dotys in New Jersey the first intimation they have had of their descent from the Edward Doty who landed at Plymouth. It is probable that the events of the Revolution served to bring back the original spelling; the Dotys of this family in every case championing the cause of the Colonies, while many of the more loyal Doughty family stood by the mother country in the quarrel, and this separation of interests led perhaps to the distinction of the names.

This confusion of names, however, has added very greatly to the labor of collecting genealogical statistics of this family in New Jersey, and there has been perhaps no branch that has offered greater difficulties in the search for and the tracing out of its lineage, nor conferred more satisfaction in the successful solution of these problems than the decendants of this Samuel Doty. For the eastern branches of the family one may step into a well regulated library in any city of our land, and in a short time, by consulting Savage's "Dictionary of New England Genealogy," and the various local histories of towns and counties of our Eastern States, obtain records or clues to records that will greatly facilitate his work. The town records, too, of all the early settlements in Massachusetts, and to a certain extent in the other New England States, have been kept with care from the first; they frequently include lists of births, marriages and deaths, and these have been arranged into families and sometimes through the patient labor of some genealogical collector indexed so that examination is made comparatively easy. These records, too, escaped the destructive devastation of the Revolutionary War, and their careful preservation has been always a matter of solicitude.

All this is changed and the difficulties largely increased when one seeks to find these early records in New Jersey. Here there are few dates of births or deaths given except upon church records, and even these are very rare. The Revolutionary armies, while marching through the State, destroyed many of the county records, or they were removed out of harm's way and so effectually that they were never returned. A local historian of this vicinity says ;

"More than once during the Revolution Piscataway found itself in the track of contending armies, its name thus becoming historically embalmed in the reports of the commandants of the opposing forces. Early in the war New Brunswick was for many months the base of supplies for the English army, and much of the time the headquarters of the General commanding. The people of the surrounding country were obliged to billet the troops and furnish forages. This occasioned much distress, of which Piscataway had its full share. The sufferings of the people were not only caused by their being forced to impoverish themselves in order to grant legitimate supplies to the British, but by such marauding and plundering by the troops as would have disgraced the followers of an eastern satrap. General Howe's army at this time was given up to indiscriminate and universal thieving, the officers not only countenancing the outrages, but participating as well. The men were licentious, and permitted to commit, on Tory and Whig alike, every manner of rapine, violence and cruelty. Governor Livingston, in a speech before the Assembly in 1777, declared that the English soldiers, while in New Jersey, warred upon decrepit age and defenseless youth, plundered friends and foes, destroyed public records and private monuments, and, to quote his own words, 'violated the chastity of women, disfigured private dwellings of taste and elegance, and in the rage of impiety and barbarism profaned edifices dedicated to Almighty God!'"

In this case, too, Savage gave no indication of Samuel Doty as a son of Edward Doty.

It had been apparent quite early in these investigations that there had been a numerous representation of the family in New Jersey. In October, 1872, after an examination of various county records there, many of the families were traced to an origin in the village of Basking Ridge in Somerset County, N. J. The records of that county unfortunately extended no further back than 1783, all previous to that having been burned during the Revolution. In that village several aged members of the families were found whose memory helped to furnish many details, but nothing previous to Revolutionary times, or to point to any other locality. Later, however, an examination of some documents in possession of the State Department at Trenton showed the existence in 1675 to 1715 of a Samuel Doty at Piscataway, but nothing to show his origin or to connect him with the family later at Basking Ridge. A thorough search through all the town, county and church records of the vicinity of Piscataway failed then to furnish more, and the missing records of the years between 1710 and 1783 seemed to have been lost forever, when an old manuscript in the most accidental way appeared, it being held in the family of Joshua Doughty, Esq., of Somerville, N. J., who did not esteem himself a Doty, and having been written about 1825 from the memory of an aged lady, but with such indistinct references as to make it unavailable except to one who had studied the genealogy. It was as follows:

Copy of a record in possession of the late Joshua Doughty, Esq., of Somerville, N. J., written by his aunt, Miss Susan Doughty, before her death in 1825.

"THE DOUGHTY FAMILY.

"Samuel Doughty my great grandfather lived at Piscataway. His children were Samuel, Moses, Daniel, John, Thomas, Ebenezer; girls, Joana married Jespr Hunt of Milstone, Mary married Isaac Brooks of Sussex.

"James and Joseph Doughty (brothers of Samuel) lived in Turkey.

"Jonathan Doughty's children, William, Jonathan, father of Esq Jo, Daniel, Joseph, Mary, Jane, Elizabeth.

"Isaac Doughty, brother of Samuel, lived at Piscataway, father of Isaac.

"John Doughty (father of Genl John), lived on Long Island. [This probably refers to General John Doughty, a wealthy and influential resident of Morristown, N. J., but if so it is an error. General John Doughty was a distinguished artillery officer in the Revolution, a man of great wealth and wide connection. He is buried at Morristown, N. J., beside his sister, and their parents, Thomas Doughty and Gertrude LeRoux, his wife.]

"Samuel, son of Samuel, lived between the mountains near Browstown. His children were John, Joseph, Benjamin, Abrm, Isaac, Rachel.

"Moses, son of Samuel, lived Dead River. His children were Moses, Thomas, Solomon, Joshua, Mary, Bebecca, Elizabeth, Mercy.

"Daniel, son of Samuel, lived near Easton and had children, Daniel, Mary, Elizabeth.

"John, son of Samuel, lived Baskinridge. Killed by Indians on Delaware in 1757; children, Samuel, John, Cornelius, Thomas, William, Skillman. Daughters, Sary, Ann, Acy, Eliz.

"Thomas, son of Samuel, had no children.

"Ebenezer, son of Samuel, lived at Salem and had children, William, Nancy, mother of Joshua Kindle.

"Nathaniel Doughty, brother of Samuel, children, Jacob, Nathaniel, Jane."

This manuscript fortunately furnished the evidence that connected the Samuel Doty of Piscataway with the existing families in various parts of the State, but still gave no trace of his origin. This was found later at Plymouth, Mass., in the deed already recited, wherein he conveys the land that he received by the will of his father, Edward Doty, and the fact that in his emigration to New Jersey he was accompanied by the families of Benajah and Benjamin Dunham and others with whom he had been intimate at Plymouth and at Eastham, Mass.

The solution of this problem was very gratifying, for had not that valuable manuscript been found it would have been difficult on any plausible theory to convince the thousands of descendants of Samuel Doty now scattered through the Southern and Western States that they could ever have had their origin in the Edward Doty of the Mayflower.

Matters rested thus until the Summer of 1896, when Rev. Irwin P. McCurdy of Harmony Grove, Md., becoming interested in this history, made some investigations and discovered in the library of the New Jersey Historical Society at Newark, N. J., a copy in manuscript of the "Register of Births, Marriages and Deaths of Piscataway, from 1676 to 1790." Though not complete this register has furnished a partial list of names and dates, which corroborates the records otherwise gathered and has been of great service in elucidating many points.

Samuel Doty may possibly have spent some of his early days on the sea as several of his brothers did, but it is probable that he generally found his occupation on the land, and that he was on Cape Cod, as he certainly was in New Jersey, a farmer. There is nothing to indicate that he had other occupation. It will be noted that his marriage was late in life, he being, if the date of his birth be correctly given, thirty-five years of age, and yet there is no indication of earlier marriage, and certainly not of any other issue. He lived to a greater age than his father or his elder brothers; it is probable that the warmer and more congenial climate of New Jersey conduced to this, for his posterity have been noted for longevity.

It is evident from the record that he was intelligent, industrious and thrifty, a man of ability and authority, as appears by his selection as Lieutenant of the military company soon after his arrival at Piscataway, and yet of blameless life, an affectionate husband and father, and a consistent member of the church. The sterling character of his children, and their uniformly upright and Christian lives, show good training on the part of their parents; and that patriotism was one of the virtues inculcated is evident by the services of his immediate descendants in the Indian Wars of 1756 and the Revolution.

Samuel Doty and Jane Harmon were married November 15, 1678. The entry on the register of Piscataway is so indistinct that the name might be Hinnon or Horman, but it is plainly given in the marriage license as Harmon.

3260. ii.. JOHN, b. prob. about 1680.
3271. xiii. NATHANIEL, b. prob. about 1707–8.

The Town Register is incomplete; the names and dates as given above are not entered together, and it is possible and probable that the names of John and Nathaniel have never been written on the register, or if so written, have been by accident defaced. For, the existence of John and Nathaniel and their descendants is as well established by tradition as any of the others. Nathaniel was probably the youngest child, and born about 1707–8. John, however, was older and born probably as early as 1680, he being a member of the church, 1707.

3259. SAMUEL DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J., Aug. 27, 1679; m. there Sept. 19, 1700, Elizabeth Hull, b. there Nov. 14, 1679, dau. Samuel Hull and Mary Manning. Samuel Hull was a son of Hopewell Hull, one of the early settlers of Piscataway. Mary Manning was dau. Joeffrey and Hepsaba Manning.

He was the oldest son of his parents, and his cattle mark was entered in the town records of Piscataway, N. J., April 26, 1701, his name being written Samuel Dottey, Jr. He was undoubtedly at this time given a farm at Piscataway by his father, and the tradition of the family is that he led a quiet, blameless life there, an intelligent, thrifty and conscientious neighbor and friend. He was a member of the Seventh Day Baptist Church of the town. In 1739 his name appears as witness to deeds to his son and nephews in Somerset County, N. J.

His father conveyed in a deed dated Nov. 1, 1690, certain lands at Piscataway to Isaac Smalley. This deed had not been acknowledged before a magistrate, but the signature of the grantor was acknowledged in 1746 by his eldest son, Samuel Doty, who at that time was living in Morris County, N. J., "near the forks of the Delaware." It is not easy to locate this exact spot, but it was probably within the limits of the present Warren County, N. J., and not far from Phillipsburg, in that county. At this date, 1746, Morris County included within its limits not only its present domain, but the whole of the present Sussex and Warren Counties, Morris having been laid out from the old Hunterden County about 1738, and Sussex laid out from Morris County in 1753. Warren County was not formed till 1824, having been taken from Sussex. On the old maps of Morris County, as it existed about 1746, the only towns or villages laid down in this vicinity are Phillipsburg, Oxford and Walpack, and it is probable from the very expression used in the acknowledgement quoted above, that Samuel Doty did not live in either town, but in the country near there. Nor is it probable that he lived there long. He was now sixty-seven years of age, while the old manuscript heretofore referred to, and from which is obtained much of the information that we possess of this family, speaks only of Piscataway as his residence.

His son Daniel may have located here about this time or soon after, as he is reported to have lived in New Jersey, near Easton, Pa. We infer, therefore, that most of Samuel Doty's active life was spent at Piscataway, but that sometime about 1740–5 he, with his children, removed from there, some of them settling in Somerset County, and others in Morris or Sussex County, and that Samuel Doty died not long after this, probably about 1750.

Unless there is some duplication on the record, it would seem that two daughters named Johannah died early. The third, Johannah, b. March 7, 1718, m. Jespr (Joseph) Hunt of Millstone, N. J.

3260. JOHN DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J., prob. about 1680 to 1685.

The records of the Seventh Day Baptist Church at Piscataway, N. J., made apparently 1707, show that John Doty was a member. His cattle mark is entered on the records of the town under date December 24, 1712, but the records also show that "November 23, 1719, Dolph Hardenbrook takes the mark that was formerly John Doty's," and from this it would seem probable that John Doty had removed from Piscataway before 1719.

His further history is not clear and rests largely upon traditions in various branches of the family. The manuscript left by Miss Susan Doughty, and frequently referred to before, says: "John Doughty (father of General John) lived on Long Island," and though not so distinctly saying, the connection in which the statement is made would seem to imply that she referred to this John Doty. The records of Hempstead, Queens County, N. Y., on Long Island, are in excellent condition and well preserved. Under date May 11, 1724, is found: "John Doty's ear mark is a slit in the end of the near ear, and a half penny under the off ear." The town of Hempstead included at this time the residence of his uncle, Isaac Doty, and his sons, and as no John Doty appears to have then existed in that family it is quite possible and even probable that John Doty removed about 1718 from New Jersey to the town of Hempstead, L. I., and settled in the immediate vicinity of his uncle and cousins. At this time, it must be borne in mind, Long Island was one of the most populous and prosperous portions of New York State. It is doubtful, however, whether he lived there for any length of time. In 1747, John Doty was made a freeman of New York City, at which time he was probably a successful and wealthy merchant there, and it is quite possible that this item refers to this John Doty, who had probably removed from Long Island to New York City and engaged in trade there. It is probable that later he removed again to New Jersey. His descendants have been found most numerous at the South, and from there comes a manuscript written many years since by his great grandson, Azariah Doty of Garrard County, Ky., which while containing some inaccuracies still furnishes a clue to his history. This manuscript, which was in two parts, reads as follows:

1. "For the amusement of subsequent generations the following is the substance of a memorandum given my father by his grandfather John Doughty the elder, when leaving Jersey for Virginia between the years 1766 and 1770, viz., that John Doty left one sister (unmarried) in England and was a passenger from the county of Cornwall (near Lizzard Point) England in the ship Calledonia a slow, clumsy sailer, and from the leaky condition and heavy freight aboard the vessel was never landed; the passengers and crew saved somewhere about N. Y. harbor. This was when Barkley or Barcley was governor of Jersey. (Barkley was governor of New Jersey from about 1682 to 1702 only.) He married a French woman by the name of Duane perhaps in N. Y. and had a second wife by the name of Pyatte; two children by each marriage, but was living and did afterwards live in Somerset County Jersey. My grandfather, one of his sons was named Isaac Doty, also married a French woman Reyno and was living at the time my father John Doty and my uncle Azariah Doty left Jersey near Princeton College. He also had a second wife, and children by both. Second wife's name was Roy. My father had Azariah, Peter, Isaac, Ephraim and Francis full brothers, Ann, Keziah and Esther full sisters. From some cause not explained the spelling of the name has been changed from Doughty to Doty. John Doty or Doughty the elder, died in the 115th year of his age, had lost his sight years before his death. Grandfather Isaac Doty died in 107th year, also nearly blind. Keziah, my aunt Roleson lost her sight years before her death.

2. "Esther (my aunt) eldest, then John born Jan. 10, 1740, then Azariah,

Ann (had 3 Husbands—Hay, Osborn, & Clark) (Keziah) $\frac{62}{21\ \text{Jan. } 1817}$ Peter Isaac

Francis. Grandfather Reyno married a Williams on Staten Island and lived to 108 years of age. Grandfather Doty (Isaac) lived 107 years—had two wives, the above names are his first children. His last wife's name was Roy. Esther married Ayers, Keziah married Wm Rowleson, Isaac married a Baxter, John married a Lamson, Francis married McKenney. Azariah married a Tucker & lived 106 years & some months."

What foundation there may be for the connection of John Doty with the story of the wreck near New York harbor of the Caledonia, which occurred in 1699, is uncertain; it is probable that the journey by Samuel Doty, his father, from Cape Cod to New Jersey was made by sailing vessel, and that some accident to it may have been the source of this tradition.

Possibly John Doty himself may have been wrecked on the New Jersey or Long Island coast at some time, but it was probably not during Governor Barkley's administration, at which time he was not only too young, but was almost certainly a resident of Piscataway. But this manuscript is sufficiently corroborated from other sources to show definitely; that John Doty was a resident about 1766 of Somerset County, N. J., then probably eighty-six years of age, and that he lived probably to a very old age there; that he married first, probably, at Piscataway, N. J., or New York City, a lady of French descent named Duane, and later in life, probably in Somerset County, N. J., a second wife whose family name was Pyatte. The Duanes were a distinguished, wealthy and influential family in New York City. It is very probable also that there were two children by each marriage, but further than this there is no record to guide us. It is probable that John Doty, by 1766, was a prosperous farmer, settled in Somerset County, N. J., and that he died there sometime later.

3263. EDWARD DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J., May 14, 1685.

The cattle mark of "Edward Dote" is entered upon the Town Records of Piscataway, N. J., under date Dec. 24, 1712. The only other information that we have of him is derived from his will, which is filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J. It is dated Oct. 18, 1717, and was proved Nov. 19, 1717, showing that his death occurred very soon after it was signed. In it, "Edward Dotie of Piscataway, Middlesex County, N. J., Plantor," bequeaths, first, to his well beloved mother, Jane Doty, the use of twelve acres of land during her life; second, all his plantation to be equally divided between his "two sons John Doty and Jeremie Doty," or if they die without issue then to go to his wife Sarah and his daughter Sarah Doty; third, to his daughter Sarah Doty, 15£, to be paid to her when she comes of age; and fourth, to his wife Sarah Doty all of his personal property. The executors were his wife Sarah Doty and Thomas Davis of Somerset County, N. J. The will shows therefore that he married a wife Sarah and that they had children.

Children, b. Piscataway, N. J.:

3293. i. JOHN, b. prob. about 1712.
3294. ii. JEREMIAH, b. prob. about 1714.
3295. iii. SARAH, b. prob. about 1715.

3264. JAMES DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J,, Sept. 17, 1686; m. there, Sept. 16, 1712, Phebe Slater, b. there, July 28, 1693, dau. Edward Slater and Elizabeth Bonham.

In the town records of Piscataway, N. J., now at Dunellen, N. J., appears under the date of Jan. 2, 1709, the cattle mark of "James Dote," the entries of his brother's mark being at different dates in the same book.

1710. "James Dote" was made Freeman.

The manuscript left by Miss Susan Doughty, says that "James, brother of Samuel, lived at Turkey," now New Providence, Union Co., N. J. This is probably an error. There is no trace whatever at New Providence of James Doty having ever lived there.

Among the records in the office of the Secretary of State, at Trenton, N. J., is the will, dated and proved 1745, of Benjamin Hull of Piscataway, N. J., in which he devises several small legacies to his brother and nephew, and then a life interest to his wife Elizabeth, after whose death his lands are to be divided between his cousins, Benjamin Doty, who lives with him, his brother, Benajah Doty, and Thomas and Mary Davis. His brother-in-law, Benjamin Martin of Piscataway, and the widow are appointed executors. Further investigation shows that Thomas and Mary Davis were the children of Thomas Davis who married Mary Drake. She was a daughter of John Drake and granddaughter of Francis Drake, the first settler. John Drake in his will, gave legacies to his daughters, Elizabeth Hull, wife of Benjamin Hull, and Filizatea Martin, wife of Benjamin Martin; but though all his children are probably mentioned in his will there are no Dotys.

Among the earliest settlers at Piscataway who came there with Samuel Doty and Francis Drake were Hopewell Hull, the grandfather of Benjamin Hull, Hugh Dunn, who married in 1671 Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Drake, and Benjamin, Samuel and Edmund Dunham. The Dunhams were the children, or possibly the grandchildren of John Dunham of Plymouth, the neighbor there of Edward Doty. He had a large family and some of his children removed to Eastham on Cape Cod, Mass., and as recorded heretofore, the records of Eastham, Mass., show that Benajah Dunham of that place bought, 1668, all the interest of Samuel Doty in the lands at Dartmouth as devised to him by the will of his father. Plymouth, Mass., records show also the marriage, in 1660, of Benajah Dunham of Eastham to Elizabeth Tilson, and the same year of Benjamin Dunham of Eastham to Mary Tilson.

The names Benjamin, Benajah and Micajah were common names among the Dunhams at Plymouth and Eastham, and it is not easy to distinguish which generation carried these names in the emigration to New Jersey. It is pobable from the will of Benjamin Hull, 1745, which shows that Benjamin Doty was living with him, that Benjamin and Benajah Doty were orphans, or at least that their father was not living.

Children:

3296. i. MARY, b. Piscataway, May 23, 1713.
3297. ii. ELIZABETH, b. Piscataway, Oct. 12, 1714.

3299. iv. EDWARD, b. Somerset Co., N. J., May 27, 1718; said to have d. without heirs.
3300. v. JAMES, b. Piscataway, Jan. 19, 1719–20.
3301. vi. BENJAMIN, b. Piscataway, May 17, 1721.
3302. vii. BENAJAH, b. Piscataway, about 1723.

3265. JONATHAN DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J., Feb. 24, 1687–8; m. there about 1717, a wife, Mary.

His cattle mark is entered upon the town records of Piscataway as follows: "March 25, 1717. The marks of Samuel Doty are now the marks of his ondley son Jonathan Doty," the mark being the same that was entered, 1686, or earlier as the mark of Samuel Dotie. It is not clear what is meant by the expression, "his ondley son," for he was certainly not the only son of his father, nor was he the only son remaining at Piscataway at this time.

The family name of his wife nowhere appears, and there is no tradition in the family that throws any light upon it. He was probably the first of his family to emigrate to the beautiful and fertile valley of Basking Ridge, Somerset County, N. J., whither he was accompanied by his children, and followed by so many of his nephews, that the village and town seem almost to have been a Doty settlement. Among the papers of Lord Stirling, heretofore referred to, among the earliest leases recorded is one dated August 16, 1739, to Jonathan Doty of Somerset County, 150 acres at Basking Ridge, on the east side of Dead River. In the body of this lease the name is written Doughty, but it is signed "Jonathan Doty." The lease provides that he is to plant an orchard of 150 apple trees and put up a building. It is probable, however, that he was a resident of the town earlier.

There is nothing further on record to indicate the character of his life or the date of his death. His children later were all in possession of comfortable farms and homes at Basking Ridge, and the intelligent character of his descendants there leads to the belief that he was a successful and thrifty farmer, who gave his children the benefit of a fair education and good training and left them in comfortable circumstances at his death. The names of his children are given in the order in which they appeared on the record manuscript of Miss Susan Doughty, heretofore quoted, except that the name of Joshua is inserted upon the authority of several aged members of the family.

3268. JOSEPH DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Jane Harman, b. Piscataway, N. J., Oct. 30, 1696.

A very fair, though not entirely complete nor strictly accurate list of his family and decendants will be found in Littell's "Genealogies of the Passaic Valley, N. J." Littell incorrectly states, however, that Joseph Doty came from the east end of Long Island to the Passaic Valley. Many other families did so emigrate about that time, but Joseph Doty came direct from Piscataway soon after the death of his father, probably about 1717, and settled on part of Lot 39 of the Elizabethtown lots in the Stony Hill Valley, in the immediate vicinity of the present village of New Providence, N. J.

The record of Miss Susan Doughty, frequently referred to heretofore and which has served so largely to identify and to locate the various branches of the family in New Jersey, stated that Joseph Doty "lived in Turkey." It was assumed that Turkey in New Jersey was meant, but an active search through the various localities known to the present generation as "Turkey," failed to give any clew to this family until it was discovered that the present village and town of New Providence, Union County, N. J., formerly bore the name of "Turkey." Tradition ascribes the change of name to the providential preservation of the people from injury at the falling of the galleries in the church on a Sunday, but between services. Joseph Doty was a prominent member of this church, the Presbyterian Church, which stands in the centre of the village at the Cross Roads, and which some of his descendants still attend. The records of the church are well kept and his name frequently appears as an officer or trustee.

He married, probably about 1721–2, Sarah Badgly who, it is stated by Littell, came with her brothers John and James Badgly from the east end of Long Island and settled in the Stony Hill Valley, between the first and second mountains. Soon after marriage Joseph Doty built a house for his residence on Stoney Hill about one mile from the village of New Providence. The old homestead is still standing in a fair state of preservation, and was occupied a few years since by his great granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Doty Pitts. His farm extended down into the more fertile valley, and here he lived until his death.

The record kept by Rev. Mr. Elmer, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, says "old Mr. Doty died September 10, 1768." His will is on record at Trenton, N. J. It is dated September 3, 1768, at Elizabeth, Essex County, N. J., and gives "to my dearly beloved wife Sarah," the homestead in which they lived and the personal property belonging thereto, and mentions his "eldest son George Doty," his sons Anthony and John, his "eldest daughter Elizabeth, wife of Jeremiah Ludlow, deceased," and his "youngest daughter Sarah, wife of William Carl," to all of whom legacies were left. The will was proved October 14, 1768. The witnesses were Uriah and Phebe Hedgers, who were undoubtedly Uriah Hedges, Jr., and wife, whose maiden name was Phebe Dayton. He was a son of Uriah Hedges, who married Betsey Badgly, sister of Sarah, and who owned part of Lot 39 of the Elizabethtown lots, next to Joseph Doty.

Mrs. Sarah Doty died probably a little before August 20, 1785, at which time her son George was granted letters of administration upon her estate.

Children, b. New Providence, N. J.:

3318. i. JOSEPH, b. prob. 1722; d. young.
3319. ii. GEORGE, b. prob. 1723.

3323. vi. SARAH, b. prob. about 1735; m. William Carl, prob. son of Jonathan Carle, who lived in the Passaic Valley, N. J., but removed early.

3271. NATHANIEL DOTY, prob. son Samuel Doty and Jane Harmon, b. Piscataway, N. J., about 1707–8.

Nathaniel Doty's name is not entered on the register of births, etc., at Piscataway, but the tradition and record so frequently referred to of Miss Susan Doty, mentions Nathaniel as brother of Samuel, Jr., and others and gives the names of several of his children. Nathaniel Doty probably removed early to Mendham, Morris Co., N. J., where his children were living at the close of the Revolution.

Children:

3324. i. JACOB, m. a wife, Zeruiah, he was a Revolutionary soldier; minute man in Morris Co , N. J. militia; d. 1793. Jacob Johnson and Samuel Clutter, adm. deeds to Jacob, 1781–1789, at Mendham.
3325. ii. NATHANIEL.
3326. iii. JANE.

3272. SAMUEL DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Elizabeth Hull, b. Piscataway, N. J., Dec. 12, 1700; m. there Feb. 13, 1723, Abigail Springer, dau. Dennis and Abigail Springer.

According to tradition he lived "between the mountains, near Browstown, N. J." Browstown was a small village about a mile or so north of Plainfield, Union Co., N. J. Its bounds may have extended up to the valley called Washington Valley. Very little further is known of him. He was a farmer, and died in 1777. He left no will; but letters of administration were granted to his son, Benjamin, January 22, 1778. The manuscript of Miss Susan Doughty before mentioned gives his

Children:

3327. i. JOHN, of whom we have no other mention; prob. d. early.
3328. ii. JOSEPH, of whom we have no other mention, prob. d. early.
3329. iii. BENJAMIN, b. Browstown, N. J., prob. about 1730–1735. He lived Somerset Co., N. J., and there is no evidence of any marriage or family. He administered upon his father's will and was granted letters of administration Jan. 22, 1778, and filed his account, which was approved Jan. 22, 1779. He d. May, 1780. His will is on record at Trenten, N. J. It was executed May 4, 1780, and proved at Bernardstown, Somerset Co., N. J., May 30, 1780, and bequeaths one-half of his estate to the children of his sister, Rachel Sutton, and the remainder to the children of his brother, Isaac Doty, deceased; the property to be sold when Henry Doty, son of his brother, Isaac, shall become twenty-one years of age.
3330. iv. ABRAM, of whom there is no other mention.
3331. v. ISAAC, b. Somerset, N. J., prob. about 1740.
3332. vi. RACHEL, b. Somerset.

3273. MOSES DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Elizabeth Hull, b. Piscataway, N. J., Aug. 31, 1702. He is described as a yeoman, and lived Dead River, Bernardstown, Somerset Co., N. J.

Among the papers of James Alexander (Lord Stirling) now in possession of the New Jersey Historical Society at Newark, N. J., is a lease, dated May 5, 1747, from James Alexander to Moses Doty of Basking Ridge, of 371 acres formerly in Nathaniel Rolfe's lease and lying on Dead River and Pasauk River, Somerset, Co., N. J. Also, June 4, 1751, a deed from James Alexander to Moses Doty of Basking Ridge, for a consideration of 204£, Jersey currency, of 204 acres on Dead and Pasauk Rivers. A deed is on record, 1762, from Moses Doty to Rev. Samuel Kennedy, of land at Basking Ridge, and in 1766 a mortgage of some of his lands there, which is witnessed by his cousins, Jonathan and William Doty.

Moses Doty's will is on record in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J. It is dated March 27, 1775, and proved the 19th of April following, showing his death between those dates. In it he bequeaths his property in shares as follows: 1st. To my grandson, Moses Doty, son of my son, Moses Doty, deceased, 50£, when he comes of age. 2d. To my two granddaughters, sisters of my aforesaid grandson, Mary and Sarah, 25£ each. 3d. To Elizabeth Doty, the daughter of Elizabeth Doty, deceased, who lives with John Bloom, under his care, 50£, when she is eighteen years of age. 4th. To my daughter Mary, wife of Reuben Compton, 50£. 5th. To my daughter, the wife of Garret Rosaboom, 70£ 6th. All the rest of my estate to my two sons, Solomon and Jousua Doty, who, with my trusty brother-in-law, John Bloom, are to be the executors of my estate.

The information given here is too meagre to determine as to the name of his wife, who would appear to have died before him, or as to the precise manner in which John Bloom became his brother-in-law. But we may infer that the maiden name of his wife was probably Bloom. According to the manuscript left by his granddaughter Miss Susan Doughty, they had

Children, b. Bernardstown, N. J.:

3333. i. MOSES, b. prob. about 1730–3.
3334. ii. THOMAS, not mentioned in the will or otherwise.
3335. iii. SOLOMON, b. prob. about 1740.
3336. iv. JOSHUA, b. 1744.
3337. v. MARY, m. Reuben Compton.
3338. vi. REBBECA prob. m. Garret Rosaboom.
3339. vii. ELIZABETH.
3340. viii. MERCY.

3275. DANIEL DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Elizabeth Hull, b. Piscataway, N. J., April 5, 1707.

Daniel Doughty mortgaged, in 1769, his land in Sussex County, N. J., lying on Paquess River. This was probably near the present town of Belvidere, in Warren County, N. J., which county was formed by being taken from Sussex County in 1824. And it is possible that it was here, or near here, that his father, Samuel Doty, lived in 1746, at the time when, in making an affidavit, he gives his residence as in Morris County, "near the forks of the Delaware."

The manuscript of Miss Susan Doughty, to which reference has heretofore been made, says that Daniel Doughty lived "near Easton," referring to Easton, Pa., but at the time it was written this would apply to the locality above described.

The records of Northampton County, Pa., in which Easton is situated, though dating back to 1752, do not mention the names of Doty or Doughty, nor is there any further trace of this family in the various county records in New Jersey. It is probable that he wrote his name "Doughty," and that his descendants may have kept the same spelling. According to the account given he had

Children:

3341. i. DANIEL.
3342. ii. MARY.
3343. iii. ELIZABETH.

3276. JOHN DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Elizabeth Hull, b. Piscataway, N. J., June 4, 1709. He lived Basking Ridge, N. J.

Among the papers of James Alexander (Lord Stirling) in the possession of the New Jersey Historical Society at Newark, N. J., appears a lease dated March 24, 1739, from James Alexander to John Doty of Basking Ridge, N. J., of 300 acres there. The lease is witnessed by Samuel Doty and Jonathan Doty, probably his father and uncle. July 24, 1746, notice was served on John Doty to renew the above lease, and the renewal was dated February 28, 1747. In all these papers and elsewhere where his his name is signed as witness, it is given as John Doty.

Tradition from various sources among his descendants gives the maiden name of his wife as Skillman, and as one of his sons received that name, the tradition is probably correct, although her Christian name has not been discovered. The Skillmans were of Dutch descent, and the name "Ocy" has been such a favorite name for the female descendants of this family that it seems probable that the name of John Doty's wife was Ocy Skillman.

John Doty was an active man in his vicinity, intelligent and enterprising. His children partook largely of these characteristics, and were well educated for the time. Unfortunately he was cut off in the prime of life, being killed by the Indians at or near the Delaware River in one of the contests of the Indian war of 1757. His large family, thus left to the care of the widow, were well brought up at Basking Ridge, and their activity and usefulness to society bears evidence of the worthy training they received. His widow died probably at Basking Ridge, though the date does not appear.

Children, b. Basking Ridge, N. J:

3344. i. SAMUEL, b. 1733.
3345. ii. CORNELIUS, b. prob. 1736.

From Records of Philadelphia, Pa., 1764, Sept. 5, Ebenezer Doty, blacksmith, of Southwark, and Margaret, his wife, buy on east side of Second street, Southwark, Philadelphia, Pa. The tradition in the Eastern branch of the family is that he lived at Salem, now in Salem County, N. J., but perhaps at that time in Burlington County. 1783, Sept. 10. Letters of administration granted to Hugh McClutchie on the estate of Ebenezer Dotey, late of Burlington County.

3282. ISAAC DOTY, son John Doty and —— Duane, b. prob. Piscataway, N. J., about 1712; m. 1st, prob. in New Jersey about 1737, a Miss Reyno. The name of Reyno is a frequent one in the early history of New York and New Jersey. It is met with in Richmond County, N. Y. (Staten Island), and in the eastern part of New Jersey near there. The name is undoubtedly of French origin and is written also Reynaud and Reynauld. In more modern times it is written also Reno and Reynolds. The southern manuscript quoted heretofore says, "Grandfather Reyno married a Williams on Staten Island. He lived to be 108 years old." Isaac Doty m., 2d, prob. also in New Jersey, about 1760–5, a Miss Roy. The southern manuscript says that he was living in 1766 near Princeton College, and that he lived to be 107 years old, which if true would make his death about 1819; but the records of the county and State add no further information.

And possibly others.

3283. AZARIAH DOTY, prob. son John Doty and prob. his 2d wife, —— Pyatte, is said to have been b. 1731. Though the names in this family point to a descent from John Doty, as above, this has not been established as a fact. There is no tradition in the family extending further back than to Azariah Doty. He is said to have lived prob. at Perth Amboy, N. J., or in that vicinity. The names of his chil. rest entirely upon tradition.

They lived in the adjoining town of Minisink, Orange Co., N. Y., and sold the lands, 1801. After Mrs. Doty's death letters of administration were granted to Cotton Mather.

3376. iv. CALVIN.
3377. v. HENRY.
3378. vi. SARAH.
3379. vii. MARTHA.

One of the daughters m. Cotton Mather.

3293. JOHN DOTY, son Edward Doty and his wife, Sarah, b. Piscataway, N. J., about 1712; m. prob. Somerset Co., N. J., but the name of his wife has not been discovered. They probably lived Somerville, N. J., where he d. about 1778. He was prob. a Revolutionary soldier, private in Capt. Jacob Ten Eyck's Co., 1st Battalion, Somerset Co., N. J., Militia. His sons were in the same company.

Children, b. Somerset Co.:

3380. i. JEREMY (Jeremiah); not m.; d. Somerville, N. J. Was prob. a Revolutionary soldier, in the same company as his father.
3381. ii. SARAH, m. William Spader. They lived New York City and had a family there.
3382. iii. MARIA, m. James Voorhees.
3383. iv. JOHN, b. 1756.
3384. v. PETER, b. prob. about 1758.
3385. vi. CATHARINE, m. —— Voorhees, prob. brother of James Voorhees. They removed to the "Redstone Country," O.

3386. vii. ELIZABETH, not m.; lived New York City with her sister Mrs. Sarah Spader.
3387. viii. JANE, m. William Chivis. They lived New York City.
3389. x. MARGARET, m. Daniel Spader. They lived New York City.

3294. JEREMIAH DOTY, son Edward Doty and his wife, Sarah, b. Piscataway, N. J., prob. about 1714; m. Hampye Covert, dau. Teunis Covert of Somerset Co., N. J. They settled and lived in that county. He is said to have d. in N. J. about 1790. She d. Hector, N. Y., a few years later.

The records of Somerset County were burned during the Revolutionary War, and the existing records afford but little information of dates previous to that time. 1766, August 15, Jeremiah Dote, cordwainer, mortgages his land in Somerset County, N. J. 1788, June 3, Jeremiah Doty and Hampye his wife of Somerset County, acknowledge a deed relating to property bequeathed to her by her father Teunis Covert of Somerset County, in his will dated January 9, 1732.

They probably lived in that part of Somerset County which adjoins the town of Piscataway, or possibly in the village of Somerville, and he followed the business of cordwainer or shoemaker. He was probably a Revolutionary soldier, private in Somerville Militia. Several of his children removed to Central New York.

Children, b. Somerset Co., N. J.:

3390. i. MOTCHEY, b. prob. about 1744.
3391. ii. JENNY, b. prob. about 1747; m. Henry Tucker.
3392. iii. NELLY, b. 1749.
3393. iv. HAMPYE, b. 1752. She was not m. Her will is on record at Somerville, N. J. It was made Oct. 31, 1829 and was proved Jan. 19, 1830. It is signed Hampie Doty of Somerset Co., N. J., and in it she devises all her estate to her two nieces, Hampie, wife of Stephen Brown, and Mary, wife of Tolbert Sering.
3394. v. SALLY, b. 1755.
3395, vi. EDWARD.
3396. vii. JOHN, b. prob. about 1757.
3397. viii. JACOB, b. 1759.

3301. BENJAMIN DOTY, prob. son James Doty and Phebe Slater, b. Piscataway, N. J., May 17, 1721. He prob. lost his parents before he became of age and then lived with his cousin, Benjamin Hull, as shown by the will of the latter, 1745.

His cattle mark is entered in the records of the town of Piscataway, February 3, 1749. July 11, 1759, Benjamin Doty and his brother Benajah sold the lands bequeathed to them by their cousin, Benjamin Hull, to Thomas Skinner, Jr., and they removed to North Carolina where they settled in Onslow County and afterwards lived. North Carolina history shows that both brothers took a leading and prominent part in public affairs. They represented the county in the legislative meetings of the State Assembly in 1775–6, which took active measures to support the Continental Congress. He was elected, April 4, 1776, delegate from Onslow County to the General Meeting of Deputies. As the State was the seat of constant warfare and skirmishing between the opposing elements of its population they probably took an active part in this also. Little further is known of Benjamin Doty. He is reported to have had two sons, as below, but no trace of them or their descendants has been found, and it is uncertain whether Benjamin Doty died in Onslow County, North Carolina, or removed elsewhere.

Children, by report:

3398. i. LEVI.
3399. ii. CHRISTOPHER.

3302. BENAJAH DOTY, son James Doty and Phebe Slater, b. Piscataway, N. J., about 1723.

His cattle mark is entered on the town records of Piscataway, January 21, 1751, and the same year he was elected constable of the town, succeeding in that position Isaac Doty who was probably his uncle, and who had held it since 1744. He received by the will of his cousin, Benjamin Martin, certain pieces of land at Piscataway, which he sold to Thomas Skinner, Jr., July 11, 1759, and undoubtedly emigrated at that time with his brother Benjamin to Onslow County, N. C.

Here, like his brother, he took an active part in public affairs, was a Representative to the State Assemblies of 1875–6, participated in the debates and counselled, with others, the action which led the State to be one of the earliest in demanding a separation from the British Government, and to be most earnest and prompt in supporting the measures of the Continental Congress. He was one of the delegates to the Convention, 1776, which framed the Constitution of the Colony, and held various local positions of trust and honor. He was member of the House of Commons of North Carolina, 1777–8.

He was married twice. First, perhaps in New Jersey, but the name of his wife has not been discovered, nor is it known by his descendants. He married second, Onslow County, N. C., about 1774, Elizabeth Chatwin (or possibly Chatran), born probably North or South Carolina, 1737. She lived to the age of 101 years, and her grandson, Rev. William Edward Doty of Greenwood, La., who has furnished many of the facts in the early history of this branch, remembered hearing her tell how, during the Revolutionary War, she lived in North Carolina, and having buried her effects and property in the ground, she helped to make potato hills over them to conceal them from the Tories.

Benajah Doty died in Onslow County, N. C., 1780. His widow married second, a man named Willie, or Wylie, and by him had a daughter, Sarah Ann, who married Hugh Kader Harrel, and their daughter Elizabeth married John Chatwin Doty (No. 3607). She married third, —— Cottrell, and fourth, John Turner, but survived all, and died at the residence of her son James Doty, at Hernando, De Soto County, Miss., on her birthday, 1838, at the age of 101 years.

3400. i. A dau., m. —— Brack.
3401. ii. A dau., m. —— Warren. It is thought that they both removed to Georgia.

By his 2d wife:

3402. iii. LEMUEL, b. Onslow Co., 1775.
3403. iv. JAMES, b. Onslow Co., 1778.

3303. WILLIAM DOTY, son Jonathan Doty and his wife, Mary, b. Piscataway, N. J., Sept. 11, 1719. He was probably the oldest son of his father and removed with him to Basking Ridge, N. J. Here he became a blacksmith.

April 4, 1748, Lord Stirling leased to William Doty of Basking Ridge, sixty-five acres there, and July 2, 1753, for a consideration of 80£, Jersey currency, he conveyed to the same William Doty a farm of eighty acres there. William Doty's name appears later, 1766, as witness to a mortgage given by his cousin, Moses Doty, at Basking Ridge. Unfortunately, the county records having been burned during the Revolutionary War, there is nothing further positively known of this family. The above facts are gathered from the Lord Sterling papers in possession of the New Jersey Historical Society at Newark, N. J.

He was a Revolutionary soldier, a minute man in Somerset County, N. J., militia. It is probable that William Doty was a farmer and blacksmith in good circumstances, and that he had a family. All trace of him and them has been lost from the present generation at Basking Ridge, and it is probable that during the Revolution and the emigration that followed it, the family disappeared from that vicinity.

3404. Possibly descended from William Doty is Jesse, b. Basking Ridge, N. J., Sept. 17, 1760.

3304. JONATHAN DOTY, son Jonathan Doty and his wife, Mary, b. Piscataway, N. J., prob. about 1724. He removed with his father to Basking Ridge, N. J., and m. there Patience Sutton.

He was a farmer and undoubtedly lived and died at Basking Ridge, though, other than the appearance of his name as a witness to papers dated 1766, there is nothing on the few existing records of the town refering to him. The uniformly intelligent and enterprising character of his children shows that they received unusual advantages in their youth, or inherited special traits of character from their parents. Either he or his son Jonathan was a teamster in Captain Asabel Hinman's Team Brigade of New Jersey in the Revolutionary War.

Children, b. Basking Ridge:

3405. i. JONATHAN, b. about 1754.
3406. ii. ZEBULON, b. about 1758.
3407. iii. NATHANIEL, b. Oct. 19, 1761.
3408. iv. JOSEPH, b. Aug. 31, 1764.
3409. v. WILLIAM, b. Oct. 8, 1767.
3410. vi. REBECCA, b. prob. about 1770; m. —— Kennan or Cannan, and removed to Pennsylvania, prob. Westmoreland Co. They had a dau. who m. —— Goodwin.

3306. JOSHUA DOTY, son Jonathan Doty and his wife, Mary, b. prob. Basking Ridge, about 1730; m. and lived there; prob. d. at a comparatively early age.

His name was not mentioned on the manuscript record of Miss Susan Doughty in her list of the children of Jonathan Doty; nor is there any record or tradition among the descendants of Joshua that affords any information as to his ancestors. Certain aged residents of Basking Ridge, N. J., descended from his brothers Jonathan and Joseph, have however given positive assurance that they were so related. Mrs. Susan Doty Craig, daughter of Daniel Doty and granddaughter of Joseph, who had always lived at Basking Ridge, was very positive in this assertion; she recollected very well Moses Doty, son of Joshua, who lived at Dover, N. J.; knew that he was own cousin to her father and stopped at her father's house whenever he visited the vicinity, because they were cousins. This being corroborated by other old residents of Basking Ridge, it is deemed stronger evidence than the absence of name in the manuscript quoted above, which is perhaps accounted for by the fact that Joshua Doty died probably before the Revolution, and his son, having removed to Dover, the family had passed out of the memory of others.

There is no record of his wife. His descendants say that he had but one child to grow up, though passibly there may have been others who died early.

Child:

3411. i. MOSES, b. Basking Ridge, N. J., April 1, 1763.

3307. JOSEPH DOTY, son Jonathan Doty and his wife Mary, b. prob. Basking Ridge, N. J., about 1735; m. there, Grace Colyer. They lived Basking Ridge, and he was buried there, but there is no stone to mark the exact spot or show dates. He was a farmer. She is said to have lived to advanced age, and prob. d. 1818–9, at residence of her son Barnet Doty, Morris Co., N. J.

Children, b. Basking Ridge:

3418. vii. JANE, b. prob. about 1780; m. Morristown, N. J., Sept. 11, 1806, Joseph Riley. She d. Wilkesbarre.

3311. BENJAMIN DOUGHTY, son Benjamin Doty and Abigail Whitehead, b. prob. Middlesex Co., N. J., about 1710–13; m. there, a wife, Rachel.

February 13, 1747–8. Benjamin Doughty and Lydia Mundin, both of Middlesex County, licensed to marry. She may have been a wife.

A deed on record at Goshen, the county seat of Orange County, N. Y., but filed there probably about 1820, is as follows: "1725, October 8, Jonathan Whitehead of Jamaica, Queens County, N. Y., in consideration of the love, affection and good will I bear my grandson Benjamin Doughty, son of my daughter Abigail Doughty, now ye wife of Benjamin Doughty of ye County of Burlington in West Jersey," conveys to him a certain tract of land at a place called Minisink in counties of Ulster and Orange, which said lot is known by number thirty four, formerly laid out and surveyed by Philip Rokeby as part of his patent.

In the "Calendar of New York Colonial Manuscripts," endorsed "Land Papers," in the office of the Secretary of State of New York, appears, 1765, September 2, Petition of Benjamin Doughty of the County of Ulster, for a grant and confirmation of a lot in the Minisink Angle.

Again in the records of Ulster County, New York, dated 1771, January 3, whereas, Jonathan Whitehead of Jamaica, Queens County, did purchase, February 17, 1720, of Elizabeth Compton, formerly widow of Philip Rokeby, a certain lot in the Wallkill, containing about 1000 acres and did convey the same by deed of gift to his grandson Benjamin Doughty, the latter sells a part of the lot to Stacy Beakes. This deed is signed by Benjamin Doughty and Rachel, his wife, and witnessed by Joseph Horner, James Hill, Mary Horner and Benjamin Doughty, Jr.

Other deeds, similarly signed, follow: 1777, October 7, to Joseph Howell for 100£. 1778, August 15, to Andrew Clark McNish for 170£. 1779, September 4, to Berzalael Seely, 250 acres for 6,300£, Continental currency. 1779, November 30, to John Everett, 8 acres.

No further trace of this family has been discovered.

3325. NATHANIEL DOTY, son Nathaniel Doty, b. prob. Mendham, N. J., about 1728; m. there, 1753, Abigail Clark, b. there, dau. Henry Clark.

They lived Mendham, N. J., and at the opening of the revolution he volunteered, and, with his brother Jacob, became a member of the company of minute men that was raised in Morris County for the New Jersey militia.

Deeds are on record as late as 1796 from Nathaniel Doty to his son Henry. It is probable that he d. Mendham, shortly after 1796.

Child:

3440. i. HENRY, b. Mendham, 1754.

3331. ISAAC DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Abigail Springer, b. Somerset Co., N. J., prob. about 1740; m. there a wife, Mary. He lived on Stony Hill, Elizabethboro, N. J., which is probably still called Stony Hill, and in the present town of New Providence, N. J.

At the first call of the Revolutionary War he enlisted in the Continental army, and was wounded at the battle on Long Island, August 27 and 28, 1776. His will was signed there, and as it was proved at Bernardstown, Somerset County, N. J., October 30th following, it is almost certain that he died from the effects of the wound, and probably within a day or two of the date of the will which reads as follows: "First year of the American States—1776, this 28th day of August, I, Isaac Doty of Elizabethboro, Somerset County, N. J., lying wounded at Long Island," etc. He divides his lands, which lie on Stony Hill, between his wife, Mary, his two sons, Samuel and Henry, and his two daughters, Rachael and Sarah.

From the records of Cayuga County, N. Y., at Auburn, N. Y., 1796, April 16, Henry Doty and Mary, his wife, and David Stewart and Rachel, his wife, all of Somerset County, N. J., sell lands in the town of Dryden, Onondaga County, N. Y. (now in Tompkins County, N. Y.), "issued to Isaac Doty, a gunner in the American army during the Revolution, and by him at his death bequeathed in his will one-half to his son Henry Doty and one-half to his son Samuel Doty, which said Samuel Doty is since dead, leaving no children or lawful heirs, except his brother Henry Doty, Rachael Doty, now Rachel Stewart, his sister, and Sarah Stewart, sister to said Samuel Doty."

Children:

3441. i. SAMUEL, b. about 1765–7; prob. not m.; d. without issue.
3442. ii. HENRY, b. 1769.
3443. iii. RACHEL, b. prob. about 1763–4.
3444. iv. SARAH, m. —— Stewart, whose Christian name or family has not been discovered.

3332. RACHAEL DOTY, dau. Samuel Doty, b. Somerset Co., N. J., prob. about 1745; m. Washington Valley, N. J., Isaac Sutton, b. there, son David Sutton. They lived Somerset Co. for some time, but about 1784 removed to Fayette Co., Pa.

Children:

3445. i. JACOB.
3446. ii. ISRAEL.
3447. iii. SAMUEL.

3333. MOSES DOTY, son Moses Doty of Dead River, Bernardstown, N. J., b. there prob. about 1730–3; m. a wife, Rachel. He is called a yeoman, and lived Somerset Co., N. J., and d. there, 1759. His widow was appointed administratrix of his estate Oct. 9, 1759. All that is known of his family is from the reference to them in the will of his father, who, dying in 1775, names the children of his son Moses, deceased.

Children, b. Somerset Co.:

3448. i. MOSES, b. prob. about 1754.
3449. ii. MARY, b. prob. about 1756.
3450. iii. SARAH, b. prob. about 1758.

3335. SOLOMON DOTY, son Moses Doty of Dead River, b. Bernardstown, N. J., prob. about 1740; m. a wife, Hannah. They lived Newton, N. J., where he d. in the summer of 1784, his wife surviving him.

His will is on record in the office of the Secretary of State, at Trenton, N. J. It is dated July 24, 1784, signed "Solomon Doty" and probated October 12, 1784. He names as his executors his wife, Hannah Doty, his brother, Joshua Doty, and his friend, Amos Pettet. His estate is divided between his wife and children as named below, and as the will specifies that Solomon's share is to be retained by the executors until he becomes twenty-one years of age, it is probable that he was the youngest child, and the only son then under age.

Children, all b. prob. Newton, N. J., and prob. between the years 1762 and 1780:

3451. i. THOMAS, prob. lived Sussex Co., N. J. He administered on his brother Solomon's estate, an inventory of which he filed at Newton, N. J., Dec. 29, 1806. His name is there signed Thomas Doughty, though written in the body of the paper Thomas Doty.
3452. ii. MOSES.
3453. iii. MERCY.
3454. iv. MARGARET.
3455. v. ELIZABETH, prob. lived Newton; d. there, 1817. Frederick Buckner was administrator.
3456. vi. SOLOMON, not m.; d. prob. Newton, 1806. "An inventory of the estate of Solomon Doty" was filed at Newton, Dec. 29, 1806.

3336. JOSHUA DOTY, son Moses Doty of Dead River, b. Bernardstown, N. J., 1744; m. Somerset Co., N. J., Sarah Boyle, b. there 1739, dau. Solomon Boyle. He d. Somerville, N. J., Dec. 27, 1822; she d. there May 25, 1808.

A record of his family is given in Littell's "Genealogies of the Passaic Valley." Solomon Boyle was an Irishman, who landed in New York City, probably about 1730. Here he married a French lady who had but lately left Paris during some revolutionary trouble, and purchased a tract of land on the Passaic River about two and a half miles from Basking Ridge, N. J. He cultivated this farm and also established a grist and saw mill at the west end of Long Hill, in Somerset County. Upon the marriage of his daughter to Joshua Doty the latter removed to this mill and afterward resided there, it being known as "Doty's Mills." At his death it was inherited by his son, Solomon.

Children, b. Somerset Co., N. J.:
3457. i. SOLOMON, b. Sept. 26, 1772.
3458. ii. MARGARET, b. Aug. 2, 1777.
3459. iii. SUSAN, b. 1781; not m.; d. Somerville, N. J., May 25, 1825. She was a very intelligent and accomplished lady; she prepared for the information of her family a genealogy, a copy of which, in the possession of her nephew, the late Joshua Doughty, Esq., of Somerville, N. J., has been heretofore referred to, and was found very useful in the preparation of this history. She and her brother adopted the name "Doughty" by which his descendants have since been known.

3344. SAMUEL DOTY, son John Doty and —— Skillman, b. Basking Ridge, N. J., 1733; m. a wife, Keturah. They removed to Ohio, where he d. 1817; she d. there, aged 110 years.

Children:
3460. i. CORNELIUS, b. New Jersey, Sept., 1779.
3461. ii. LEVI.
3462. iii. JACOB.
3463. iv. JONATHAN.
3464. v. SAMUEL.

Above chil. may not be in order of birth.

3345. CORNELIUS DOTY, son John Doty and —— Skillman, b. Basking Ridge, N. J., about 1736; prob. m. there or in New Jersey, a wife, whose name has not been discovered, but who is said to have been of Dutch descent, and who was prob. connected with one of the Dutch families in the vicinity of his birth-place. They removed prob. shortly after m. to Cambridge, Washington Co., N. Y., where he settled on a farm.

It is probable that Cornelius Doty took part in the Indian War of 1757, and participated in the fighting at the Delaware River in that year, at which time his father was killed. His early experience made his services valuable and led him to volunteer at the very opening of the Revolution.

In the New York State Library at Albany, in the volume entitled, "Albany County Committee Proceedings," page 400, is noted, under date of April 11, 1776, "Cornelius Doty is recommended to the Provincial Congress, by the Albany Committee, for Second Major of the Cambridge Regiment," and again, "June 13, 1776, Cornelius Doty was elected a member of the Cambridge Committee of Safety," together with five others, all men of the highest distinction and wealth there. There is a tradition in the family that he served through the Revolution and with the rank of Colonel, and some further corroborative proof has been found in the records of the Comptroller's office of the State of New York.

At the close of the war or soon after, he removed to Half Moon, Saratoga County, N. Y., and several purchases of lands there by him are recorded in 1790–1796.

There is a complete absence of records in this family, and there is nothing to indicate where this brave and able soldier and citizen died. There is a tradition that he removed with his sons to the town of Western, Oneida County, N. Y., and died there, but there are no records in that town to show that he ever lived there or made purchase of any land there. His widow is reported to have died at Western, N. Y., about 1826. Careful investigation of the records of Washington, Albany and Oneida counties in N. Y., as well as personal visits to the localities mentioned and interviews with such of his descendants as could be found, have failed to furnish anything further of the history of this interesting member of the family. It is a matter of regret that no record has been kept in the family, nor are there any papers of any description to aid in the search, while among his descendants his very name has been forgotten.

His first marriage was probably before the commencement of the Revolutionary War, and he removed from New Jersey to the west bank of the Susquehanna River, in Pennsylvania. The name of the first wife was not even known by his children, Peter Doty and Mrs. Catherine Webb, from whom most of the information concerning this family has been received. It is thought he lived in Pennsylvania two years before the breaking out of hostilities. When the news came that the Indians were on the warpath, he and most of his neighbors packed up their goods and started back to New Jersey; the roads were full of fugitives, their goods being carried on the backs of cows and in every conceivable shape. At what time his first wife died is not known; it may have been in Pennsylvania, or shortly after the return to New Jersey. He, however, became a soldier of the Revolutionary army and did faithful service throughout the war. He was a private, minute man, Somerset County, New Jersey militia.

His second marriage occurred shortly after the close of the war, and he then removed with his family first to Cowanesque Valley, Tioga County, Pa., from there to Elmira, N. Y., then to Dansville, N. Y., from there to what was known then as "No. 5," now Canaseraga, Allegany County, N. Y., and finally to Doty's Corners, Steuben County, N. Y., where he died, aged 87 years, in 1839.

He entered the Revolutionary army at a very early age as a drummer-boy, but later joined the artillery branch of the service. In 1781 he is said to have commanded an artillery company on Staten Island, which he took across upon the ice to Amboy on the opposite New Jersey shore. In the records of Cayuga Co., N. Y., at Auburn, appears a certificate dated June 9, 1783, from General Washington, certifying that Isaac Doty, a gunner in the Second or New York Artillery Regiment, having faithfully served the United States from the 20th of February, 1779, until the present period, is discharged. Also, a certificate from Colonel John Lamb of the New York Artillery Regiment, that Isaac Doty has been honored with the badge of merit for four years faithful service.

For this service Isaac Doty received from the State of New York certain lands in Cayuga County, N. Y., which he sold March 2, 1793, to David Abeel, mariner, of New York City. Captain John Doughty, who was Captain of an artillery company in same regiment, and also received lands in Cayuga County, N. Y., may have been related to Isaac Doty.

In the records of the State of New Jersey he is credited with services as follows: Private in Second Company, Second Battalion, Second Establishment, New Jersey Continental line; served in the campaign in western Pennsylvania against the Six Nations, May to November, 1779, was transferred to First Company, Captain Nathaniel Bowman, Second Regiment; served in the Virginia campaign, took part in the battle of Yorktown, and was present at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, October 19, 1781, and served to the close of the war.

After the close of the war Isaac Doty returned to New York City and engaged in foreign trade that took him out of the country more or less, but about 1800 he removed to White Plains, N. Here their children were probably born and the family remained till about 1796, when the two brothers, John and Peter Doty, with their families, emigrated to Brooke County, Va., now West Virginia, and located nearly opposite the present city of Steubenville, Ohio. Shortly after his father's death, which occurred about 1790, he removed with his mother to Seneca Co., N. Y., to which locality several of his sisters had preceded him, there having been a large emigration to this vicinity from Somerset Co., N. J. Here he settled first at Ovid, N. Lemuel Doty was a prominent man in Onslow Co., which he represented in the Legislature and in the convention of 1806 to change the State constitution. Was also Sheriff of the county for sixteen consecutive years, and built with his own means the Onslow County Court House. His residence was at Plum Hill, Onslow County. He educated most of his nephews and nieces, gave largely to his relatives and divided his father's estate amongst them. Jonathan Doty removed from Basking Ridge, to Westmoreland County, Pa., soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, probably in 1784. He settled in the town of Derry, in that county, and here his children were born. Later he removed to Blairsville, where he subsequently lived. At Derry, besides cultivating a considerable farm, he probably kept a tavern, and being of an industrious and thrify disposition he gathered a considerable property, educated his children well and lived in comfort. In later years he became an exhorter of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was greatly respected for the probity of his life and many good qualities.

Children, by 1st wife :

He was a Revolutionary soldier, private, minute man of the Somerset County, New Jersey, Militia, New Jersey State Troops. After marriage he removed to Troy, N. J., and later lived at BaskingRidge, but about 1784-5 removed to Westmoreland County, Pa., and settled at Derry, near Blairsville, where several of his brothers soon followed him. This country at that time was almost a wilderness, there being but few settlers. He is said to have kept tavern for a while, but was certainly a farmer also. He made frequent visits to Basking Ridge, where his three oldest children were brought up and remained. In a "Census of families at Basking Ridge, 1818," made by Rev. Mr. Brownlee, there appears in the list of families the name of "Mrs. Colyer and four children," with a note added later, "married to Z. Doty in Westmoreland, Pa." It is probable from this that this marriage was consummated after 1818.

Lieutenant George Bockoven and Mary Whitekerneck. He d. Derry Township, Westmoreland Co., Pa., March 24, 1848. She d. there June 13, 1850.

He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. The Adjutant General of New Jersey certified August 4, 1896: "The records show Nathaniel Doty as a private, minute man, of the Morris County, New Jersey, Militia." The Commissioner of Pensions certified August 7, 1896: "Nathaniel Doty made application for pension November 22, 1842, at which time he was residing in Derry Township, Westmoreland Co., Pa., and eighty-four years of age, and his pension was allowed for eight months actual service as a private in the New Jersey troops, Revolutionary War; a part of the time he served under Captain Carter and Colonel Hathaway. He enlisted at Morristown, N. J." His father, his brother, Zebulon, and his father-in-law, Lieutenant George Bockoven, were also in the Revolution. He removed with his wife and two children and his brothers to Derry Township, Westmoreland County, about 1795, and purchased a farm there near "Alter's," which is now owned by his great-grandson, John D. McCurdy. His three brothers, Jonathan, Zebulon and William, and his sister, Rebecca (the whole family except Joseph), removed to Derry Township. He and his wife visited their early home in New Jersey three times. For the last few years of their lives they lived with their daughter, Mary Doty McCurdy, in Derry Township, near Latrobe, Pa. He was a man of good character and was highly respected by the community in which he lived. He was identified with Salem Presbyterian Church, in which his brother Jonathan was an elder, and in the graveyard of which he and his wife are buried.

Joseph Doty was the only one of his father's children who remained in Somerset County, N. J., and probably succeeded to the lands of his brothers and his parents there. He was a man of good education and address, very popular with all, of large acquaintance, and became prominent in the government of the county. For many years he held successively the offices of Sheriff, County Clerk and Surrogate, serving several terms of each. He amassed a considerable property, which he divided between his widow and children by his will, which is on record at Somerville, N. J. He provides especially in the will for the education of his sons, "Jonathan to be kept at Languages and to complete his education at College and to study Divinity, Joseph to be kept at school to complete a good English education and then to become a Merchant." The will of his widow is also on file at Somerville, 1859.

He built the first forge in Dover, and ran it for many years, finally selling it to the Rolling Mill Company. About 1800 he retired from the business, having saved enough by prudent management to enable him to live in comfort thereafter. He was a man of sound judgment; prudent and saving, plain and simple in his ways, of sterling integrity, temperate in all things. Both he and his wife were earnest and pious members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, she having been the first convert to its communion in the town. Their house became a meeting place for the faithful and a home for the preachers. Moses Doty was himself an exhorter, while his wife would go from house to house carrying aid to the sick and the poor, and urging her neighbors to join the church.

Child:

3687. i. MIRANDA.

In some way descended from Jonathan Doty (No. 3265) of Basking Ridge, N. J., there was living there, in 1818, as is found upon a list of families residing there made by Rev. Mr. Brownlee, Mrs. Keziah Doty, and also her children.

Children:

3688. i. PHEBE.
3689. ii. HANNAH.
3690. iii. SYLVESTER, b. prob. about 1807, as may be inferred from the date of his marriage.

As the children's names are given in above order it is probable that Phebe, the oldest, was born about 1800. Mrs. Keziah Doty was undoubtedly, in 1818, a widow, but there are no other facts upon record or tradition to indicate the name of her husband.

3421. BENJAMIN DOTY, prob. son Benjamin Doughty, by his 1st wife, b. prob. Middlesex Co., N. J., about 1735–40; m. prob. Wantage, N. J., a wife, Mary.

Nothwithstanding that several of the descendants of Benjamin Doty have ascribed an eastern origin and residence to him, the evidence seems plain and conclusive that he was the son of Benjamin Doughty, and grandson of the Benjamin Doughty who married Abigail Whitehead, and who lived at Princeton, N. J. The gift of land by Jonathan Whitehead to his grandson, in the Minisink Angle, led the latter, after his marriage and before the Revolutionary War, to settle there, and the records show him to have been a resident there, 1765 to 1779. The Wallkill and Minisink regions are in the present Orange County, N. Y., and adjoin the town of Wantage in Sussex County, N. J., where his cousins, Micajah and John Doty, sons of Isaac, were living, about the same time.

It seems plain then that Benjamin Doty, who was living in 1800 at Wantage, and whose name appears in deeds there at that time, had resided there or in the immediate vicinity for many years, having come there with his father, probably as early as 1760. This is further confirmed by the fact that his children appear in many deeds on the Orange County, N. Y., records, as sellers of portions of the Minisink properties, and it is apparently to enforce and verify their titles that the deed of gift of Jonathan Whitehead, in 1725, to his grandson is filed in 1820 or thereabouts in the records of Orange County, N. Y. For instance: 1797, Isaac Doty of Minisink, mortgages part of Lot 9, first division, etc., 197 acres for 600£. 1800, Benjamin Doty of Minisink, mortgages lots, part of Lot 9, for 481£. 1804, Nathaniel Doty and Abigail sell lots in No. 10. 1809, Isaac Doty and Elizabeth, his wife, mortgage part of his farm, 50 acres in Lot 9.

In 1802, November 18, letters of administration were granted to Mary Doty and Isaac Doty on the estate of Benjamin Doty of Sussex County, N. J. From this it is inferred that Mary Doty was his widow, as Isaac was his oldest son.

3691. i. ISAAC, b. about 1760.
3692. ii. BENJAMIN, b. about 1761.

Daniel Doty was an early pioneer of the State of Ohio. A history of his life was published in "McBride's Pioneer Biographies, sketches of the lives of some of the Early Settlers of Butler County, Ohio," Cincinnati, O., 1871, from which this account is abridged.

Daniel Doty received such an education as could be acquired at the common schools of that day, but when he had arrived at manhood, the fame of the fertility and beauty of the fine country then opening in the Far West, attracted him, and he formed the resolution of exploring the country and judging for himself. Accordingly, on the 10th of September, 1790, he left his home and proceeded to Fort Pitt (now Pittsburgh, Pa.), whence he descended the Ohio River in a flat-boat to the then infant settlement of Columbia (now Cincinnati, O.), at the mouth of the Little Miami, where he arrived October 23, and concluded to remain. There were two hewed log houses standing near the bank of the river when Mr. Doty landed, one occupied by Major Benjamin Stites and the other by John S. Gano. Almost his first action was to enlist as a member of the militia company of the place, of which Gano was Captain and Ephraim Kirby was Lieutenant. Every able-bodied man had to be enrolled.

During the years 1790-2 the country was almost continually in a state of alarm on acconnt of the depredations committed by the Indians, and Doty with others were continuually called upon to relieve and defend stations in their immediate vicinity. They were obliged to constantly keep their arms by them, were called upon to drill twice a week, and subject to alarms almost nightly. In June, 1791, Daniel Doty, and a man named French, made an expedition to Danville, Ky., for the purpose of escorting the first Presbyterian minister to their country. This was Rev. James Kemper, and he, with his wife and eight children, were safely escorted through the wilderness to Columbia, April 24, 1792. Mr. Doty left Columbia in a flat-boat and descended the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, from whence he went by sea to New York and returned to his native place in New Jersey. He remained there till the fall of 1795 when, with his second wife and child, he returned to the Miami country. In the spring of 1796 he, with his wife, Betsey, and their children, removed to near where Middletown, O., now is, at that time a wilderness, where he commenced to improve a tract of land which he had previously purchased. Here he spent the remainder of his life, and died near where he had built his first log cabin, on the bank of the Great Miami River, about one mile below where the town of Middletown is now situated. No track of a wagon had then marked the ground to that place. When his cabin was raised and enclosed, he had no table, chair, bedstead nor cradle, and no boards to make them of. But using the abundant timber he speedily improvised furniture from the slabs, saplings and trees, a hollow sycamore forming a cradle in which the babies were soon rocked to sleep.

There were but few settlers in the neighborhood, and no crops to supply the new comers. Mr. Doty had consequently to go to Cincinnati for a portion of the provisions to supply his family for the first year. He carried his corn meal home on horseback, and the wild game, which was plentiful, furnished all the meat desired. Mr. Doty took great delight in hunting and his adventures and hair-breadth escapes fill many pages of the "Biography," to which the reader is referred.

He was the first collector of taxes in the part of the country where he settled, and must have travelled over 1,000 miles in the discharge of his duties. He visited New Jersey again in 1800. He lived to witness the Miami country rise from a wilderness covered with dense forests, inhabited by wild beasts of prey, and Indians still more wild and savage than the beasts, to its present high state of cultivation and improvement.

From a poor adventurer in a strange land, he became a man of wealth and influence in the community. On May 2, 1848, he was attacked with a bilious fever, and on the 8th breathed his last at the age of eighty-three years. His remains were interred in the burying ground, east of Middletown, followed to the grave by a large number of relatives and friends, and a vast concourse of citizens. Daniel Doty and his wife, Betsey, lived together on their farm, near Middletown, more than fifty-four years. At the time of his death she was seventy-seven years of age.

Preston Leach Doty reports that in 1810 William Doty, an own cousin of his father, Enoch Doty, and a son of John Doty, came from Kentucky to Tennessee. In September, 1811, William Doty and Enoch Doty were scuffling, when Enoch gave way and began to throw up blood, and lived but nine days. William Doty stayed and gathered the crop, got up wood for the winter, etc., and then left for the South. In 1815, Daniel Doty, brother to William, visited Mrs. Sophia Doty in Tennessee, and then left for Tuscaloosa County, Alabama, where he married and has now a son there, probably at New Lexington.

These could not have been sons of John Doty, who had but five children, as named. The Postmaster of New Lexington, Alabama, says that he knows nothing of any Daniel Doty, but that there are or were in that county:

1. RICHARD DOTY, d., who has a son, Jasper Doty, Reform, Pickens Co., Ala.

A reunion of her decendants was held at the old homdstead, September 1, 1896, on the seventy-first anniversary of her marriage, at which over eighty descendants, including a few relatives, were present. An interesting history was read by Miss Della Dunlap, her grandchild, and appropriate addresses were delivered by Rev. John R. Jones, pastor of the old historic Salem Presbyterian Church, of which she has been a member for more than three score years and ten, and by Rev. Irwin P. McCurdy, D.D., Litt. D., honorary pastor of the Southwestern Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, a grandson of her sister, Mary Doty McCurdy. The occasion was given a permanent character by a good photograph taken of those present. Mrs. Dunlap is a remarkable woman for her years, her faculties all bright, sight and hearing good, and an excellent memory, especially of the olden time. She is one of the very few people now living, perhaps the only one, who have the distinction of being a daughter of a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and a granddaughter of two other soldiers in the same war.

Aaron Doty was a shoemaker, and carried on extensive business in that line until he retired from active work in 1840, and settled down on a farm near Dover. He early entered public life, having been elected constable of Dover about 1820, which office he held for ten years, and was then appointed a Justice of the Peace and served for five years longer. In this position he gave such satisfaction to the public that he was elected Judge of the County Court and served five years, after which he refused any further honors and retired to his farm, though ever after retaining his interest in public affairs.

He united with the Methodist Church soon after his marriage, and became an exhorter, and was a trustee of the church for thirty-five years. Mrs. Doty was a kind and affectionate wife and mother, a good neighbor and a zealous member of the church. She was very benevolent, a valued friend in sickness and a great help to the poor and destitute of her vicinity. She lived to see all her children grow up and many of them with families around them.

They lived, 1880, Frankfort Station, Ill. His parents removed, about 1804, to Clarkson, N. Y. He enlisted from New York State in War of 1812. Was in active service, but not in battle. In the Spring of 1819, he removed to Middletown, and m. there in November following. In 1834 they removed to Hickory Creek, Ill., and shortly afterward to Frankfort Station, where they have since lived.

In 1879 they celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day, which was noticed as follows in the Chicago Tribune:

"The sixieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. Ambrose Doty and wife, of Frankfort Station, Ill., was celebrated at that place on Friday evening last. Mr. Doty is eighty-seven years old and his wife, Elizabeth, seventy-nine. Mr. Doty was in the War of 1812, having enlisted from his native State. He moved to Middleton, O., in the Spring of 1819, and married his life-long partner in the following November. In 1834, the two moved to Illinois, settling on Hickory Creek, eight miles east of Joliet, where they continued to reside until a few years ago, when they moved to Frankfort Station, Will County, their present place of residence. They have had thirteen children, only two of whom survive them, Levi Doty, at whose residence the aged couple now live, and Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald. The father of Mrs. Doty kept the first hotel in Cincinnati, when on the present site of this flourishing city there were but a few straggling houses, and, with her parents, Mrs. Doty has twice been a pioneer to localities in the West, where naught but wild animals and Indians lived. In religions belief the aged couple have always been strictly Methodists, and the first religious service held by any preacher in Will County, east of Joliet, was at their house.

"The celebration Tuesday evening was a notable one to the relatives of the aged couple, and there was a large number of them present. Prominent among others was a sister of Mrs. Doty, Hulda Williams, who was present sixty years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Doty were married. Mr. and Mrs. Doty are hearty and strong in their old age, and there is every reason at present to believe they will yet live to be centenarians."

A newspaper notice at the time of his death says: "At the time of the birth of Daniel Doty, and in his early boyhood, there were but few settlements in the great Miami Valley north of Hamilton County, Ohio. For many miles together the forest was unbroken, and abounded with wild game, such as bear, deer, panthers, foxes, turkeys and other animals and fowls of less note.

"The Indians were yet numerous, roaming over the forest, and very hostile to the improvements of the country, and their cruelty made it necessary for the white people to locate in settlements, and protect themselves in forts and blockhouses. In one of those blockhouses and in the surrounding forests, Mr. Doty got the first lessons of his long and eventful career in life. His food and dress were plain, and after the common manner of the settlers generally in those early times, nutritious and comfortable, but not luxurious. This plain manner of life did much to fit him for his hardihood and great endurance in after years.

"The settlers were industrious and opened up farms rapidly, and soon had a surplus of produce for market; but money was scarce and there was but little sale for what the farmers could spare, after the emigrant settlers were supplied. In those times there were no turnpike roads, canals, or railroads; produce was taken to market on wagons to Cincinnati, over roads almost impassable a part of the year, and from there boated down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, or some other Southern place of trade.

"In some instances the settlers would build flatboats, and collect the produce together and wait until a rise of water in the Miami River, and then float it out into the Southern market. This was both laborious and dangerous, many boats were lost, and many were drowned in getting the surplus commodities of the country into market. In 1817, young Doty, now only in his eighteenth year, together with eight others, started out on their first river trip with three boats, from Middletown to the Ohio River. Their cargo was made up of flour, whiskey and beans. Their start was full of cheer, and all seemed to be buoyant and everything went off well until they reached the Pin milldam.

"At this place they experienced a sad reverse; two of their boats passed over safely, but the third one hung on the dam and finally broke in two and was destroyed. There Mr. Doty came near loosing his life, but providentially escaped drowning. At this place they were detained one week, and worked in the water, most of the time up to their shoulders and necks, and killed their own meat in the surrounding woods, and baked their bread from the flour of the wrecked boat, for which they received the round sum of sixty cents per day. After securing what they could from the wreck, they got on board the other two boats that were yet unbroken, and floated down to the mouth of the Miami River. From there he and his eight comrades returned home on foot, and learned that a boatman's life was one of hardship and continued peril. In all those dangers and reverses, young Doty proved himself in every way worthy of confidence. In the year 1818, when he was only nineteen years old, such was his character for integrity that he was entrusted with the entire management of a boat and cargo, to take them to the Southern market and make sale of them. After going as far south as Natchez, he sold out and returned home on foot, over a long and dangerous road of many days travel. When he reached home he settled with the parties interested in the boating enterprize, and concluded to follow the river no longer, but give attention to other pursuits of life, more in accordance with his feelings and less dangerous. He remained for several years in his father's family, clearing land and working on the farm. During this period we hear but little of Mr. Doty, except his kindness to the sick, and his readiness to assist the settlers and neighbors in rolling their logs and raising their houses. His feelings of kindness and willingness to assist in all cases of want never departed from him.

"On the 20th of May, 1824, he united in marriage with Miss Mary Burge, an amiable and devoted woman, and settled on a small farm only a short distance from his late residence. Success and prosperity attended them for about ten years, at which time his esteemed wife died and left him with three small children. He subsequently married a second wife, Miss Catharine Crane, who was reared and educated in the State of New Jersey, and no less amiable and devoted than his former wife, and who still lives to lament the loss of her affectionate husband.

"At the opening of the Miami and Lebanon canals he took large contracts on both, and finished them with energy and promptness. In 1832 he built the Infirmary Buildings of Butler County. Having now, by his care and industry, attained a pleasant condition and easy circumstances, his energy sought a wider sphere of business. In 1837 he rented his farm and moved to Rock Island, Ill. This was, perhaps, the greatest business error of his life. He had spent most of his time among plain, honest pioneer men, who were a little coarse, but reliable. But in that river town he had to contend with a class of men whom he called 'smooth-tongued knaves.'

"After remaining there a short time he entered into co-partnership with four other men to build a steamboat for the upper Mississippi trade. In this hazardous enterprise the company had to incur heavy debts, hoping that as soon as their boat would be finished they would realize an income from it; but in this they were sadly disappointed. Their boat had run but a short time before it was sunk in the Mississippi River, and all prospect of profit or income was at once cut off. The other members of the firm stepped forward to take the benefit of the Bankrupt law, but Mr. Doty had too much integrity and self respect to seek such an advantage over his creditors, and resolved to spend the remainder of his life, if necessary, paying the debts of the steamboat company.

"In 1844 he returned to his farm in Ohio, and again went to work in earnest to relieve himself, if possible, of those claims. To these debts he applied all his earnings and means over his living, until the last dollar was paid. This debt weighed him down for many years, but he finally surmounted it and rose above its pressure, and took great comfort in knowing he had lived to meet the just claims due to others, without seeking to relieve himself of them; but ever afterwards remained an opponent of the Bankrupt law. He lived to acquire a handsome estate with the comforts of life around him.

"His last years were spent in quietude on his farm, where he was always glad to receive his relatives and other friends who felt free to call on him. Like many other children in the early settlements, he grew up to manhood with but a very limited education, but his acute memory, clear perception and good observation, placed him fully on a level with men of his age. To his friends he was kind almost to a fault. To such as sought advantages of him, he remained suspecting and fearful. About two years before his death, disease began slowly to undermine his powerful constitution, but he remained able to attend to business a part of the time up to October last, about which time a pulmonary affection took strong hold on his lungs. With this disease upon him, he retired to his room, and separated himself from business life forever."

Captain Stephen Jackson was born September 8th, 1744. He went into the iron business with Andrew King, in Dover, N. J., in 1768. He also bought the "Schooly Forge" and the "Franklin Forge" and half of the "Old Rockaway Forge." At the breaking out of the Revolutionary War Stephen Jackson took an active and leading part. He was one of the five gentlemen who composed the Committee of Safety of Pequannock Township. The Commander-in-Chief of the army passed through Rockaway and partook of refreshments at Captain Stephen Jackson's house, and wrote a letter from there, dated 1780. That year Captain Jackson was Captain of a cavalry company, and whilst General Washington and army lay about Morristown in the severe winter of 1780–81, he was attached to the General's body guard and engaged in reconnoitering the enemy's line below the short hills of Rahway.

December 19th, 1768, he married Mary, daughter of Adam Burnell. Their children were fourteen in number. This wife, Mary, died in 1809, and he married Mary, widow of John Allen. Captain Stephen Jackson died March 12, 1812, of dropsy of the heart, in the house he had built, and which he had devised to his son, John Darbee Jackson. He was buried at Rockaway. He was an active, enterprising business man, maintaining a high reputation for integrity, and was a liberal friend to the Church, contributing largely to its support. He accumulated a large estate in land, holding 2,000 acres, comprising nearly the whole site of the village of Rockaway and its water-power.

Dr. John Darbee Jackson was a practicing physician of eminence, and at the time of his death he was one of the oldest native citizens of Morris County. Dr. Jackson was best known and appreciated at the bedside of the sick and at the fireside of his own home. He was very unobtrusive and entirely opposed to show and parade. His public life was the result of the voluntary demand of the public for his services, and in his official action, while always true to the trust reposed in him, he was true to himself. Being possessed of excellent judgment, extensive general information, a clear and discriminating mind, and high-toned and upright, as well as kind and generous in his feelings, he was alike fitted for the discharge of public duties and the fulfillment of parental and social obligations. When he died a good man ceased from the earth.

His widow lived till her ninetieth year, a remarkably well-preserved lady, in possession of all her faculties, at Rockaway, N. J., in the same house in which she had resided since her marriage in 1816. She was to the last young in her feelings and social in her nature, and made journeys each year to visit her children, making the trip to Providence, R. I., with as little inconvenience as most younger travellers. Her form was erect, her step elastic, and she moved with the grace and dignity of old-time courtesy, while her ample conversational powers, aided by the recollections of her long and busy life, made her companionship delightful to the younger generations of her relatives, who admired and loved her.

The following extract from a local paper bears testimony to her many good qualities:

"The death of Mrs. Agnes Jackson, which occurred at her home in Rockaway on Tuesday, broke the last living link which connected the people of that community with the history and memories of generations ago. It is almost seventy years ago since she came there as the young bride of the village physician and assumed a place in society she was well qualified to fill, and which she was permitted to retain long enough to win the love and affection of several generations of people. In that day Rockaway was a place of great importance in this vicinity, and there were gathered there so many families of culture and refinement that it is no wonder that even at this time much of our local history and traditions lead back to that village as a centre of interest. With those people and the events of that period the early life of Mrs. Jackson was closely associated, and as even the weight of great years never had the effect of impairing her faculties, her life was surrounded with all the interest that attached to that early period.

"In the spring of 1817 Mrs. Jackson came to Rockaway to reside with her husband, and since that time has lived in the old family mansion where she died. Her husband was in his day one of the men of prominence and energy in Morris County affairs. With Judge Freeman

Wood, he was one of the first freeholders after the formation of the township, and besides holding other positions of local trust, represented the County in the Legislature in 1835 and 1836, and again in 1855 and 1856.

"The late Dr. Jackson died in November, 1859, and since that time she has lived with her son, Dr. John W. Jackson, who succeeded to the old homestead. Although she reached her ninetieth year she retained to the end, to an extent really wonderful for her years, all the courtliness, grace and accomplishments that made her life so beautiful and attractive. She would frequently drive out alone with her own horse, and many of her leisure hours to the very last were spent in the execution of artistic needlework and embroidery, for which she had remarkable taste and skill in execution, some of her latest productions being so beautiful in design and finish as to seem almost marvelous, when her years are considered, A pleasanter lot in life than her's can hardly be conceived, and its setting was radiant with the light of happiness, like the after glow of a beautiful sunset. About six weeks ago she was bereaved by the death of her brother, Hon. Eugene S. Doughty of Somerset, and went to Somerville to attend the funeral, after which she decided to remain for a few weeks with her relations in that place. The death of her brother deeply affected her, however, and, becoming ill, Dr. Jackson brought her back to her home three weeks ago to-day. A general breaking down of her system followed and continued to her death. But even this did not impair the clearness of her intellect, and she remained conscious to the very end, recognizing all about her, making clear and intelligent preparation for her dissolution and finally passing away with a smile on her face.

"The funeral services were held at her late residence, and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Mead, rector of St. John's Church, Dover, of which she was a communicant, and Rev. Dr. Butterworth of Summit. After the services her remains were interred beside those of her husband in the Rockaway Cemetery."

Resolved to try their fortunes in the new Western country, Joshua Bullman and his wife, together with his mother, brother Lot and sisters, Susan, Evaline and Maria, and other relatives and friends, left their New Jersey home in September, 1830. They journeyed slowly over the rough roads, reaching Lafayette, Ind., late in the fall, where they tarried for a season, raising a crop near the Tippecanoe battle ground.

In July, 1831, Joseph Bullman, his brother-in-law, Jacob Smalley, and a man named Griffith, took up their journey on horseback to the vicinity of Columbia, now Lacon, Marshall Co., Ill., where they were favorably impressed with the fertility of the soil and the beauty of the scenery. They first saw the prairie east of Columbia, July 4, 1831. Proceeding to the cabin of James Hall, they remained over night, and, in company with Colonel Strawn, started the next day for Springfield to enter land.

Finding the land office closed, Mr. Bullman left $100 with his friends for the purpose of entering eighty acres. Having paid out all his money, he borrowed a dollar from a stranger and started back to his family alone. He camped wherever night overtook him, and having picketed his horse, with his saddle for a pillow, he laid down to rest, first taking the precaution to burn the grass and scatter the embers around to guard his limbs from the bite of the rattlesnakes that infested the prairies. He often told of that trip—how footsore his horse became, and though without food for steed or rider, he still pressed on, now riding, now walking, in order that his faithful horse might survive.

In the following spring they yoked their oxen and started for their new home, where they lived in a cabin erected by the Waughhubs until he built on his own land. The Black Hawk war was then raging and every able bodied man was called upon to aid in protecting the homes of the settlers. Mr. Bullman enlisted in Captain Robert Barnes' company of mounted volunteers belonging to the Fortieth Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, under command of Colonel John Strawn, and served as a private until mustered out, June 18, 1832. Soon after the close of the war an Indian chief with a few followers was discovered in the swamp below Columbia, where they had camped to hunt and fish. By the terms of the treaty which had just been made the Indians agreed to leave that part of the country. It was necessary for a company of the settlers, of which Mr. Bullmun made one, to enforce the treaty with a show of arms.

They continued to live in the little cabin for several years, and three of their children were born to them there, Hattie. Thadeus and Theodore. He remained on the old farm which was his home till his death in 1888. A quiet, unassuming man, earnest in his convictions, he never turned from the path of duty nor wavered for a moment in what he considered was right and just in his dealings with his fellow men.

The following tribute to Colonel Doty is from the facile pen of his friend, A. J. H. Duganne, and forms part of the biographic introduction to the "History of Livingston County, N. Y.," by L. L. Doty.

"After leaving school Lockwood Lyon Doty entered as a law student the office of Mr. John Young in Geneseo, and in 1847, when Mr. Young was made Governor of the State of New York, his law student followed him to Albany and was appointed to a position in the office of Canal Appraiser; whence he was promoted in the first year of Governor Young's administration to the responsible post of Deputy State Treasurer under Alvah Hunt. By this time his character became so marked for adherence to principle and application to duty in all positions he held, that private, as well as public business men were mindful of his value, and when a consolidation of several railroad lines to form the New York Central Railroad Company was determined upon, Mr. Erastus Corning, president of the company, invited Mr. Doty to conduct the clerical work rendered necessary. After satisfactorily performing this service he returned to Albany and was reappointed Deputy Treasurer under Mr. Spaulding of Buffalo. He continued in that State office, under Mr. Stephen Clark, until that noted business man became president of the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad Company, when his deputy received the appointment of secretary and treasurer of the road. Here, in the face of responsibilities and complications of a great enterprise, nearly destroyed under corrupt official management and a venal State Legislature, Lockwood L. Doty found himself obliged to choose between negligence of duty, in easy compliance with shifts and subterfuges, such as had demoralized the company, or, on the other hand, a refusal to become involved in such dishonest practices.

"Out of respect to President Clark, and to second the endeavors of that gentleman to restore financial soundness to the enterprise, he devoted his customary energy and intelligence to its affairs; until, to seduce him from strict duty, a large sum of money was proffered to him, after the fashion which had already tempted and ruined many public men and officials intrusted with public affairs in Wisconsin. Their insulting, though covert, attempt to make him an instrument of fraud in the issue of illegal bonds, decided Mr. Doty's course at once. He resigned connection with the La Crosse & Milwaukee Railroad Company and returned to his native State. Governor E. D. Morgan then appointed Mr. Doty chief clerk in the executive department. No choice could have been more pleasing to friends of an honest administration, as was indicated by numerous expressions of approval in journals of the day.

"About this period Mr. Doty employed all the hours he could spare from business in his task of collecting material from all accessible sources for the "History of Livingston County, N. Y.," which was printed years after the faithful hand that prepared its details ceased to labor, and the eyes that sought clear light for its pages were closed upon earthly scenes.

"When Governor Morgan entered his second term of office Mr. Doty became his private secretary. It was the most trying period of that vital struggle in which our people were engaged, with the resolution to make 'all free' in the bounds of the Union and 'all united' in the freedom of manhood. If his appointment to an arduous clerical situation, as chief executive clerk, had been hailed by the press as eminently 'fit to be made,' our journals no less cordially approved Governor Morgan's judgment in calling Mr. Doty to confidential relations with himself in a time of momentous interest to all citizens. The Albany Argus, of opposing politics, testified to the secretary's merits as a 'modest and unassuming gentleman of undoubted qualifications for the position,' and, in a concurrence of editorial opinion respecting the appointment, political difference seemed to be forgotten.

"In his new relation Mr. Doty continued to deserve appreciation. Entering upon his trust in November, 1860, he familiarized himself with its executive business before President Lincoln's call to arms, following the capture of Fort Sumter in April, 1861.

"The news of that capture reached Albany on Sunday morning, April 14th, and a meeting was convened that Sabbath afternoon in the Governor's room, at which were present Governor Morgan and other State officers, the Speaker of the Assembly, and members of Military and Finance Committees of the Legislature. That evening a bill was drafted providing for and enrollment of thirty thousand State volunteers, and an appropriation of three million dollars for their equipment. Twenty-four hours afterward the bill was passed, with an amendment establishing the State Military Board, New York State legislation actually anticipating President Lincoln's call for twenty-five thousand militia in loyal States. Then began, and continued without cessation, an unexampled press of official labor for Governor Morgan and his private secretary. From all points came telegrams, letters, suggestions, good or worthless, applications for authority to recruit, tenders of material aid, timid whispers of apprehension, manly voices of aid and comfort. It was the private secretary's duty to take note of all, to be mindful of all, to answer here, to consult there, in a word to be the Governor's ear, and oftentimes his tongue, and to do all with tact, forbearance, modesty and timely reticence. That Mr. Doty accomplished his work, not only in accord with Governor Morgan and the State Military Board, but to the satisfaction of persons brought in contact with him from all parts of the State, is a matter of official history during that term of anxiety and toil.

"The close of Governor Morgan's four years saw a revulsion in the political affairs of our State, through the election of Horatio Seymour; but the change did not effect Colonel Doty's valued service, nor the estimate of it by statesmen of varying politics. Colonel Doty's hard work, however, began to effect his constitution, and symptoms of the disease, which ultimately became fatal, began to alarm his family and friends. He was not a man to yield, in flesh or spirit, while life subsisted, but successive attacks of hemorrhage, prostrating him for weeks, made rest necessary.

"Under his physician's advice a change of climate was advisable, and he was tendered the position of American consul at Nassau, N. P., then a most important point, because of its use as a rendezvous for Confederate cruisers and blockade runners. Increased pecuniary compensations were thus assured him in a climate where healthy air and needed quiet might recuperate his jaded system. But he declined the consulate and remained a while private secretary under Governor Seymour's administration. Certainly, as Colonel Doty gratefully acknowledged, no higher compliment could be paid to his worth than Governor Seymour's wish to retain him in the position he had held with Governor Morgan. For a time, to facilitate public business, Colonel Doty continued to act as private secretary under Governor Seymour, and, meanwhile, a special and congenial position had been made for him by legislative act, in the providing for a Bureau of Military Record. 'The best man to be at the head of such a bureau,' Governor Morgan had said to Governor Seymour, before the latter entered upon office, 'is Colonel Doty, but you can't appoint him.' To which pleasant reminder of party demands Governor Seymour answered: 'That is so, but you can appoint him before your term expires and I will keep him.' So the Bureau of Military Record became, with new and manifold duties, the only change for health Colonel Doty was to enjoy, while the salary set apart for chief of bureau did not reach the pay of a volunteer officer holding rank as Colonel.

"But, though prudent and careful as a business man for his family wants, Colonel Doty was not covetous of high rank or of undue emoluments, so often the quest of undeserving public men. More than once, in youth and mature years, he sought to leave the exacting toils of office for pursuits of business life more in accord with his love of home and children. But he was to 'die in harness;' to be remembered for undeviating integrity in public service, more than for success in amassing private gains, and to leave to those dependent upon him a modest competence and the rich bequest of a good name; inheritance far more to be prized after a father's death than the millions left with no record upon them but the career of a successful business man. Throughout Governor Seymour's term Colonel Doty occupied his busy mind and hands in what was to him a labor of love, gathering data concerning our State volunteers, and statistics regarding the patriotic cooperation of New York civilians in cities, towns and villages of our commonwealth.

"To his quick discernment, wide correspondence, and characteristic persistency of work and research, our military archives are largely indebted; and although that office of value and necessity created by the foresight of Governor Morgan, and sustained by Governor Seymour, was not retained by Colonel Doty to the day of his death—as it ought to have been—the fault lay not in his own decrease of interest in its objects or means, but in the unwise action of a subsequent Legislature, and in the mistaken views of other officials who surmised a conflict between the powers and duties of a simple statistical bureau and the authority pertaining to members of the Governor's military staff.

"Returning to Geneseo, Colonel Doty hoped to remain in his native county as a private citizen, but more promising health afterward induced him to accept the position of Deputy Collector of Customs in New York City, which he held, however, but a short time, resigning it to become again the private secretary of his friend ex-Governor Morgan, then representing New York State in the United States Senate. He remained at Washington until the Senator finished his official term.

"In 1869, Colonel Doty was appointed by President Grant, Assessor of Internal Revenue for the Sixth District in New York City; but once more the warnings of over-work and failing health counselled a return to his home, and he resigned office to seek the quiet of Geneseo. Purchasing the Livingston Republican, he entered upon the editorial field in a spirit which promised, with business success, an encouraging avocation for the future. He likewise began to print the first pages of his history, dividing busy days between proof reading and writing on this work, and his journalistic duties. In 1869, he was elected a member of the Republican State Committee and chosen secretary of that body, which again involved him in State affairs.

"At this juncture, ex-Senator Morgan, having become interested as a banker in the New Orleans, Mobile & Chattanooga Railroad, invited him to become its treasurer, and he disposed of his publishing establishment in order to accept the post of a financial officer; but left the company, after a few months of connection with it. Senator Morgan and other friends were at that time desirous of placing so experienced and reliable a man at the head of a special banking house, to be organized under his knowledge of financial operations. But his apprehensions of an enterprise, in which large investments might be staked, in view of reliable management, dissuaded him from accepting monetary responsibilities, even at an assured and liberal salary as the president of a bank.

"He turned again to the work in which he had formerly been so zealous, the service of soldiers, and entered on the double duty involved by consolidation of two pension offices in New York City, under his direction, in April, 1871, as pension agent, by appointment of President Grant. There can be no more exacting post, if its duty be performed, than the pension agency of New York City, under existing laws. Colonel Doty sacrificed himself to accomplish its labors through personal and untiring effort. No one who remembers his presence in that dark, damp basement of the Custom House, used for audit and payment of pension claims, no one who saw his slight form bowed daily over the books he kept in all cases himself, could help the mental conviction that those protracted labors in an unhealthy atmosphere, were accelerating causes of the disease which struck him down at his last post of service. Colonel Doty became disabled in that service, and died from his disability, with no less title to the name of veteran than those soldiers and sailors whose certificates he audited with kindly smiles, and whose complaints he ever sought to answer by whatsoever help his own authority could assure them.

"The pulmonary disease to which his active life succumbed, prostrated him about three months before the final hour, and his spirit departed at that hour so softly that its passing away, amid watching friends, was scarcely perceived. Though sadly anticipated by those who knew of his declining health, and the sufferings he had long borne at intervals, the report of his decease fell suddenly upon that wide circle of acquaintances who knew him only as a public man, in the prime, as it seemed, of his natural life. A general feeling of earnest regret was manifested in many notices of his demise which appeared in the public press. Pages might be filled with those expressions of respect for the dead, and sympathy for the living, who deplored the loss of husband, father and brother.

"But where all united in deep commiseration, no single tribute of memory need be recalled, other than the quotation which follows, and which is added, because it relates to fruits more grateful than the returns of public office and to influence more endearing than popular plaudits, merited though they may be. The Methodist Sunday School Union of Albany, N. Y., of which Mr. Doty had been a former member, adopted minutes from which we extract the following:

"'Especially do we remember him as a most earnest worker in the labor of the Sunday school. He took an active part in the organization of West Mission Sunday School, and was an indefatigable laborer, both in Hudson avenue and Washington avenue church schools. His cheerful presence carried with it everywhere the heartiest encouragement. No one could fall out by the way, while he was assisting, for he made toil a pleasure, and the severest work, in the way of a duty, a delight.'

"Colonel Doty's remains were conveyed by special car from Jersey City to Geneseo, where the last offices of affection and respect found place at their burial from the Methodist Episcopal Church, where a large concourse of people assembled and deep gloom overhung the community."

At the beginning of the War of the Rebellion Mr. Goheen was living at Groveland, N. Y. In August, 1862, he enlisted at Rochester in Company

L, 8th New York Cavalry, in which he rose to rank of Lieutenant, serving till the close of the war. His corps was particularly active and participated in upward of a hundred engagements, including the famous Wilson raid and the battles of Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

He was awarded, as 1st Sergeant of Company G, a medal for the capture of a battle flag from the enemy at Waynesboro, Va., in the Shenandoah Valley, in the spring of 1865. Mr. Goheen thus described the capture. "Gen. Sheridan's Cavalry, to which I belonged, surprised and captured nearly the whole of the rebel General Jubal Early's command, consisting of about two thousand infantry and artillery, who were entrenched behind earthworks, guarding the mountain pass. Early's army became confused when we swept down upon them and broke for the mountains in an effort to escape, while we, being mounted, rode about them, compelling their surrender. I came upon this color bearer, whom I soon persuaded that the best thing for him to do was to quietly hand me over the said flag."

After the war he lived Honeoye Falls, N. Y., where he died May 8, 1889, of disease contracted in the service of his country. His widow and son now live Rochester, N. Y.

THE FAMILY OF DESIRE DOTY.

6. DESIRE DOTY was the oldest daughter and probably the fifth child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke. She was born at Plymouth, Mass., in 1865, a date which is established by the inscription on her tombstone.

The date of her birth is not given on the records of Plymouth, and the first mention of her that we find is on the 2d July, 1667, when she witnessed the marriage contract between her mother and John Phillips of Marshfield. She was at this time twenty-two years of age, and on Christmas day of this year, 1667, she married at Marshfield, her first husband, William Sherman, who was born at Marshfield about 1644, and was a son of William Sherman and his wife, Prudence Hill. The father, who came to Plymouth in 1629, was the ancestor of the Plymouth Sherman family.

Desire Doty and her husband, William Sherman, lived at Marshfield. He was an extensive farmer there and an active man, and when the great Indian War, known as King Philip's War, broke out in 1675, he, with most of the other able bodied men of the town, shouldered his musket and went to the front. The war proved in many respects a very severe one. The border settlements, which had now begun to be established at favorable points in the interior, as far as Springfield, were attacked, captured, burned and the settlers massacred. It taxed the utmost resources of the colony to cope with it, and it was not until some six hundred lives had been lost, twelve or thirteen towns had been destroyed and the colony had expended the immense sum of $500,000 that King Philip, the Indian chief, was tracked to his lair at Narragansett in the latter part of 1676 and killed.

In atrocities by the Indians on the defenseless settlers and on prisoners, this war was unquestionably a most harrowing experience for the colonists and William Sherman, by reason of the exposures and hardships, and witnessing the cruelties of that campaign, was subject after his return to periods of insanity during the balance of his life. In consideration of his affliction the colony, in 1675, granted him relief. And it has been noted before that, in 1677, after the death of Mrs. Faith Phillips, that thirty shillings of her estate by the consent of her sons, was to be divided in equal proportions between her daughters, "Desire Sherman, Elizabeth Rouse and Mary Doten, unless the two younger sisters shall see reason, in respect of the low condition of the eldest, to consider her in that respect."

William Sherman died in 1679, leaving his widow with the care of six children. She married again, at Marshfield, 24th November, 1681, Israel Holmes of that town, who was born there, or perhaps in Scituate, Mass., in 1642, and was a son of William Holmes and his wife, Elizabeth. Israel Holmes had married first in April, 1678, Anna Rouse, as appears on the records at Marshfield, and was now a widower. But it is not known that he had any children by his first marriage. He was a fisherman and was drowned, being "cast away sailing into Plymouth Harbor," February 24th, 1684–5," and was buried at Plymouth.

A second time a widow, with six children by her first husband and two by her second, she was shortly again courted and gave her hand in marriage, probably early in 1686, her third husband being Alexander Standish, the eldest son of the famous Captain Miles Standish of Duxbury.

Captain Miles Standish, it will be remembered, was the valiant soldier who came in the Mayflower in 1620, and who, on account of his experience in war, was chosen at once the captain and given charge of the military affairs of the infant colony. His history is the history of the colony itself in its early days, and his prowess and wisdom have been sung in both prose and poetry so often that his name and deeds are familiar to every schoolboy in the land. His wife, Rosa, died soon after his arrival in 1620. By a second wife, Barbara, he had six children, of whom Alexander was the oldest and his heir, and succeeded to the estate at Captain's Hill, Duxbury.

Alexander Standish married, for his first wife, Sarah Alden, the daughter of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, whose romantic story has been so charmingly told in Longfellow's poem. By this marriage he had seven children, the oldest of whom, Miles, subsequently married Experience Sherman, the daughter of his stepmother, by her first husband.

Mrs. Desire Standish lived with her third husband happily for many years until his death, which occurred in 1702, at the old homestead in Duxbury. She bore him three children. Her stepson and her daughter having succeeded to the property, she probably remained with them much longer. She lived to an advanced age and died at Marshfield, Mass., according to her gravestone in the Cedar Grove Cemetery there, in January, 1731, at the age of eighty-six years. Her remains rest near the church of the First Parish, in the old cemetery, among the family of her first husband.

She was a remarkable woman, as is evident from her history. Born on the High Cliff at Plymouth, losing her father at the age of ten years, her early married life especially unfortunate by reason of the insanity of her first and the early death of her second husband, she not only successfully raised the young children left to her care, but her troubles had borne so lightly upon her that she attracted the attention of and married the well-to-do farmer of Duxbury. She lived to see her children well married and prosperous, and before her death her pathway was smoothed by hosts of grandchildren at Marshfield and Duxbury, who must have found delight in listening to the tales of one who had had such a long and varied experience.

Desire Doty by her 1st husb., William Sherman, had children:

THE FAMILY OF ELIZABETH DOTY.

7. ELIZABETH DOTY was the second daughter and probably the sixth child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, and though the date of her birth is not given on the record it is probable that she was born in 1647. Very little is known of her.

She married at Marshfield, Mass., January 13, 1674-5, John Rouse, who was born at Duxbury, 1643, and was a son of John Rouse and his wife, Annis Peabody. In Miss Thomas' "Memorials of Marshfield, Mass." he is said to have married in 1656, Mary Rogers, but this is certainly an error, as he would have been at that time but thirteen years of age.

They lived at Marshfield, where he died as appears from his gravestone, October, 1717, aged 74.

The will of John Peabody of Duxbury, dated July 16, 1649, gives to his daughter, Annis Rouse, and also to her son, John, the son of John Rouse.

They probably had child:

6892. i. JOHN, b. 1678; d. May 26, 1704.

THE FAMILY OF ISAAC DOTY.

8. ISAAC DOTY, the fifth son and seventh child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, was born at Plymouth, February 8, 1648–9, the date being entered on the colony record.

At the death of his father he was but six years of age, and probably continued to live with his mother until about the time of her marriage to John Phillips, in 1667. It is somewhat doubtful where he spent the next five years of his life, but it is probable that it was in Sandwich, Mass., where his brother Joseph was also, early in life, a resident. But it is possible that he may have visited in this period Oyster Bay on Long Island where he subsequently lived. An entry on the county records at Plymouth, dated July 5, 1672, shows that "Isaac Dotey, alias Doughty, sells to John Smith, his share of the land willed to him by his father, Edward Dotey."

At a town meeting held at Oyster Bay, January 22, 1672–3, a piece of land for a house lot was allotted to Isaac Dottie. And on February 19 following, sixteen acres were allotted to James Townsend and Isaac Dottie.

Oyster Bay, on Long Island, is in the eastern end of Queens Co., N. Y., and extends the width of the island, from Long Island Sound to the Atlantic Ocean. The early settlement was made at the present village of Oyster Bay on the northern or Sound side of the town and at the head of the beautiful bay of that name. The eastern end of Long Island, including this town, was settled by the English, and for a time in its early history owed alliance to Connecticut, while the western end of the Island was settled by the Dutch, and authority over it was claimed by the Governor of New Amsterdam. The first settlement in the town was made about 1651 by several families from Sandwich, who purchased the site of the present village from the Indians. The boundary lines between the Dutch and English remained unsettled and a cause for uneasiness for a number of years and probably retarded emigration, as it was not until about 1670 to 1680 that the town began really to increase and to show prosperity.

The location was a beautiful one; the bay, as its name implies, was and has since been noted for its abundant supply of fine oysters, and with the termination of the disputes with the Dutch and the subsequent absorption into the Colony of New York under English rule, the town continued to attract emigrants from Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Long Island in its early days was occupied by various small tribes of Indians, the "Matinecocks" holding possession of a good part of the site of the town of Oyster Bay. The first purchase, as above said, was made in 1651 and by emigrants from Sandwich, the principal of whom were Peter and Anthony Wright, two brothers, who, with their father, had come from Lynn, Mass., to Sandwich, shortly before. The larger part of the emigrants for the next twenty or thirty years came from Sandwich and it is probable that Isaac Doty, having spent a portion of his minority there, was attracted by the reports of returning visitors to his new home on Long Island.

He was received with favor. A piece of land for a house lot was at once granted, January 22, 1673, and he proceeded to build a house upon it. It is probable that he was married by this time, as the house lot was seldom granted by the town to a young single man. This plot was situated upon what is known in the present village as South street, at the head of that street and the corner of Pine Hollow road. He continued to live there several years, while he added constantly to his possessions through the neighboring country.

The old town records of Oyster Bay are held by the Town Clerk of East Norwich, Queens Co., N. Y., but they are by no means as full or as comprehensive as are those of the early Massachusetts towns, and give very little information as to families other than that furnished by deeds, land grants, etc. The county records are at Jamaica, but deeds were not recorded there till later.

On the town records it appears, under date of 26th June, 1675, Anthony Wright by a deed of gift to James Townsend and Isaac Douty, all of Oyster Bay, conveys a certain piece of meadow land at Monensscussott Beach in Sandwich in Plymouth Colony, said lot having been granted to said Anthony Wright by the town of Sandwich in return for certain services rendered the town. And Anthony Wright's will, made 20th of 3d month, 1673, bequeaths to "James Townsend five shillings; to his wife, Elizabeth Townsend, two shillings six pence; and to Isaack Dotye, one cow."

It is a matter of speculation why Isaac Doty should have received these repeated favors from Anthony Wright; for besides the direct gifts he probably owed his favorable reception in the town and the grants of land there by the town meeting to the influence of this same Anthony Wright. It can hardly have been by reason of any connection by marriage, for Anthony Wright was not married, or at least had no issue. He died September 9, 1680, and aside from the above bequests left his whole estate to Alice, the widow of his brother, Peter Wright. But neither the family records of the Wrights nor Townsends, both of which are well established, show any probability of a connection by marriage with Isaac Doty, though James Townsend had married a daughter of Peter Wright.

The town records also show:

May 21, 1677. A list of the freeholders, among whom, entitled to one share of the town, was Isaac Doutty.

In 1676, his name appears in deeds; and 1678, he bought one share at Unkaway Neck.

August 24, 1680. Isaac Doughty gives four acres adjoining his dwelling to John Wood on condition that he shall build there.

July 5, 1681. He buys of the Indians a plot where he lives on the east side of Hempstead Harbor.

October 16, 1682. Isaac Doughty and William N. Crooker hire for seven years the farm at Littleworth of Robert Godfree. Littleworth was in the western part of the town on the eastern side of Hempstead Harbor; it is now known as Glenwood and is in the town of North Hempstead.

Up to this time the Indians had continued to hold a considerable part of their old possessions, but in 1685 Isaac Doughty, with a number of others, united and purchased from the chief of the Matinecocks the balance of their lands in this vicinity.

"On the 9th of January, 1685, Suscanemon and the other Indian chiefs were empowered by the rest of the Indians to convey the residue of Matinecock, with some other lands, for the price of £60 to James Cock, Joseph Dickerson, Robert Townsend, Samuel Dickerson, Stephen Birdsall, James Townsend, Daniel Weeks, Isaac Doughty, John Wood, Edmund, Caleb and John Wright, William Frost and John Newman. They afterward associated with them as joint purchasers forty-five other inhabitants and freeholders of the town of Oyster Bay, a list of which may be seen in Thompson's L. I. I., 489. A rough map of 'Matinecock Lands,' bearing date of 1697, shows the bounds to have been as follows: West by 'Hempstead Harbor,' south by 'Hempstead Plains,' east by 'Oysterbay bounds' and north by 'the Sound or North Sea.'

"Glen Cove Creek was early known as Muskito Cove, and the lands lying adjacent formed a part of the disputed territory of Matinecock."

In the "Documentary History of the State of New York," Vol. 2, is given a list of estates at Oyster Bay, 29th September, 1683, in which "Isack Douty" is rated at 66£.

From this time to 1720 there are frequent deeds upon the records showing large purchases of lands by him, all in the immediate neighborhood of or within the town.

In 1688, his wife, Elizabeth, joins with him in executing a deed, which she signs with her mark; but the absence of her name in other deeds, both before and after, has no significance, as it was not customary at this time for the wife to sign deeds with the husband. Throughout this period Isaac Doty was frequently appointed to "lay out lots," to settle boundary lines and to act as commissioner for various purposes, which show him to have been held in high respect by his neighbors, and his judgment to have been greatly esteemed.

He was a member of the Episcopal Church of Oyster Bay and at the meetings held 12th January, 1703, and 14th January, 1707, was appointed vestryman; the first time his name is written Isaac Doughty; the second time it is Isaac Doty, Sr., his son Isaac being now also a householder.

In 1703, he is mentioned as one of the proprietors of Littleworth, and in 1704, in a deed, calls his residence at Oyster Bay, New Work.

March 29th, 1697. By a deed of gift he conveys to his son, Isaac, Jr., a farm.

June 9th, 1704. In consideration of filial duty and affection he conveys a farm to his son Joseph, and the same day another to his son Jacob.

March 5th, 1723. In consideration of his fatherly love for his son, Samuel, he conveys to him a farm, adjoining those of his brothers, Jacob, Joseph, Isaac and James.

September 29th, 1727. He acknowledged in person deeds made by him, 1702-3.

January 7th, 1728. He appeared before a magistrate to identify some old landmarks or boundary lines, testifying that he was then about seventy-nine years of age. This is the last reference to him upon the records of the town, but he probably died shortly after, and must have been buried in the Episcopal Cemetery at Oyster Bay, though no stone now marks his resting place.

The will of Hugh Parsons, of Portsmouth, R. I., made January 11, 1684, and proved March 14 of the same year, gives certain legacies to his wife's two daughters living on Long Island, Susannah Carpenter and Elizabeth Doty. The records of Portsmouth, show that Hugh Parsons married Elizabeth, widow of William England. She was born 1613 and died soon after her second husband in 1684. They lived at Portsmouth, and Susannah England, daughter of William and Elizabeth England, married, at Oyster Bay, L. I., December 3d, 1677, as his second wife, Ephraim Carpenter, son of William Carpenter and Elizabeth Arnold. Mrs. Susannah Carpenter died in 1684, and Ephraim Carpenter married a third wife, Lydia Dickenson. He died 1703.

While these records give no date, so far discovered, of the marriage of Isaac Doty and Elizabeth England, they sufficiently establish that marriage. It is probable that Elizabeth England was born at Portsmouth, about 1651 to 1655, and that she married Isaac Doty at Oyster Bay, about 1673. By this marriage there were six sons, for beside those named above, another, Solomon, appears as a witness to one of the deeds. If there were any daughters, there is nothing upon the records that implies it, and the only reason for the belief of their existence is in some probable gaps between the births of the sons.

Nowhere after Isaac Doty's settlement at Oyster Bay is his name ever written as Doten, nor does that spelling anywhere appear among his descendents. His name is given in the various documents quoted above as Doty, Dotey, Dottie, and in other ways that imply the same pronunciation, and even as Doughty, but never with the termination "en." The frequency of the spelling Doughty is undoubtedly owing to the presence in the western part of the same county on Long Island of the very numerous and influential family of that name, descended from the Rev. Francis Doughty of Maspeth or Newtown, between whom and the Oyster Bay residents there must have been frequent intercourse. Indeed the fact that Isaac Doty in the deed noted above, dated July 5th, 1672, at Plymouth, is called, "Alias Isaac Doughty," leads to the supposition that he had previously visited Oyster Bay, as in that locality alone was he likely to have received this alias.

But notwithstanding this occasional misspelling on the records of the town, the name Doty never seems to have been lost or given up by either Isaac Doty or his descendants. It occurs frequently enough, and especially late in his life, to show that he held to it, and of his children but one ever appears to have even occasionally used the name of Doughty. This one, James, who continued to live in the immediate vicinity of Oyster Bay, and whose descendants are still to be found there, was sometimes known as James Doughty, but his descendants are uniformily called Doty and have been for generations wherever they may live. And still nowhere among the living representatives of Isaac Doty was there any tradition or record tracing their ancestry to the Plymouth emigrant.

The feeling throughout this branch has been universal that its ancestor came directly from England to Oyster Bay, and that he was a member of the Doughty family, and this has been fortified by traditions accompanied, perhaps, by visions of great estates abroad held "in chancery" that have been nourished by several generations, the details, with increasing particularity, passing from father to son and to grandson. All knowledge of their Plymouth origin had become, by their isolation from the other branches, entirely obliterated.

It may be readily seen from the documents already quoted that Isaac Doty was of an exceptionally strong character. He possessed in a marked degree that element of industry and thrift which characterized, to greater or less extent, every one of the children of Edward Doty. With an energy that was commendable, he pushed out to a new territory, constantly extended his lines, and lived to see a prosperous settlement and each one of his sons provided with a farm well cleared and tilled, which his foresight had made possible, and which his fatherly affection had secured.

Upright in all his dealings, his word was respected by his neighbors, who were glad to refer their disputes to his arbitration. He was an active member and supporter of the established church of his town, and encouraged the attendance of his family. His posterity have generally maintained these characteristics, and there have been no more solid and highly esteemed men in the localities where they have lived than his immediate descendants on Long Island and in the western part of Dutchess County, N. Y.

Isaac Doty and Elizabeth England had children, all born at Oyster Bay, Queens Co., N. Y.:

6893. i. ISAAC, b. about 1673.

His will is recorded at Jamaica, Queens Co., N. Y., signed Joseph Doughty of Oyster Bay, made July 7, 1716, and devises his estate to his eldest son Joseph, to his son Isaac, to his daughter Sarah, and to his wife Sarah, and provides for a child in case his wife be with child.

His widow receipts for her share of above, January 29, 1717. Sarah, wife John Jackson, receipts May 7, 1724. Joseph Doty receipts for 178£, in full, May 6, 1729. Elizabeth receipts for her share, July 24, 1736.

From the above dates of receipts we assume the dates of births of children, b. Oyster Bay, as follows:

6901. i. SARAH, b. about 1706.
6902. ii. JOSEPH, b. about 1708.
6903. iii. ISAAC, b. about 1711; prob. d. young.

6895. JACOB DOTY, son Isaac Doty and Elizabeth England, b. Oyster Bay, N. Y., about 1682; m. there Penelope Albertson, b. there, dau. Derrick Albertson and Dinah Coles The Albertsons were early settlers at Oyster Bay, and Derrick Albertson was one of its most substantial people and resided in that part of the town known as Mosquito Cove. His will, dated Sept. 3, 1733, is on record, in which he calls himself a millwright and devises his estate to his widow and chil., one of whom is called "Penelipy Dotey."

June 9, 1704. Jacob Doty received from his father a farm at Oyster Bay "in consideration of filial duty and affection." In 1718 he bought a farm from the executors of his brother Joseph.

May 1, 1737. Jacob Doty and his wife, Penelope, of Oyster Bay sell to Theodorus Collier land near Hempstead Harbor, bounded by the lands of his brothers, Samuel and Solomon. This deed was acknowledged by Jacob and wife, January 4, 1743–4.

Other deeds are on record as late as 1753 signed by Jacob and wife. In 1753 one is witnessed by Peter Dotye.

1747–8–9. Jacob Doty was elected at town meeting, overseer of highways for Littleworth, now known as Glenwood, in the town of North Hempstead.

While there is no positive evidence of any children of this family on record, good circumstantial evidence leads to the belief that Jacob Doty and his wife, Penelope, had

Children:
6905. i. PETER.
6906. ii. WILLIAM, b. prob. before 1740.

6907. iii. JOSEPH. 1764, September 19, license to marry issued to Joseph Doty, tailor, and Sarah Titus, both of Queens Co.; William Doty, boatman, surety. Sarah Titus was dau. Jacob Titus and Margaret Gorman. Tradition says they had no chil.

6908. iv. JOHN D. John D. Doty witnesses, 1740, by his mark, the will of William Mott of Great Neck, Hempstead. His name may have been John Derrick Doty and he be the "Dirck Doty" living in Dutchess Co., N. Y., 1750–60. Dirck Doty was Capt. March 22, 1776, Charlotte Precinct, Dutchess Co., N. Y.

6896. SOLOMON DOTY, son Isaac Doty and Elizabeth England, b. Oyster Bay, N. Y., about 1691. The date of his birth is not exactly determined, but as he witnessed a deed signed by his father in 1716, it is probable that he was b. between 1690 and 1696. He m. prob. Oyster Bay or Hempstead, Rachel Seaman, dau. David Seaman and Temperance Williams. He d. 1761–2. His will, made Aug. 8, 1761, and proved March 4, 1762, does not mention his wife, who had prob. d. earlier.

Solomon Doty of Oyster Bay, gives:

1. To his three daughters, Temperance, Elizabeth and Mary, 80£ each and some personal property.

2. All the balance in trust to Zebulon Seamans, Thomas Kirby, his son Isaac Doty and his son Moses Doty, who are appointed executors who shall sell the estate and pay.

He is buried with several of his children in the cemetery of the Episcopal Church of Oyster Bay. His wife died subsequently to March 15, 1781, being mentioned in the will, drawn that date, of her son John. Her maiden name is made apparent from the will of her son Thomas.

6898. SAMUEL DOTY, son Isaac Doty and Elizabeth England, b. Oyster Bay, N. Y., about 1695; m. there prob. about 1718–20, Charity Mudge, b. there, dau. Jarvis Mudge. They lived in that part of the town of Oyster Bay called Littleworth.

As early as 1716, he is recorded as buying land, and again in 1722. But March 5, 1723, Isaac Doty, Sr., conveyed, in consideration of his fatherly love, to his son, Samuel Doty, a farm adjoining lands owned by his other sons, Jacob, Joseph, Isaac and James Doty. 1730, Samuel Doty sells a plot to Elias Smith. Samuel Doty and wife were members of the Friend's Meeting.

His will, dated 5th day, 3d month, 1740, was not proved till 1741; in it Samuel Doty of Littleworth, in the bounds of Oyster Bay, gives:

1. To his beloved wife, Charity, as long as she remains a widow, the use of the farm to bring up the children until they be old enough to go to trades.

2. To his daughter, Deborah, 20£ at 21 years or marriage.

3. To his four sons, Isaac, Stephen, Charles and Elias, one-fourth part each at 21 years.

4. His wife, Charity, Solomon Doty and Jarvis Mudge are appointed executors.

By a codicil or addition dated the next day, 6th day, 3d month, 1740, he gives to his three daughters, Phebe Brandiga, Charity Dodge and Elizabeth Albertson, 5 shillings each.

6902. JOSEPH DOTY, son Joseph Doty and his wife, Sarah, b. Oyster Bay, N. Y., about 1708; prob. m. Charlotte, Dutch ss Co., N. Y., 1744, Lucretia De Long, b. there about 1722, dau. Francis De Long and Elsha Van Schaick. He d. Lansingburgh, N. Y.

The legend in the family was that Elsha Van Schaick was daughter and sole heir of an Amsterdam banker, and that she eloped with Francis De Long, who was a French officer. This story made it difficult to obtain full items of some branches, who were suspicious that they were to be defrauded of their share of valuable estate.

Joseph Doty receipted for his share of his father's estate, from which he received 178£, May 6, 1729, and probably soon after removed to New York City, where, 1738, we find Joseph Doty a private in Capt. Charles Laroex's company, a New York City militia company; but he removed to Dutchess Co., N. Y., and settled at Crum Elbow in that county, where he married about 1744. The De Longs were early settlers there. Francis De Langan appears in the colonial Dutch records as living, 1714, in Dutchess Co. In 1716 a De Long was located at Beekman, Dutchess Co., and kept an inn there. In 1724, Francis De Langdon was assessor. Crum Elbow is in the immediate vicinity of Clinton, where Charles and Elias Doty settled, they being cousins of Joseph Doty and from Oyster Bay. Previous to 1786, however, this whole district was known, as Charlotte.

Joseph Doty was a blacksmith, probably in good circumstances, his sons and daughters all being people of good position. About 1769 the whole family removed to Lansingburgh, Rensselaer Co., N. Y.

June 5, 1767. Joseph Doty, blacksmith, of Crum Elbow, Dutchess Co., N. Y., mortgages land there.

March 30, 1769. Joseph Doty, blacksmith, and his wife, Cashea of Charlotte, sell lots there, being part of nine partners, to Samuel Smith, Jr., of Jamaica, Queens Co., and Melancthon Smith of Charlotte.

February 26, 1872. William Doty of Cow Neck, Hempstead, and Eliza beth, his wife, sell land there. They may, perhaps, have removed with their children at this time or soon after to Geneva, N. Y.

His will is on record in New York City, dated January 1, 1774; proved March 29, 1774, and gives as follows: Isaac Doty, County of Richmond, innkeeper. 1. To Margerette, my wife, all my estate for her use so long as she shall remain a widow; if she marry, the estate to be divided among all my children equally. It appoints his wife, Margerette, his son, Samuel Doty, and his trusty friend, Benjamin Seaman, all of Richmond County, executors.

The following deeds are recorded in Richmond County, N. Y.:

May 14, 1762. Isaac Doty of Nassau Island, Queens County, N. Y., carpenter, buys 100 acres on Prince's Bay of Billop estate. This is witnessed by another Isaac Doty.

Child:

6985. i. ALBERT was a blacksmith; m., 1st, March 14, 1761, Phebe Pearce, dau. Samuel Pearce and Abigail Powell. He m., 2d, April 3, 1789, Mrs. Abigail Youngs Pearce, b. 1743, dau. John and Rebecca Youngs, and widow of William Pearce; she d. May 18, 1809. He m., 3d, Jan. 26, 1811, Mrs. Rachel Weeks Wright, b. 1749, dau. Job Weeks and Phebe Townsend, and widow of Nicholas Wright. He worked for a time in New York City, and is said to have had a cousin, Palmer Doty, prob. Gilbert Palmer Doty (No. 7008); he lived mainly, however, at Oyster Bay or vicinity.

6930. CHARLES DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Charity Mudge, b. Littleworth, Oyster Bay, N. Y., about 1730; m. prob. there Sarah Baker, b. there. He was a farmer, and they lived in the town of Clinton, at what is now Hyde Park, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he d. about 1803. She d. there later. It is related that he d. same day as his son Elias' wife, he being found dead in his chair later in the same day. They were both buried in the Quaker Meeting ground, Crum Elbow, Dutchess Co., N. Y. He emigrated with his brother, Elias, from Oyster Bay to Dutchess Co. about 1755.

Mrs. Phebe Mosher (No. 7141), dau. Stephen Doty reported that Charles Doty was not a member of the Quaker Meeting, though he attended it when he attended anywhere. She remembered him and said he was quite aged, 70 or 80, at death, which occurred when she was about five years old (1803). He lived near Crum Elbow, and the family visited very little with his brother Elias. When he attended meeting it was the Crum Elbow meeting, which met monthly with the Clinton meeting, so that the records were the same and were burned in Mr. Smith Upton's house some years since.

Children:

6986. i. STEPHEN, b. prob. about 1756.
6987. ii. SAMUEL, b. 1764.
6988. iii. SOLOMON, b. 1769 or earlier.
6989. iv. ELIAS.
6990. v. MARY, m. Isaac Frailix; lived Clinton.
6991. vi. SARAH, m. —— Fair; lived Schoharie Co., N. Y.
6992. vii. PHEBE.
6993. viii. RUTH.
6994. ix. MARGARET.

Even the existence of Phebe, Ruth and Margaret, is not certain. Mrs. Margaret Bishop (No. 7154) is the only one I have found who remembers any Margaret. She thinks Margaret and another sister married Henry Dodge and Edmund Dodge. Spencer C. Doty (No. 7564) reported from tradition that Phebe Doty married Hezekiah Dodge, and Ruth Doty married Edward Dodge, and that the Dodge families removed to Rensselaerville, Albany Co., N. Y. From still another source I have heard that one of these daughters married Zachariah Marshall.

Mrs. Phebe Mosher (No. 7141), granddaughter Charles Doty, whom I saw June, 1882, she then being 84, but in possession of full faculties, recollected but one aunt, Aunt Mary Frailix. She thought there were others who lived north, perhaps in Columbia County, but did not recollect ever hearing who they married. She did not think any of them married Zachariah Marshall, whom she remembered.

6931. ELIAS DOTY, son Samuel Doty and Charity Mudge, b. Littleworth, Oyster Bay, prob. N. Y., 1732; m., 1st, Long Island, prob. about 1755, Amy Dean, b. there 1735, prob. dau. Nicholas Dean. She d. Clinton, Dutchess Co., N. Y., May 25, 1782. He m., 2d, Clinton, Mrs. Hannah Palmer Aiken, b. White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1752, dau. Gilbert Palmer and Sarah Harrison and widow of Thomas Aikin. Mr. and Mrs. Aikin lived Quaker Hill, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where 4 chil. were born to them, 1 son and 3 daus. It is possible that her m. to Elias Doty may have been there instead of at Clinton. She outlived her husb. many years, and d. at Macedon Centre, N. Y., Dec. 24, 1842, aged 90, and was buried there in the Friends' burying ground.

He removed from Oyster Bay to Dutchess County with his brother, Charles, probably about 1755, though the first mention of him that I find on the county records is in 1762, December 29, when Elias Doty and his wife, Ame, of Beekman, mortgage their land there. May 18, 1764, he is again mentioned as "of Poughkeepsie precinct," and again in the same year as of "Charlotte." It is probable that he settled very early in that part of the town of Clinton which is now known as "Clinton Corners," and that his first house was but a few rods from the house occupied, 1882, by William Bedell. He was an active member of the Quaker Meeting at the Stone Meeting House, a friend of Elias Hicks, the preacher, who was a frequent visitor at his house, and an extensive and greatly respected farmer. He died at Clinton, March 16, 1806, aged 74, and was buried by the side of his first wife, Amy, in the burying ground near the Stone Meeting House.

His will is on record at Poughkeepsie. It was signed February 18, 1802, and proved May 7, 1806. It mentions bequests to the widow and all his children, as below, except his daughter Rachel, she having died, and it gives to her children. The widow, his son Isaac, and his son-in-law Samuel Carpenter, are made executors.

All early records of the Quaker Meeting at the Stone Meeting House having been destroyed by fire, and not having found any record of his family in any branch of the family the order of the births of the children is somewhat problematical.

The name "Thornycraft" was abbreviated by some decendants to the name "Craft," and by others to "Thorn." He lived Oyster Bay Township, Queens Co., N. Y., prob. Jericho. He d. 1803.

Another account says Isaac Doty lived at what is now known as Glenwood. He was a school teacher there in 1783. A bill rendered then reads: "Novber 24, 1783. Rec'd of Sarah Carpenter of Reedy Fly, the sum of 16s. in full for Schooling two of her children, Namely, Latting and Freelove. Witness, Isaac Doty."

His will, on file at Jamaica, N. Y., and proved May 9, 1803, mentions no wife, but mentions a brother Samuel and a sister Elizabeth, besides his children and grandchildren. It was witnessed by James and Hannah Craft.

Children, b. prob. Jericho:

1799. David Doty and his wife, Amy, sell one-quarter part of land, etc., as bought 1796, to Joseph Kirby of Oyster Bay.

1810. David Doty and his wife, Amy, of Rye, sell all land there to James Carpenter of Queens Co., Adam Mott and David Kirby of Westchester Co., and Jacob Wood of New York.

Nothing further appears in Westchester Co. records, and they probably returned to Oyster Bay, where he d. prob. 1815.

Queens Co. records, April 10, 1815. Amy Doty, was appointed administratrix of David Doty's estate. Will of Amy Doty, made Feb. 7, 1831, filed and proved March 25, 1833, gives: 1. To Widow Descendants of his family say he was a farmer and lived at Hempstead. Further traditions, of doubtful authenticity, say that he had a brother, a sea captain, who died at Rye, N. Y., at the house of a sister, who married —— Totten, and another brother who married at Rye or vicinity, and had a family there.

It is reported that during the Revolution Ormond Doty lived at or in the vicinity of Albany, N. Y.; that he was a loyalist and was imprisoned at Albany for some time on that charge, but at the intercession of his brothers, who were patriots, he was released on the condition of going to South Wallingford, Vt., at that time a wilderness. He removed there with his family, where they settled and remained.

He was drowned at the wreck of the steamer Emily B. Souder, of which he was purser, which was lost two days out from New York, Dec. 8, 1878, all hands being lost except two seaman. He had been previously in shipping houses in New York City, was well versed in languages and was on the road to success in his line.

His widow and children lived Brooklyn, N. Y., for several years and then removed to Washington, D. C., where Mrs. Doty has been very successful in establishing herself and educating her children. She has filled an arduous clerkship in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions at the same time and is known as a lady of remarkable energy and ability.

Of her children, Jacob Lamb Doty, the oldest son, became a page in the United States Senate, and making many friends among the Senators, secured an appointment in 1889 to the United States consulate of Bermuda and a year later was appointed consul to Tahiti, a position which he has held through several administrations. Several pleasant notices of his services have appeared in the public press, of which one from the Washington Press of May 14, 1889, which was largely copied throughout the country, is here inserted.

Children, b. Brooklyn:
8612. i. Jacob Lamb, b. May 12 1869.

The following appeared in the Washington Press, 1889: "When about a year since President Cleveland transferred Mr. Jacob L. Doty from the consulate at Bermuda to that of Tahiti, Society Islands, the many friends of the young man in this city congratulated him upon his good fortune. Hardly any, however, could have thought that in something more than a twelvemonth congratulations would again be in order. Not that Mr. Doty has again been transferred, although knowing ones who have closely watched his consular career predict that he is destined to occupy an important position in that service. Mr. Doty went to Tahiti thoroughly equipped as a consular officer, and did his duty from the start. He has now, however, gone further than the consular regulations demand in ingratiating himself into the good graces of the citizens of Tahiti. Mr. Doty has fallen in love with a beautiful and charming inhabitant of Papeti, the object of his affection being no less a personage than Princess Polona, of Tahita. His love has been reciprocated. The formal betrothal has taken place, and the approaching nuptials is the all-absorbing theme in high social circles in the beautiful island. Ever since the advent of Mr. Doty in Tahiti he has been the recipient of marked and most distinguished consideration from the governor-general of the island, and from people of high social position, which, of course, included the family of the Princess Polona.

"The princess is a beautiful and accomplished lady about 18 years of age and a most perfect blonde. She is the daughter of Lord and Lady D'Arcy, her mother, Lady D'Arcy, being a native Tahitan princess, and her father an English nobleman of distinguished ancestry. Princess Polona has had all the advantages of a continental education in France and Germany, also in England. She is the possessor of immense wealth, being, in her own right, the largest property owner on the islands, with vast cocoa plantations and pearl fisheries valued at millions of dollars and further receives a large annuity from France under treaty stipulations. As may naturally be supposed, the princess has not lacked many suitors for her fair hand, all of whom, including the Earl of Dudley, she has persistently refused. Lord D'Arcy was himself anxious to have his daughter marry a scion of the English peerage, but gracefully yielded to the wishes of his lovely and only child to accept as a son-in-law a sovereign American citizen.

"Consul Doty is a young man, but 22 years of age, of superior ability, and has worked his own way—it now may be truly said—to position and fame. As a boy he was a page in the United States Senate, where he won the good opinions of senators generally through his courteous and pleasing manners, and especially of Senator Bayard. This fact undoubtedly was very influential with Mr. Bayard in appointing Mr. Doty, an ardent Republican, to Tahiti. Mr. Doty comes from a distinguished family. His father, now deceased, was a prominent citizen of Brooklyn. His mother, Mrs. A. L. Doty, is now living in this city, where she is highly respected and has a large circle of friends. Mrs. Doty was the granddaughter of Lord Melbourne, and her English antecedents were relatives of Charles Lamb, the McPhersons, Wallaces, and other families of note in Great Britain."

8613. ii. WILLIAM FURMAN, b. Dec. 1, 1870.

In the spring of 1896, a Washington paper contained this notice: "Mr. William Furman Doty of this city has been selected, after a preliminary contest, to compete for the "Lynde Prize" in the senior debate at the commencement at Princeton University on June 10. He is also in the first general group in scholarship in the senior class of that institution. He will enter Princeton Seminary next fall to prepare for the ministry. The Doty family are prominent members of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church."

Connected unquestionably in some way with the family of Isaac Doty of Oyster Bay, Long Island, but by descent as yet unascertained, is the following family. For all the records of the Nova Scotia branch of this family I am indebted to William R. Doty (No. 8927) of Hebron, N. S.

8839. WILLIAM DOTY, b. Queens Co., N. Y., about 1735; m. Westchester Co., N. Y., about 1758, a wife, Elinor, dau. of the Dutch minister at Fordham, Westchester Co., N. Y. Another tradition in the family says the name of the wife was Sauchee.

William Doty's parents lived at Fresh Meadows, and he was probably born there. Fresh Meadows, was a hamlet in Queens Co., lying between Jamaica and Flushing, about two miles from Jamaica, and three miles from Flushing. His father is said to have been a Presbyterian, and his mother a Quaker, both of whom died quite aged, 1770–4.

William Doty, probably soon after reaching his majority, removed to Westchester Co., where he settled in the town of Westchester. He was a blacksmith by trade, and probably also carried on a farm, and raised his sons to the same calling. The Revolutionary War coming on, his oldest son espoused the Royalist side and joined the English Army, but the father seems to have remained loyal to his country, and became the keeper of the jail, as well as the sexton of the Episcopal Church, at Westchester, of which Rev. Isaac Wilkins was the pastor at that time. After his death his sons, Elias and Charles, succeeded him as sexton. He owned a house there, and when he left it lived with his son Elias,

William and Elinor Doty both lived to be of old age, and died within two years of each other, about 1810, at Westchester.

8840. i. SAMUEL, b. July 25, 1759.
8841. ii. MARY, b. perhaps as early as 1761.
8842. iii. JOHN, b. Sept. 27, 1764.
8843. iv. SARAH, b. prob. about 1766.
8844. v. WILLIAM, b. prob. about 1768; m.; lived and d. Westchester; some of his chil. lived Horseneck, now Greenwich, Ct.
8845. vi. ELIAS, b. prob. about 1770.
8846. vii. CHARLES, b. July, 1772.
8847. viii. PHILIP, b. March 17, 1775.

8840. SAMUEL DOTY, son William Doty and his wife, Elinor, b. Westchester, N. Y., July 25, 1759; m. New Edinburgh, N. S., about 1786, Hephzibah Porter, b. Massachusetts, dau. Ebenezer Porter. Both d. Digby Co., N. S.

At three weeks of age, his mother being too weak to properly care for him he was taken to the residence of his grandparents, at Fresh Meadows, on Long Island, with whom he remained till their deaths. When of sufficient age he was sent to school and obtained a fair education. His grandfather was a Presbyterian, a man of integrity and piety; his grandmother was a Quaker. His grandfather died about 1770, at the age, it is said, of 107 years, and the grandmother in 1774, aged above 90. He then returned to his parents at Westchester.

The Revolutionary War now coming on, he espoused the cause of the king, and crossing to Long Island, avoided joining the American army When the British landed on Long Island he joined them as a volunteer in the 17th Dragoons, in the capacity of Quartermaster, though never regularly enlisted in the army. During the war he was for a long time a prisoner to the Americans, and after his release and return to the army received a dangerous wound, the ball shattering the thigh bone and rendering him unfit for active service for three years. At the close of the war, 1783, with many of the royalists he removed to Nova Scotia, landing at Annapolis Royal and was soon allotted lands at Sissiboo, now Weymouth. Here he engaged in the blacksmithing business, and soon after removed to New Edinburgh, a settlement on the opposite side of the Sissiboo River, where he married. He lived here about ten years, then two years at Clare, and subsequently at Yarmouth, Weymouth and Digby. A portion of this time he led a dissipated life, but subsequently reformed and became an active Christian worker in the temperance cause. This account is taken from a sketch of his life furnished by himself, and published, 1831, by the Society for the Propogation of the Gospel, at Weymouth, N. S. He does not mention ever returning to the United States, but in Westchester it is stated that he returned once or twice to visit his parents there.

The writer had the pleasure of meeting Lewis Doty at his residence in New York City, in 1871, he being at that time eighty years old, and a very active man for his years, enjoying good health and with all his faculties unimpaired. He said that by the efforts of his mother, whose memory he held in great respect, he received a common country school education and came to New York City, 1805, where he engaged as clerk in the grocery store of Jonah Tilley, then at Crane Wharf, where now the Fulton market stands. He returned to Westchester after awhile and came again to New York in 1812, but as the war prostrated all business, he again returned to Westchester. He left there finally in 1816, and in New York went into the grocery business with Mr. Hunt, and in 1817, married his employer's daughter. He carried on the business at No. 32 Bowery, which was then in the very outskirts of the city, there being scarcely any houses above Broome street. He was successful, and in 1829 bought the corner of Bowery and Third street, where he subsequently lived. At this time it was considered quite out of town, and he could easily see from his door-steps the vessels in the East River. He retired from business about 1851, spending his leisure time in fishing and other out-of-door recreations, finding that to agree with his health and comfort. He had an excellent memory and it was delightful to sit and talk with him and hear his recollections of old scenes.

THE FAMILY OF JOSEPH DOTY.

9. JOSEPH DOTY, the youngest son and eighth child of Edward Doty and Faith Clarke, was born at Plymouth, Mass., April 30, 1651, his birth being entered on the Colony Record. He was thus, at the death of his father, but four years of age. He doubtless lived with his mother at Plymouth up to about the time of her marriage to John Phillips in 1667, and must have enjoyed a considerable advantage in having the aid and counsel of his brothers, Edward and John, both of whom were now well established householders and prosperous and examplary citizens.

The Colony records show that in 1672, he was living at Plymouth, and it is probable that he did not remove with his mother and sisters to Marshfield, Mass., but, being at that time sixteen years of age, engaged with his brother John, or some other farmer, and soon commenced life for himself. In his early days he seems to have had no other occupation than that of farmer.

1671–2, January 17. He acts during the absence of his brother, Thomas, as his agent in the matter of building a house.

Later in the same year, 1672, Joseph Doten of Plymouth, conveys to John Lapham of Portsmouth, R. I., "all that my seventh part of one whole share of upland and meadow, divided and undivided, which was given me by my father, Edward Doten, deceased, which is the seventh part of one thirty-fourth part or share of parcel of land bought by deed from the Indians, Nov. 29, 1652."

1674, October 27. Being bound over in a suit, which appears to have been amicably settled later, he is called "Joseph Doten, plantor, of Plymouth."

1680, July 6. Joseph Dotey of Sandwich and Elizabeth Ellis, widow, complain with others of the action of Lieutanant Ephraim Morton of Plymouth, who disturbed and defaced their boundary lines at Sepecan—the bounds of said Dotey and Ellis being a pyne tree, standing neare Sepecan Necke, a little below the rocke house or wigwam. The jury found for the plaintiff.

Sepecan, or Scippican, was the early name for Rochester, Mass., which was also known as Mattapoisett. The widow, Elizabeth Ellis, was the widow of John Ellis, one of the first settlers at Sandwich. It is probable Joseph Doty lived at Sandwich for several years previous to 1680, and that he remained on very friendly terms with the widow Ellis and her family, for though there is no apparent connection by marriage, one of his sons born about this time is named Ellis Doty. He became one of the original purchasers of Rochester, but apparently did not take up his residence there till about 1683.

1681, October 28. "Joseph Dotey came into the Court and owned before the Court that hee sold halfe a share of land att Mattapoisette to Mr. Edward Gray, and that hee received full satisfaction for it."

1683, June 7. Joseph Dotey of Sepican, alias Rochester, conveys to William Clarke, a plot there "at Mattapoisett."

1686, June. Aaron Barlow, Joseph Dotey, John Wing, Samuel Hammond, Jacob Bumpus and Samuel White, all of Scippican, propounded to take up their freedom.

1690, May 20. John Hammond was appointed to be Lieutenant, and Joseph Doty, ensigne, of the military company of ye towne of Rochester.

For the next twenty years deeds to and from Joseph Doty are recorded on the County Records in such numbers as show him to have been a very large landholder at Rochester. He was a surveyor as well as farmer, and his services were in frequent demand to lay out roads and farms, and to establish boundry lines, both public and private. He thus laid out, in 1697, the main roads of the present towns of Rochester and Wareham. In 1698 he was elected treasurer, of the town of Rochester and re-elected 1700, and in that year, 1700, July 4th, he gave to the town a parcel of land for a "pound," and the year following obligated himself to keep the same in repair; the same to be the property of the town so long as used for that purpose.

Several of the deeds recorded are notable as furnishing clues to his marriage; in one, dated 1700, Joseph Doty of Rochester sells a plot there, being that bought of his brother, Samuel Hatch, which he received from Father Hatch; and in 1704, Joseph Doty of Rochester exchanged a lot there with Samuel Hatch of Scituate.

The Hatch's were among the first settlers of Scitutate, Mass., and Samuel Hatch, born there 1653, was a son of Walter Hatch and Elizabeth Holbrook, his wife. The language of the deed implies that Joseph Doty had married a sister of Samuel and daughter of Walter Hatch, there being no other way apparent in which they could have been called brother and father. It does not appear that either Samuel Hatch or his father left Scituate, but they were among the early purchasers of lands at Rochester.

1705. Joseph Doty sells ten acres of undivided land to Freeman Ellis, who was a son of the widow, Elizabeth Ellis of Sandwich.

1713, December 25, Christmas day. Joseph Doty, Sr., for a nominal consideration, conveys to his son, Ellis Doty, both of Rochester, "all my ½ of that part of y^e^ 7th lott of Cedar Swamp that I have in Little Cedar Swamp at Mattapoissett," which deed is witnessed by Peter Blackmer and Joseph Doty, Jr.

1714, February 28. Joseph Doty, Sr., of Rochester conveys, "in consideration of the love and affection which I have and do bear unto my dutiful son, John Doty, of the same town, all that 30 acres of land in Rochester, lying on the easterly branch of a certain brook which runs into Waywayantick River near the county bridge, next to the land of Edward Bumpus." And as the next day was the twenty-sixth birthday of his son, John, this was probably a very happy birthday present.

1714–5, January 14. Joseph Doty of Rochester conveys to Joseph Doty, Jr., forty acres around the latter's dwelling house, but butted on Sandwich road.

1724. Joseph Doty, Jr., of Rochester, sells the house and lot where his father now lives, being his homestead, lying near the head of Cohassett Creek, on the south side of the way that leads to Sandwich and east side of the way that leads to Plymouth.

May 3, 1731. "Joseph Doty, in his eighty-first year, and John White, in his sixty-seventh year," both of Rochester, appeared before a magistrate to certify certain boundary lines there.

The date of his death is not upon the record, but probably occurred soon after this. It is evident, however, from the entries upon the town records of Rochester, that he was not only one of the largest landholders and one of the wealthiest farmers in the town, but that he was public-spirited and held in the highest esteem and repute by his neighbors and townsmen.

In no one of the deeds nor in any record of the town is there satisfactory evidence of his marriage. The deeds above make it almost certain that the family name of one wife was Hatch. An entry on the town record reads, "Deborah Doty died June 21, 1711." There is nothing to indicate her age nor what relation she was. But inasmuch as Joseph Doty had a daughter, Deborah, who lived till at least 1723, and as there was at this time no other Deborah, of whom we have knowledge, at either Rochester or Plymouth, and further, as Joseph Doty married again, March 9, 1712, it may be almost safely assumed that the Deborah Doty, who died June 21, 1711, was his wife and the mother of those children whose births are recorded at Rochester, and this, notwithstanding the fact that there is no record otherwise, that Walter Hatch of Scituate had any daughter Deborah.

The records, however, are not quite clear upon another point. An entry shows that Elizabeth Doty of Rochester married, February 28, 1705-6, John Lewis. And as there was no other Elizabeth Doty living at that time unaccounted for it is probable that she was a daughter of Joseph Doty, born before those whose births are recorded at Rochester. It is also quite certain that his son, Theophilas Doty was born as early as 1674-5. But if Joseph Doty married as early as 1674, it is altogether probable that he married Elizabeth Warren, born at Plymouth, September 5, 1654, daughter of Nathaniel Warren of Plymouth, by his first wife, Sarah Walker.

A complaint made by her in October, 1674, in which Joseph Doty was at first placed under bonds of 80£, but from which his bondsmen were shortly released, leads to the supposition that the suit was amicably settled, and very probably by the marriage of the principals. Assuming this to be correct, and Elizabeth Warren to have been his first wife, it is probable that Theophilas and Elizabeth were the issue of this marriage, and that Ellis and the other children recorded at Rochester were the issue of the marriage with Deborah Hatch, while the third marriage, in 1712, was without issue.

While Joseph Doty's name, before his departure from Plymouth, is written on the records there several times as Doten, it in no case so appears after he left there, while at Sandwich or during his long residence at Rochester, but is always written Doty or Dotey. Nor is there a single case among his descendants of any variation from this. For a few years during the next generation some members were known as Dotey, but since that and at present there is little spelling other than Doty among the entire posterity of this Rochester branch.

In emigrating from Rochester a considerable number of his descendants settled in the town of Sharon, Ct.; others went to Hardwick, Mass., and from there to Vermont and to the northern counties of New York, while the later generations helped have to make up that tide of emigration that has spread over every State and Territory of our great West. Wherever they have gone they have been noted for their intelligence, their enterprise and their public spirit. Almost every male member of this branch living at the time took his part in the Revolution, on the side of the colonies, and since that date their descendants have generally been men of influence in the community, and many of them have held honorable positions in public life. And this may be said as well of those who have remained till recent years at Rochester and Wareham; they have had the same characteristics as those who have departed.

Rochester is pleasantly situated in Plymouth Co., Mass., in the midst of an intelligent farming community. It has been the birthplace of many noble men and women; but no race that has sprung from its plains does more credit to its native town than the stalwart and patriotic descendants of Joseph Doty.

Rochester celebrated its bi-centenial anniversary on July 22, 1879, and the following extracts from the newspaper account will be found interesting:

"The people of Rochester, Wareham, Marion and Mattapoisett, with many of those who have lived in one of these towns, all of which were in the original Rochester grant, and a great many others, who sympathize with them in their joys and sorrows, are to-day engaged in celebrating in a grove at Marion, the two hundredth anniversary of the purchase by the Court of the Plymouth Colony of the lands of Sippican. Since early morning there has been a steady flow of pleasure-seekers to the spot selected for the exercises, which is near that on which the early settlers built their first church, around which clustered their humble and long since decayed dwellings. Trains on the railroad have brought many, but teams have brought more, and among those present are Mrs. Zuriah Gould Mitchell of North Abington and her two daughters, lineal descendants of the Indian Kings Massasoit and Tispaquin, and also of Sassamon, whose murder by King Philip brought on the great Indian war. They wore the Indian costume, and attracted a good deal of attention. They take great pride in their pure Indian blood and descent.

"The day was all that could be desired, and there were about 2500 people on the grounds where the celebration took place. Rochester is a small farming community of about 1000 inhabitants, and does not lie directly upon any railroad, being a mile or two distant from the Marion station, on the Fairhaven branch of the Old Colony. The crowd which assembled upon the grounds was an excellent example of the sterling, upright New England country population, from which so many great and good men have sprung. The opening feature of the proceedings of the day was a procession.

"After this body had reached the grove, where it was awaited by a large company, there was music by the band, followed by singing, and then came the address of welcome by the president of the day.

"Hon. Gerard C. Tobey, who filled that position, briefly welcomed those whom he saw before him. He reminded them that the American of the present day is too busy in the battle of life to devote any time to retrospect, but he thought the day could not be used in any better manner than in considering a civilization that in about two centuries has subdued the barbarism and the sterility of the country, and by our republican institutions has gained a place in the world fully as well advanced as that of the older nations of Europe from which we are descended. While he was proud of the Puritan record, he was glad to see that nationality or creed did not hinder those before him from rejoicing together. He then introduced the orator of the day, the Rev. Noble Warren Everett of Wareham, who made an interesting address, of which the following was a portion:

"'We are all assembled here to-day, not far from the rock of Plymouth, to celebrate the anniversary of an event of special interest, as we claim to be scions of the old Pilgrim stock. In the list of passengers who came over in the Mayflower, in 1620, and in the Fortune, 1621, we find the familiar names of Alden, Dotey, Fuller, Bassett, Bumpus or Bumps, Briggs, Cushman and De Lea Noye (Delano). In the cabin of the Mayflower they settled a general form of government, declaring in its preamble "that no act, imposition, law or ordinance be made or imposed upon us at present or to come, but such as have been or shall be enacted by the consent of the body of freemen or associates of their representatives legally assembled," the whole principle of the Revolution, briefly expressed. The men who formulated these views were those who have made this land what it is and we glory in our lineage.

"'How the white man first became possessed of the Sippican or Rochester territory, whether by purchase or conquest, I am unable to determine. A large part of it, but not the whole, was granted to Thomas Bisbeck and others January 22, 1638-9. In 1649, liberty is granted unto the townsmen of Plymouth to make use of the land at Sippican for holding and keeping of cattle and wintering of them, as they shall see cause. In 1651, "for the continual support of the township of Plymouth, for the place and seat of government, to prevent the dispersing of the inhabitants thereof, it is ordered that Sippican be granted to the town of Plymouth, to be a general help to the inhabitants thereof, for the keeping of their cattle and to remain for the common use and good of said township."

"'In 1660 King Philip, sachem of Pokanoket, youngest son of Massasoit, gave power "to Watuchpoo and Sampson, two Indian chiefs, and their brethren, to hold and make sale of these lands to whom they pleased," and on the 24th of December, 1668, Philip informed the Honorable Court at Plymouth that they were for sale. The Court promised to do all that it could to purchase these lands in order to make a settlement on them, provided those who wished to go there could find "Some more substantial men that are prudent persons of considerable estates" who were willing to join in the venture. It seems that such men were found, for on July 22, 1679, the purchase was made and the deed given. On the same day the purchasers met, organized and transacted considerable business. They were Joseph Lothrop, Barnabas Lathrop, Kenelon Winslow, William Clark, William Bradford, Ralph Powers, Joseph Bartlett, John Burge, George Morton, William Dexter, Samuel Briggs, Aaron Barlow, Moses Barlow, John Perry, Samuel Hammond, Samuel Davis, Benjamin Foster, Benjamin Bartlett, Elizabeth Ellis, Joseph Dunham, Thomas Hinckley, Thomas Clark, John Cotton, Seth Pope, Samuel White, Joseph Doty, John Bradford, William Peabody. The names of Samuel Arnold, William Connett and the ministry share were added to the list subsequently.

"'The territory they purchased embraced the whole of Rochester, Mattapoisett, Marion, and a much larger part of Wareham than has generally been supposed. The deed shows that the easterly line was the westerly jumping brook, now known as the Sylvanus Berse Brook, the Agawam and the Wankineo rivers. But they must have purchased additional land, for hundreds of acres were signed to Thomas Clark and others on the east side of the Wankineo river. Two Indian claims on the property were bought prior to 1683, and a third was settled in that year, after which the whites remained in undisputed possession. It is probable that the first settlers took up their residence in 1680. Their names are given by Barber as follows: Rev. Samuel Arnold, John Hammond, Samuel Hammond, Jacob Bumpus, Abraham Holmes, John Wing, Joseph Burgess, Job Winslow, Moses Bascom, Fraser Barlow, Aaron Barlow, Samuel White, John Haskell, Joseph Doty, —— Sprague.

"'Not far from where we are assembled they erected their first church, and tradition says that until their antique edifice was completed they worshipped upon and around a huge rock known as "Minister's Rock."

"'Rochester was incorporated as a town in 1686. The first ordained minister was Rev. Timothy Ruggles, who commenced his labors here in 1709. In 1733 the settlers in Mattapoisett were set off as a distinct parish under the pastoral care of Rev. Ivory Hovey. His immediate successor, in 1772, was Rev. Lemuel Le Baron. These two men continued in the ministry for one hundred years.

"'Wareham was incorporated as a town July 6, 1739. Its first ordained minister was Rev. Rowland Thacher, who was born in Barnstable. He was a graduate of Harvard in 1733, and died in 1775. Josiah Cotton, a graduate of Yale, succeeded him, and Noble Everett was the third pastor. He was also a graduate of Yale and a chaplain in the Revolutionary army. He took charge of the Wareham parish October 15, 1787, and died in office December 30, 1819. Under his instruction Ebenezer Burgess, D. D., John Mackie, M. D., an eminent physician of Providence, R. I., Timothy G. Coffin, Esq., so long a shining light at the British bar, and many others were fitted for college.

"'Marion was incorporated May 14, 1852, and Mattapoisett May 20, 1857. For a long period after the first settlement the occupation of the people was agriculture. During the Revolution they made salt by boiling sea water, and more recently shipbuilding has been carried on to a considerable extent. The manufacture of hollow ware was commenced on a large scale in 1825. The cutting of nails at Wareham was begun in 1822 by I. & J. Pratt & Co., and the product of this work may be had in all quarters of the civilized world. The district has furnished thousands of sailors and hundreds of captains, who have commanded vessels of large size. At one time scores of vessels were employed in the whale fishery from the ports of Mattapoisett, Wareham and Marion, and some of them were remarkably successful.

"'The sons of Sippican have been noted for their patriotism in all the great wars that have shaken this country. In the French war of 1757-8 nine citizens of Wareham were engaged, and one, Samuel Berse, lost his life. The towns of Rochester and Wareham took an active part in the War of the Revolution, furnishing both men and money to conduct it, and further aiding the colonists with strong resolutions and good advice.

"'In the War of 1812-15 a party of British sailors from the frigate Nimrod landed at Wareham and destroyed property valued at $25,000. The town was unprotected at the time, but this act led to the formation of a military company which would have given any subsequent band of invaders a warm reception. Many men served in the coast guard, and there were several who enlisted in the navy. For the War of the Rebellion Rochester furnished 125 men, of whom 9 died in the service; Marion, 25 men, of whom 6 died in the service; Mattapoisett, 215 men, a surplus of 8 over all demands, of whom 18 died in the service, and Wareham, 320 of whom 34 died in the service.

"'Among the eminent men who were born on the Rochester grant was Alexander Bourne, who went to Ohio in 1810. He showed great personal bravery at the Battle of Fort Meigs. In 1814 he was appointed aid-de-camp to Governor Worthington, and in 1815 Adjutant-General of the State of Ohio. He was appointed in 1818, by President Monroe, receiver of public moneys, and he held a number of responsible positions in the State of his adoption. Zephaniah Swift, born in Wareham, February, 1759, was a member of Congress from 1793 to 1796. He was a secretary of the mission to France in 1800, and from 1806 to 1809 he was Chief Justice of the State of Connecticut. He left behind him several erudite legal works. Thomas Burgess, born in Wareham, November 29, 1778, was a prominent lawyer and judge at Providence, R. I., and Tristam Burgess, the "Bald Eagle of the North," was born in Rochester, February 26, 1770. These towns have also furnished clergymen, lawyers and physicians in considerable numbers, and of note wherever they have spent their lives.'

"Mr. Everett rapidly and in graphic language sketched the material and moral progress of the last two centuries, and then in glowing language prophesied what the orator of the day, two hundred years hence, will have to say to those who will gather around him to assist in celebrating the fourth centennial of the purchase of the Rochester grant."

Plymouth, Mass, 1674, m. a wife, Ruth, whose family name is not known, but from an expression in a deed, subscribed by Theophilas Doty, in 1723, we may surmise it to be Lawrence. They lived Rochester, Mass., where the births of the chil. are recorded, though little else is known of either the parents or chil.

In 1703-4, purchase and sale of lands at Rochester is recorded.

1723, October 15. He sells his "homestead and house lott which I received partly, that is to say, ½ from my honored father, Joseph Doty, and ½ from Joshua Laurence." This plot comprised about forty acres in the town of Rochester.

He was among those exempted in 1730, as Quakers, from paying ministers' rate, by the statutes of Massachusetts.

Rochester Town Records show:

1705. Ellis Doty of Rochester, buys a plot there on the east side of Muddy Creek, from Bethiah Little, widow of Isaac Little.

1709. He sold this plot to Nathaniel Winslow.

1705, April 23. His "ear marks" are entered.

1713, December 25. As noted before, Joseph Doty, Sr., for a nominal consideration conveys to his son, Ellis Doty, both of Rochester, "all my ½ of that part of ye 7th lott of Cedar Swamp, that I have in little Cedar Swamp at Mattapoisett." The deed is witnessed by Peter Blackmer and Joseph Doty, Jr.

1717. Ellis Doty, husbandman, of Rochester, sells land there.

1721. He buys there.

This is the last entry on the records in which his name appears, nor have we any further information of his life there. The enterprising character of his children and immediate descendants, would indicate force of character, intelligence and ability. He was probably a prosperous farmer at Rochester, but did not live to an advanced age.

Of John and Joseph Doty, above no satisfactory trace has been found.

9390. JOSEPH DOTY, son Joseph Doty and Deborah Hatch, b. Rochester, Mass., March 30, 1683; m. there July 2, 1708, Hannah Edwards.

He lived at Rochester, perhaps in that part of the town afterward set off into the town of Wareham, where, from 1741 to 1745, he held various local offices. About 1747–9 he removed with his family to Sharon, Ct. He is recorded there, November 1, 1749, as the purchaser of forty acres.

In the records of Plymouth Co., Mass., it is recorded January 14, 1714–5, Joseph Doty of Rochester, conveys to Joseph Doty, Jr., forty acres round his, Joseph, Jr.'s, dwelling house, but butted on Sandwich road.

1715, May 14. His ear-marks are entered at Rochester.

1724. Joseph Doty, Jr., of Rochester, sells the house where his father now resides, being his homestead, lying near the head of Cohassett Creek, on the south side of the way that leads to Sandwich and east side of the way that leads to Plymouth.

Other deeds of sale are entered 1723 and 1728, in each of which he is called Joseph Doty, Jr., of Rochester.

1745, March 9. Joseph Doty of Rochester, sells to Samuel Doty, mariner, of Rochester, part of land there which he bought of John Blackmer.

1747. He bought a plot of his son, Ellis Doty, boatman, of Wareham.

1748, March 30. He sold the above and all the lands he possessed at Rochester and Wareham, including his homestead, and this probably denotes the time of his removal to Connecticut.

There was a considerable emigration about this time from Rochester, Wareham, Plymouth, etc., to the town of Sharon, Ct., which is in the extreme westerly end of Litchfield County and adjoins the town of Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Many of the families owned farms in each of these towns, and some members resided in Sharon, and others in Amenia, while in these early days those in both towns attended church in Amenia, of which the pastor, Rev. Mr. Knibloe, kept a careful record which proves to be valuable to-day. In this record we find, under date May 5, 1765, "Old Mr. Joseph Doty was baptized." There is no record of the date of his death or of his wife's, but as he was at this time eighty-two years of age he probably did not long survive.

Joseph Doty and Hannah Edwards had children, whose births are entered on records at Rochester, Mass., as follows:

Children:

9409. i. SARAH, b. Aug. 16, 1709.
9410. ii. ISAAC, b. May 2, 1711.

9421. ii. THANKFULL, b. July 21, 1713.
9422. iii. JOSEPH, b. Aug. 8, 1723.

9392. JOHN DOTY, son Joseph Doty and Deborah Hatch, b. Rochester, Mass., March 1, 1688; m. prob. there, a wife, Elizabeth, whose family name has not been discovered.

All the information we have of this family is obtained from the records of Plymouth Co., Mass., and its towns. Here we learn, February 28, 1714, Joseph Doty, Sr., of Rochester, "in consideration of love and affection which I have and do bear unto my dutiful son, John Doty, of the same town," conveys "all that thirty acres of land in Rochester, lying on the easterly branch of a certain brook which runs into Waywayantick River near the county bridge next to land of Edward Bumpus."

1731, November 5. (Acknowleged in person by John Doty, 1734.) John Doty of Rochester, conveys "his house lot and homestead, where he now lives, about thirty acres, beginning at northeast corner Edward Bumpus' land, upon a certain brook that runs into the east side of Waweantic River near the county bridge.

1736. John Doty bought at Wareham of Martha Bumpus, seventeen acres on the east side of Waweantic River, which was bought by her father, James Bumpus of Rochester, of Rodolphus Hatch.

June 7, 1739. Samuel Doty, laborer, and Ebenezer Briggs, housewright, of Rochester, buy near the Waweantic River.

1742, Sept. 21. John Doty and Eleb'ihe, his wife, sell to Thomas Whitting the 17 acres he bought 1736, together with his share of dwelling house, the east end, and a smith's shop. The deed was witnessed by Samuel Doty and Zerviah Doty.

The same day, 1742, Sept. 21. Samuel Doty, mariner, and Zerviah, his wife, of Wareham, sell to Thomas Whitting, the land he bought 1739, together with his share of the house, being the west end, adjoining his father's house.

1745, March 9. Joseph Doty of Rochester sold to Samuel Doty, mariner, also of Rochester, part of land there which he bought of John Blackmer.

1747, Dec. 21. Samuel Doty of Sharon, in the County of New Haven, mariner, sells all his property at Wareham.

This covers all the records that have been found, no births of children and no deaths having been recorded at Rochester or Wareham.

It is probable that John Doty and wife left Rochester and Wareham about the time of selling his house lot, 1742–1745, and with his children he probably emigrated to Sharon, Ct., although no record exists there of his residence. But such records would be more likely omitted in a new settlement such as Sharon, rather than in the older towns in Massachusetts. There are no traditions in the family to help us on this point, and but two children have been discovered, though there may very possibly have been others,

Children:
9443. i. HANNAH.
9444. ii. JOHN.

9408. ELIJAH DOTY, son Ellis Doty and his wife, Ellinor, b. Rochester, Mass., Jan. 1, 1717–18; m. prob. Tiverton, R. I., or New Bedford, Mass., 1741 (they were published at Dartmouth, March 14, 1741), Susannah Allen, b. prob. Tiverton. He m., 2d, in the Oblong, Dutchess Co., N. Y., about 1748–9, Susannah Ferris, b. Quaker Hill, Dutchess Co., 1733, dau. Benjamin Ferris. They lived Quaker Hill, in the Oblong, and about 1788, prob. Half Moon, Saratoga Co., and later at Albany, N. Y. He is mentioned in deeds of Dutchess Co. as late as 1792. He d. at the home of his son, John Ferris, in Albany, prob. about 1803–4. She removed with John's family to Peekskill, N. Y., and d. there March 21, 1825, aged 92.

Elijah and Susannah Doty were Quakers. She was a very tall and an intelligent lady, and was a preacher at the Friends' meetings.

The above facts are on record, but at different places. The family, so far as I have met them, think that Elijah Doty was married but once, and are certain that his wife's family name was Ferris. A record in the family Bible gives the record of births below in the handwriting and with the signature of one of the sons, Harvey Doty, and also says "Susannah Doty's book, given her by her father, Benjamin Ferriss, at the Oblong, Dutchess County, and State of New York; (signed) Hervey Doty, living in Half Moon, Saratoga Co., N. Y., Domini 1786."

In this record of births, one of the sons, Philip Doty, who, from letters of his descendants, I am certain was one of the sons, and was brother to John F. and Harvey Doty, is not mentioned, and yet Philip Doty resided at this time, 1786-8, at Half Moon. I infer from this that Philip was half brother only to Harvey, and that he was a son by a first marriage of his father, Elijah, as shown on the record at Dartmouth, Mass. I have thought it probable that Elijah Doty was in early life a seaman, as so many of his relatives were, and as several of his sons were afterward. But there is no tradition of it in the family. If he was, it would account, perhaps, for his hailing from New Bedford or Dartmouth, Mass., at the time of his first marriage, and also for there being no other trace of him there.

Benjamin Ferris was a Quaker preacher and lived at Quaker Hill, which was in the present town of Pawling. He was one of the first settlers there about 1730, and was son of Zachariah Ferris of New Milford, Ct., who came there 1711.

Dutchess Co., N. Y., deeds, etc.:

9454. x. SUSANNAH, b. Aug. 9, 1767.
9455. xi. HARVEY, b. May 9, 1769; not m. Harvey, or as he himself wrote the name, Hervey Doty, evidently received a good education. The record in his mother's family Bible, written 1786, when he was but 17 years of age, is in a good business hand and shows him intelligent above the average. At that time he lived prob. with his parents at Half Moon. Later he became a sea captain, and the tradition throughout his branch of the family shows that he acquired renown in his profession. He is said to have made a number of voyages and to have lived Philadelphia. While his vessel was lying at the wharf there about to sail, he and a friend went ashore; returning in the evening the gangplank slipped from the edge of the dock on which it was resting and the two friends were thrown into the water and drowned. Date unknown.

John Whiting and his wife, Bethiah. He m., 2d, Sharon, Ct., Oct. 27, 1771, Rachel Richards, widow Nathaniel Richards.

In deeds at Rochester, Mass., he is called Ellis Doty, boatman, and sold his house at Wareham, Mass., to his father, 1747, at which time he removed to Sharon, Ct. In 1769 he was living in the Oblong, Dutchess Co., N. Y., and was one of the original members of Rev. Mr. Knibloe's church, at Amenia, 1760, and was a prominent member of the church. But there is no mention at Sharon or Amenia of his children. His second wife had children by her first husband, of whom one was baptised after her marriage to Ellis Doty.

In 1786, Ellis Doty and wife were living at Little Hoosack, now known as Berlin, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. and the records of the Baptist Church, at Berlin show that Ellis, Joseph and Polly Doty were members about 1793 to 1796, but later removed from there. This item may refer to Ellis Doty above, but more probably refers to a younger generation. The only children of whom there is record are on the town records of Wareham.

9463. i. JOHN, b. June 27, 1743.

1748. Silas Doty and Susanna, his wife, of Wareham, conveyed to Philip Bump all that part of house, etc., which came to her, Susanna, from her father, Benjamin Bump, deceased, at Wareham. About this date Silas Doty and wife removed to Sharon, Ct.

The Bumps were descendants of Edward de la Bompasse, who came in the Fortune, 1621, and settled at Duxbury. The name was corrupted first to Bumpus and later to Bump. The descendants of this family who settled early in Sharon and in Dutchess Co., N. Y., and later in Schoharie and other counties of central New York, have retained the name Bump.

1760. Silas Doty bought one hundred acres at Crum Elbow, on the Hudson River, in Dutchess Co., N. Y., and probably removed there, but later returned to Sharon, Ct., and may have died there, though no record of the death of either exist there.

She d. Sharon, Ct., or perhaps in the adjoining town of Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y., Dec. 11, 1760. She is buried at Sharon and her tombstone gives her age as 43 years. He m, 2d, Amenia, April 16, 1761, by Rev. Mr. Knibloe, Elizabeth Southard. Her name is written in Rev. Mr. Knibloe's record, "Southworth."

Samuel Doty is first mentioned in the Town Records of Rochester, Mass., 1739, June 7, when "Samuel Doty, laborer, and Ebenezer Briggs, housewright, both of Rochester," buy 40 acres on the east side of the Waweantick River there, being land that was laid out originally to Jacob Bumpus. This was probably in the present town of Wareham, Plymouth Co., Mass., and here Samuel Doty located and his first children were born, for he had already married in January of that year. This plot was probably very near the plot his father John Doty received in 1714 from his father, Joseph Doty, but which John Doty sold in 1731 though he located again in the same vicinity in 1736. At the town meeting at Wareham, March 3, 1740–1, Samuel Doty was chosen hog constable, a position of local responsibility at that day.

September 21, 1742, Samuel Doty, mariner, and his wife, Zeruiah of Wareham, sold the plot which he bought as above in 1739, together with his share of the house, being the west end, adjoining his father's house, to Thomas Whitting; and the same day his father and mother sold the balance of the plot and house and a smith's shop adjoining to the same Thomas Whitting, the deed being witnessed by Samuel and his wife.

Nothwithstanding this sale, Samuel Doty did not leave Wareham at this time, for the births of his children are entered on the Town Records, following the entries of his cousin's, Ellis Doty's and Elizabeth Raymond's families, as follows:

"Ye children of Saml. Doty by his wife, Zerviah,
Mary Doty, born Decr. ye 21, 1739.
David Doty, born May ye 12, 1741.
Betty Doty, born March ye 18, 1743.
Reuben Doty, born Febry. ye 8, 1744."

and March 9, 1745, he bought of his uncle, Joseph Doty, of Rochester, Mass., a plot of land there which Joseph had bought of John Blackmer. But, December 21, 1747, Samuel Doty of Sharon, in the County of New Haven, mariner, sold his entire property at Wareham, Mass. and this deed establishes very nearly the time of his removal.

Gen. Sedgwick in his "History of Sharon, Conn," says, "The ancestor of the Dotey family at Sharon was Capt. Samuel Dotey, who came from the Old Plymouth Colony to Sharon in 1747. He lived a little south of Lovell W. Chapman's. He practised surveying. He and his wife were both cut off by smallpox, in 1784. He had two sons, David and Perez," etc.

This account is not strictly correct. Capt. Samuel Doty for he always wrote his name, both at Rochester and Sharon, Doty, was by no means the only emigrant of that family name to the latter town. About this same time, 1747, there was an extensive emigration from Rochester, Wareham and that vicinity in Massachusetts to Sharon, Ct., and to the adjoining settlements in Dutchess Co., N. Y. Almost every famity at Wareham seems to be represented by a member in the new settlements, while of some, various members or whole families removed. Thus we find numerous representatives of the Hamlin, Blackmer, Bumpus, Jackson, Delano and other Wareham families at Sharon, while of the Dotys, Joseph Doty, uncle of Capt. Samuel Doty, with almost his entire family of grown-up sons and daughters, removed from Rochester to Sharon, while Capt. Samuel was probably accompanied by at least one brother, Simeon Doty. As nearly all of these had large families, Capt. Samuel can hardly be said to be the ancestor of the family there, while Perez Doty who is named as his son, was in reality a somewhat distant cousin.

Capt. Samuel Doty was a man of ability and energy. He gets his title from his maritime profession and was undoubtedly captain of a craft that sailed and traded along the New England coast. But he was equally at home on the land, and speedily rose to a position of influence wherever he located. At Wareham, Mass., in 1739 he is called a laborer, and as he lived in the house adjoining his father, who was a smith, it is probable that he worked at the forge with him. But, as we have seen, he soon became a mariner and then, in 1747, removed to the inland and almost mountain town of Sharon, Ct. Here he at once practised as a surveyor and the present broad Main Street of that beautiful village, is a testimony to his skill in his profession. All our information of him comes from the Town Records of Rochester and Wareham, Mass., and Sharon, Ct., from the records of deeds at those places, and in Dutchess Co., N. Y., re-inforced by the records of the First Church at Sharon and the record kept by Rev. Ebenezer Knibloe, of the Church at Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y., in possession of the late Newton Reed, Esq., of Amenia Union, N. Y., to whose kindness we are indebted.

These records show Captain Samuel to have been an exceedingly active business man and operator in real estate. A deed dated Feb. 20, 1750–1, shows that Samuel Doty, late of Sharon, but now of Dutchess Co., N. Y., sold for 200£, one-eighth of the iron works in Sharon. Sharon lies almost on the present boundary line of New York State, and it is very probable that a plot at that time in New York may have become since, by the rectification of the boundary, a permanent part of Sharon. At any rate, Samuel Doty as well as his children are spoken of frequently in the same year, as both "of Sharon" and "of Amenia." Thus, Aug. 25 of this year, 1750, Samuel Doty and Jonathan Pratt of Sharon, buy 60¾ acres there of Jonathan Davis, for 780£. April 3, 1752. Samuel Doty and Jonathan Pratt, both of Sharon, sell for 790£, 49 acres there to Deacon Ebenezer Hamlin and Isaac Hamlin. Numerous deeds of this general character show him to have been a large operator and a wealthy landowner in both towns. The first town meeting of Amenia, N. Y., was held 1762, and Samuel Doty, late of Sharon, and Jonathan Reynolds were chosen Assessors.

At this time, too, he was one of Rev. Mr. Knibloe's congregation in Amenia, a record in whose diary reads: "June 30, 1763. Mr. Samuel Doty had his daughter, Mercy, baptized, which was one of his former wife's children." Rev. Ebenezer Knibloe was from Scotland. His meeting house stood on the boundary line of the colonies of New York and Connecticut. Mrs. Zeruiah Doty died Dec. 11, 1760, and Capt. Samuel married, as his second wife, a few months later, Elizabeth Southard. His son, Dr. David Doty married in 1764, Hannah Southard.

The Southards were a wealthy and influential but not a numerous family at Sharon, and seem to have removed from there soon, as there is apparently no mention of the name there after the Revolution. They may be the same family of which prominent and distinguished members lived at Basking Ridge, N. J., and intermarried with Dotys there. Sons of their descendants claim a late English descent, but it is possible that they are of the Plymouth family of Southworths, descendants of the Edward Southworth, whose widow became the second wife of Gov. William Bradford.

The opening of hostilities in the Revolution found Capt. Samuel Doty too old to engage in the active events of the war, but his sympathies must have been entirely with the patriot army, for all of his sons and many of his sons-in-law were officers in the service, and gained some distinction. His enterprises were generally financially successful, and he soon became a man of means and of social position, living liberally and educating his children well. His residence was about one mile south of the village of Sharon. Here he passed the later years of his life in quiet happiness, his large family of children well married and settled in the vicinity. Unfortunately an epidemic of smallpox raged through the village and vicinity in 1784, which carried off both Capt. Samuel and his wife. The very nature and extent of the disease prevented any records being made at the time, so that neither the dates of their deaths nor the place where they were interred is known. No monument nor headstones mark the spot. Capt. Samuel was probably over seventy years of age at his death, and Mrs. Elizabeth Doty, as appears by records preserved, was sixty-seven. The deaths of the parents and the events connected with the close of the war and establishment of the Independence of the United States and of peace upon a permanent foundation, led to the separation of the children and to emigration to the North and West of many of them. Wherever they have located the descendants of Capt. Samuel Doty of Sharon, Ct., have taken high rank, many in the learned professions, others as men of enterprise in business circles and all have inherited a measure of ability that speaks well for their ancestor.

The births of his earlier children were entered, as noted above, on the records at Wareham, Mass., but they are re-entered with the others at Sharon, Ct., as follows:

9504. i. Mary dater. to Samuel Dety and his wife Zeruiah, born at Wareham, in the Massachusetts Bay, Dec. 21, 1739.

9424. SIMEON DOTY, son John Doty and his wife, Elizabeth, b. Rochester, Mass., about 1727.

The first record of Simeon Doty is found at Sharon, Ct., where, in 1759, he is a witness to a deed signed by his brother, Captain Samuel Doty. He probably removed to Sharon from Rochester or Wareham, Mass., with, or shortly after, his brother, who came there in 1747. About 1760 he removed to Chatham, in the town of Canaan, Columbia Co., N.Y. He was a deacon in the church there and died greatly respected, April 3, 1807, aged 80.

Children:

9517. i. JOHN, m. Fanny Mervin and removed to Johnstown, N.Y.; nothing further known of him.
9518. ii. JOSEPH, m. Rhoda Beebe; lived Canaan, N. Y.; 1819; no chil.

9431. EDWARD DOTY, son Elward Doty and Mary Andrews, b. Rochester, Mass., Aug. 25, 1729; m. Dartmouth, Mass., Dec. 11, 1755, Hannah Eldridge of Dartmouth.

He was a farmer and miller at Rochester, where, in 1757, he purchased land, being then known as Edward Doty, Jr.

On the County Records of Plymouth Co., Mass., appears an item: "July 1, 1776. John Doty of Rochester, was appointed administrator on estate of Edward Doty, Jr., late of Rochester; one-third was sett off to his widow. Hannah Doty."

This establishes his death as occurring in the early part of 1776, his widow surviving him.

9522. ii. HULDAH, b. Jan. 12, 1759.

9432. ZURISHADDAI DOTY, son Edward Doty and Mary Andrews, b. Rochester, Mass., Nov. 19, 1731. He emigrated, about 1752, to Hardwick, Mass., where he m. Dec. 4, 1755, Mary Warner, b. Hardwick, Feb. 23, 1737, dau. Jonathan Warner and his wife, Bathsheba. They were published Oct. 25, 1755, as follows: "Zurishaddai Dotte and Mary Warner, both of Hardwick, were published." He d. Wilmington, Vt., about 1793. His widow m. June 10, 1794, Peter Harwood of Bennington, Vt., b. Concord, Mass., July 14, 1735, son Benjamin Harwood and Bridget Brown. Peter Harwood, m., 1st, Colerain, Mass., June 9, 1759, Margaret Clark, b. Mrs. Mary Harwood was a lady of considerable talent, was greatly respected and beloved by all who knew her and d. lamented by all, Bennington, Oct. 27, 1810. Peter Harwood d. there July 12, 1815.

Zurishaddai Doty was a blacksmith by trade. He served in the French War of 1756 in the same company of which his brother-in-law, Dr. Challis Safford, was surgeon. During the Revolution he was employed by the Government as blacksmith in the army. About the close of the war he removed to Wilmington, Vt. The will of James Alexander of New Perth, Charlotte County, now Salem, Washington County, N. Y., is witnessed by Zurishaddai Doty, July 16, 1783, from which we infer that he lived there at that time, his brother, Theodorus, being also a resident of that town.

The following letter from Mrs. Almira Doty Stewart (No. 9796) to her cousin, Henry Doty, Esq., of Detroit, Mich., will be found interesting:

"Ottawa, La Salle Co., Ill., Feb. 20, 1872.

"Dear Cousin, Henry Doty:

"Your very welcome letter of the 8th was duly received. Many of the families of my father's brothers and sisters I was very little acquainted with, but it so happened that I was pretty well acquainted with the family of Uncle Moses Doty, your grandfather. I have given you quite a history of my father's and my own family, and in your last you ask me to give you some account of the family of your great grandfather, Zurishaddai Doty. I remember very little of him, but a great deal of my dear, good grandmother. My father and mother were married in Wilmington, Vt., 19th January, 1786, and their five oldest children were born in that town. This is a matter of record. Grandfather and Grandmother Doty lived with my father and mother.

"The first recollection I have of my grandfather is my seeing him lying on a sick bed and a bowl of blood sitting by the bed, and the doctor being there. I infer that he had been bled. I just remember seeing him on the sick bed, and I presume that was his last sickness, and that was his deathbed. I was then not more than three years old.

"The next that I remember about grandmother was that 'Uncle' Peter Harwood (he was called uncle) came over the mountain from Bennington, and came to my father's. He came after my grandmother. I have often heard my father tell of 'Uncle' Peter Harwood's courtship. After he had passed the compliments of the day he turned to grandmother and said to her, 'Mrs. Doty, I want to get me a wife; my wife is dead, and I have a large family at home and they want a mother. Will you go home with me and be my wife and be their mother?' She said she would. I have looked at the record of grandmother's marriage with 'Uncle' Peter and find she was married June 10, 1794.

"I believe that it was in the year 1794 that my grandmother came to Bennington and took the name of Grandmother Harwood. In the year 1795 my father removed his family over the mountain. We all stopped at Grandfather Harwood's, and then my father took his family to Adams, Mass., where he kept a tavern for a year; then removed to Bennington, to a small village, then called 'Sage's City;' about all the business in the place being owned and carried on by one Captain Moses Sage; now North Bennington. There my father lived and carried on the business of blacksmithing until the spring of 1810, when, in the month of March, he, with my two brothers, William and Nathan, took wagon and horses and emigrated to the then wilds of Pennsylvania, to Choconut, Susquehannah County. In the month of June following, Samuel Robinson took my mother, my sister Sabra and my youngest brother, Zurishaddai, in a wagon out to Choconut. My mother, who was a feeble woman, was beloved by Grandmother Harwood, who was worried about her, fearing she would suffer for the comforts of life in the new and wild country.

"Even after my father settled in Bennington my oldest brother, Asa Doty, my sister, Achsah, and myself used to make an annual visit to Grandmother Harwood in 'cherry time,' for we all loved her dearly. I, for one, thought there was never such a woman as Grandmother Harwood. It was five miles from North Bennington to grandmother's, and my brother, sister and myself used always, in our early days, to make the journey on foot. After I became a woman I used to hire a horse and ride to see her. These visits continued every year until 1810. In March of that year my grandmother was taken quite ill—it was soon after my father went to Pennsylvania. She said she had given religious instruction to all her sons, seven in number, and but one of the seven, Uncle Jonathan, had ever come back and thanked her for that instruction. She said to me that as soon as I received a letter from my father I must bring it to her. In October I received a letter from him. I took it over to grandmother. The letter stated that they were all well, had raised good crops, and the prospect was fair; that they had raised sufficient for all their wants for the year to come.

"At the time of her death grandmother had nine children living and a large number of grandchildren, and not one of her children, and but three of her grandchildren, my brother, sister and myself, were present at the funeral. Her children were widely scattered over the world. Her oldest son, Uncle John Doty, was in Massachusetts. Uncle Moses, your grandfather, I believe was in the town of Norwich, N. Y. My father was in Pennsylvania. Uncle Asa Doty was in Ohio. Uncle Ellis Doty was in Chautauqua Co., N. Y., I think. Uncle Jonathan Doty was in Ohio, and Uncle Horatio Gates Doty was in Saratoga, N. Y. Aunt Mollie Doty Thompson was living in Braintree, Mass., and Aunt Betsey Doty Safford was living in Enosburg, Franklin Co., Vt.

"Before her death grandmother made a disposition of her clothing. She considered that Aunt Thompson was rich and that Aunt Safford was not very well provided for. She selected one nice suit of black silk for Aunt Thompson and gave remainder of her wearing apparel to her Aunt Safford."

The following dates of births of children of Zurishaddai Doty and Mary Warner are taken from Hardwick, Mass., records :

Both d. at residence of their son-in-law, Hezekiah Davis, and were buried at E. Montpelier, but no stones mark their graves.

He was known as Captain John Doty, and passed most of his life at Rochester. In 1774, he was chosen one of the following committee:

"WHEREAS, The vicinity from the counties of Bristol and Plymouth having met at Rochester, Sept. 26, 1774, in support of the common cause;

"RESOLVED, That a committee be chosen to hear and determine all offences against good order."

In 1776 he was administrator of the estate of his brother, Edward Doty; 1781, was Selectman of Rochester, and 1795 lived at New Bedford, Mass. About 1800, removed to Montpelier.

9434. THEODORUS DOTY, son Edward Doty and Mary Andrews, b. Rochester, Mass., Dec. 25, 1737; m. Hardwick, Mass., May 30, 1759, Jane Densmore. Tradition reports her to have been of Irish descent. They lived Salem, N. Y., where he prob. d. about 1783.

Hardwick Records: "Theodorus Dotte of Hardwich, and Jane Densmore of Wear River, were published February 18, 1759." They were married, May 30, 1759. There names do not appear there afterward.

Washington Co., N. Y., Records at Argyle, N. Y. May 10, 1780. Captain Theodorus Doty of New Perth, County of Charlotte, State of New York, deeds to Samuel Stewart for 1,600£, one half of a certain piece of land at New Perth (now Salem).

1782. He was on a bond at Salem.

1783, May 1. He was a petitioner for land in Wyoming Co., N. Y.—Legislative MSS., 1747, State Library, Albany, N. Y.

From certain marks against his name on a subscription list, 1782, at Salem, it would appear that he left shortly after that and may have gone to Wyoming Co., N. Y., but nothing definite is known, further than appears on the records above, and this item may have referred to his son Theodorus. His rank of captain may have been earned in the Revolution, but there is a tradition in the family that he was a sea captain. To the will of James Alexander of New Perth, July 16, 1783, appears the name of Zurishaddai Doty as a witness. He was a brother of Theodorus.

9445. PHILIP DOTY, son Elijah Doty and prob. Susannah Allen, b. prob. Dartmouth or New Bedford, Mass., about 1742–3; m. prob. Dutchess Co., N. Y., about 1774, Jane Churchill. They were living 1776, at Half Moon, Saratoga Co., N. Y., where he was a farmer, but removed subsequently to Charleston, Montgomery Co., N. Y., and later to Sidney, Delaware Co., N. Y., where they prob. d.

While but little further is known of them, it is fairly well established, from accounts furnished by their descendants, that Philip Doty was brother to Harvey and John F. Doty. From his name not being included in the list of children, as written by Harvey Doty in his mother's Bible, it is fair to assume that Philip, was but half brother to the others and was probably a son by the first wife of Elijah Doty. The frequent migrations of the family have resulted in the loss of all early records in the family, though the names of Philip Doty and his wife appear on Saratoga County Records, in deeds in 1776, 1793 and 1802, though they had probably removed before the later date to Montgomery Co., N. Y.

Children:

9571. i. WILLIAM, b. Half Moon N. Y., Jan. 20, 1776.

9448. LILIAS DOTY, dau. Elijah Doty and Susannah Ferris, b. Quaker Hill, Dutchess Co., N. Y., Oct. 4, 1754; m. prob. there, prob. John Hogan. They lived New Jersey.

The only knowledge of the above marriage was received in a letter from Mrs. Cornelia A. Lee (No. 9982) of Rochester, N. Y., who says, under date of November 4, 1895: "I was made quite happy last week by having sent me, by a cousin, a letter written by Mrs. Susannah Ferris Doty to her daughter, Lilias. The letter was dated at Albany, N. Y., October, 1821, and addressed to Lilias Hogan, care of Joseph Hogan, New Jersey (town or county not designated). She addresses her as Dear Child. The writing is good, closely written and fills two pages of what now we would call foolscap. The tenor of the letter is deeply religious, beseeching her daughter to be. The language is excellent and considering she was then in her ninetieth year, remarkably good in every way. My cousin also sent me copies of three poems she composed when ninety-one, ninety-two and ninety-three years of age, all of a deeply religious character."

A subsequent letter from Mrs. Cornelia A. Lee, dated Rochester, N. Y., November 30, 1895, states that a letter of Peter Field, dated 1805, says: "They are all well at John Hogan's, as we learn by Hannah, who has been here a few days on a visit and this afternoon has gone to Newark."

9449. PHEBE DOTY, dau. Elijah Doty and Susannah Ferris, b. Quaker Hill, Dutchess Co., N. Y., Nov. 4, 1756; m. there or near there, May 20, 1779, Peter Field, b. New York City, July 15, 1753, son William Field, a merchant of New York, by his 2d wife. He was a silversmith and watchmaker. His store in New York City was in Greenwich street and in Hudson street. They lived Danbury, Ct., and successively Hudson, Albany, New York City, Newburg and Auburn, N. Y., and finally at Camillus, Onondaga Co., N. Y., where he d. Sept. 6, 1839, and she d. March 28, 1840.

Peter Field and Phebe, his wife, spent the last years of their lives with their daughter, Mrs Deborah Dill, at Camillus, N. Y. Mrs. Cornelia A. Lee (9982) of Rochester, N. Y., who was a daughter of Mrs. Dill, writes: "I was often interested in hearing grandmother speak of her early days.

One of her sisters was married and lived seventy miles from her former home, and until then had not been separated a day, so that she was anxious to see her sister. In those days the common mode of travel was by horseback, the ladies using hunting saddles. One morning, long before daybreak, accompanied by a brother only ten years old, she started on her journey to see her sister.

"The Revolutionary War was in progrsss and she was obliged to go to headquarters to procure passes to pass through the army lines. She was a remarkably handsome woman—called the Quaker Hill beauty—and the officers in charge thought to bandy words with her, which aroused her ire, for she was a person of much character and spirit and called aloud, 'Where is the General?' Day was just dawning and General Washington opened a window, not having made his toilet yet, and inquired the trouble. Grandmother said, 'I have demanded my pass and this officer refuses to give it to me.' The General said, with much sternness, 'Give the lady her pass immediately.' The officer exhibited much mortification and gave her the passes in silence. The same night she reached her destination.

"Until my grandmother's last illness she was very active and could step and go upstairs as quickly as most young girls, and her mind was clear to the last. She was married during the war, and Grandfather Field's house was robbed three times by the band of marauders that infested that part of the country. The leader of the principal band was a former schoolmate of hers, named John Hoag. He endeavored to prevent her recognizing him, but he would not allow any of his men to take anything that belonged to her. Thirty linen shirts of grandfather's were taken, and his watch, stock and kneebuckles he was told to take out and off. The watch was of his make (the first one made in America, he said), was marked, as was the stock buckle, and both were subsequently redeemed from a pawnshop by a friend. The watch was left to my brother and is still in existence; the stock buckle was given to another grandson. The robbers were finally traced to a piece of rocky woodland by a scouting party and every one shot. They were playing cards on a rock, and Hoag was shot in the head and killed instantly, but held the cards firmly in his hand.

"Grandmother used to relate many incidents that happened in her early life, but I was too young to remember all. She told me of one of her sisters, when three years old, taking a bowl of bread and milk out every pleasant day, as she said, to feed her little speckeled bird. Her mother finally had curiosity to see the bird and went where the child was sitting on a rock. The bird was a huge snake, which would dip its head into the bowl, when the child would hit it on the head with a spoon and say, 'Keep on your own side of the dish, speckled head.' The mother returned to the house and and told the father, who procured an axe. The mother went back of the child, snatched it and ran to the house, the snake following, but the father, Mr. Doty, killed it."

After the Revolution he settled at W. Northumberland, Saratoga Co., N. Y., but later removed to Scipio, Cayuga Co., N. Y., where he d. before 1814. His widow d. near Rochester, N. Y., about 1817.

Isaac Doty's father died in 1740, and his mother married Daniel Raymond the next year. They resided at Wareham till 1745, when they emigrated to Sharon, Ct., Isaac undoubtedly being brought up with the Raymonds. The first marriage is recorded at Amenia, which adjoins the the town of Sharon, Ct. The main items in this account were obtained, 1877, from Mrs. Rana Doty Moe (No. 10095) of Fleming, Cuyuga Co., N. Y., a very intelligent lady, who gave from memory a mass of details, dates and statistics of her relations, that was surprising. While there were some discrepancies in her account, there can be no question that the Isaac Doty above was her grandfather. She was under the impression that her great grandfather, the father of Isaac, was a sea captain named Thomas Doty. But there was no record in the family and as her grandfather died before she was born, it is evident from the records that she was in error. She also affirmed that her grandfather's first wife was named "Blackmore." In this too, she had confounded the name of her great grandmother, Elizabeth Blackmer. The general facts of her grandfather's history, as well as that of his children are probably stated correctly.

He enlisted as a private in the French War, 1756, though but sixteen years of age. Again in the Revolution he served as a minute-man.

It is declared that by his first wife, whom we assume to be Lucy Davis, Isaac Doty had no children.

Isaac Doty, at sixteen years of age, in the latter part of May, 1775, enlisted in Captain John McKinstry's company of Colonel Patterson's regiment of Massachusetts troops.

The Battle of Lexington occurred April 18, 1775. The news reached Berkshire County on the 20th, about noon. The next morning Colonel Patterson's regiment, fully equipped, started for Boston. When reorganized this regiment had ten companies, five of its Captains were from Berkshire, four from other parts of Massachusetts, and Captain McKinstry lived at Hillsdale. Captain McKinstry's company was enlisted in Hillsdale, Columbia Co., N. Y., and in the adjoining town of Egremont, Mass.

Isaac Doty was living at this time probably at Hillsdale, where his parents had probably removed from Sharon, Ct., and where his brothers, Benjamin and Joseph, lived for many years.

He marched to the vicinity of Boston and remained there till his term of enlistment expired, January, 1776. About February 1 he enlisted again in the same company, and the enemy having left Boston, the regiment, went to New London and sailed thence to New York. They stayed there a few weeks and were then ordered to Canada. Reached there the early part of May and marched up the St. Lawrence (probably the party sent to reinforce Major Butterfield at the Cedars). Had battle with the British, when Captain McKinstry was wounded and taken prisoner with many others, who were released soon after to General Arnold, and retreated soon after from Canada to Crown Point and Mt. Independence, and were stationed there throughout the summer. In the fall they were ordered south of Albany, when he has taken sick and went home, remaining till his term expired, January 1, 1777.

In July, 1777, he was again called upon and went with the militia to Fort Edward on the approach of Burgoyne. They retreated to Stillwater, where he remained till Burgoyne's surrender, serving three months or more, still under Captain McKinstry. He went out with the militia again at the burning of Schoharie by the British and Indians. He was in the fort, which was successfully defended, but the town was burned. He served again a month or two with the militia at Cherry Valley, and in 1781 went into service for four months (July to December) under Lieutenant John Spencer in Colonel Willet's regiment. They marched to German Flats, on the Mohawk River, pursued the enemy to West Canada Creek, and there attacked and defeated him, pursuing him till night came on.

The above items were sworn to July 9, 1832, in his application for pension. Shortly after the close of the war he married, as above, and removed to North Granville, which, at that time, was a wilderness. He cleared a piece of land, put up a log house and moved into it when his first child was about a year old. He remained there till his death, and the old homestead, in 1879, was occupied by his granddaughter, Mrs. Eliza Doty Stoddard (No. 10203) and her mother, Mrs. Eliza Putney Doty (No. 9680), widow of Levi Doty.

Timothy Doty moved to St. Albans, Vt., and lived, 1804, in the town of Mooers, Clinton Co., N. Y., where Timothy Doty, then mortgaged his house and fifty acres of land. He subsequently removed to Monroe Co., N. Y.

Children, by 1st wife:

9687. i. ELISHA, b. St. Albans; d. Buffalo, N. Y., at the time of its burning in the War of 1812.

9480. JOSEPH DOTY, son Joseph Doty and Elizabeth Landers, b. Wareham, Mass., Sept. 24, 1749; prob. m. Rochester, Mass., Oct. 7, 1771, Susannah Smith, b. 1754. They lived Rochester. He d. July 21, 1825, his age stated as 74. She d. July 1, 1852, her age stated as 98.

If the supposition is correct that the Joseph Doty, whose birth is recorded at Wareham, September 24, 1749, is the one who married there, 1771, Susannah Smith, then it is probable that he did not remove with his father, 1756, to Sharon, Ct.. Mrs. Elizabeth Landers Doty having died, 1755, and his father having married, 1756, another wife, it seems probable that the children born before 1756, namely, Joseph, James and Hannah, were left at Rochester or Wareham, perhaps with their mother's relatives. This is more probable from the fact that these children are not mentioned at any time at Sharon and there is no trace of them there. As there was no other Joseph Doty born 1749 to 1751 at Rochester, we are justified in assuming that the record as above given is correct.

The "New England Geanalogical Register," Vol. 6, (1852), furnishes the following obituary notice:

"Mrs. Susannah Doty of Rochester, died July 1, 1852, in the 99th year of her age, widow of Joseph Doty, a soldier of the Revolution. A premium was awarded her at the Cattle Fair in Bridgewater, when she was 96 years of age, for best specimen of hose—the work of her own hands at that time. It is within about one year's time that the infirmities of age have deprived her of what has been to her—of late years—a favorite occupation, that of sewing and knitting. Her mental faculties held on to the very last."

March 24, 1814. He d. Sharon, Feb. 9, 1817. He was buried in a small graveyard a short distance north of his house, which was still standing, 1880, and occupied by his granddaughter, Mrs. Joanna Lambert.

He came with his parents from Wareham, Mass., to Sharon, Ct., 1747. About 1760 he lived for several years in the adjoining town of Amenia, N. Y. At the opening of the Revolutionary War he was living at Sharon, and at the first call to arms offered his services, and was appointed Lieutenant in Captain David Down's Sharon company, in Colonel Charles Bunall's regiment of Connecticut Continental Infantry in January, 1776, organized for service in the Northern army, under Major-General Horatio Gates, by whom he was appointed, in general orders dated Aug. 3, 1776, Wagonmaster-General of the Northern army.

Later in the same year the following order was issued: "Mount Independence, Nov. 15, 1776. Lieutenant David Doty has obtained leave of Major-General Gates to join the New York troops; we recommend the said Doty as a worthy officer and one that has performed his duty to universal satisfaction as Adjutant and Lieutenant.

"Signed,
"Nathaniel Buel, Colonel,
"John Sedgwick, Major,
"Connecticut Regiment."

Again, in 1777, David Doty was recommended as Adjutant, and his brother, Reuben Doty, as Second Lieutenant in Colonel Humphrey's New York Regiment. At the close of the war he settled at Sharon as a practising physician, gaining great reputation in his profession. He was an active, robust, energetic man, rather small in stature. He amassed a large estate, the records showing that he operated largely in real estate, not only in Sharon and Amenia, but also in other sections of New York State. In the confusion caused by the depreciation of continental money, however, he lost heavily. He remained active in the practice of his profession and continued his interest in public affairs, and lived to see a large family of children well married and prosperously settled.

John Winegar was a grandson of a Palatine immigrant, Ulric (Oliver) Winegar and his wife, Anna Arnold, who was born in Switzerland, 1652, and at his death in Sharon, Ct., was 102 years old. With his son, Garrett, he settled in Amenia, N. Y., 1728, being the second family in that town. In 1734, Garrett bought the "Jackson Patent" of 400 acres in Sharon and removed to it. The Winegars were all millwrights as well as farmers.

In 1770, John went to Lee, Mass., to begin business for himself and was the thirteenth settler there. He built a gristmill and two sawmills, and in 1774 removed his family from Sharon to Lee. He was a soldier of the French and Indian Wars and of the Revolution, and until the time of his death was the leading business man of Lee. In 1803–4, his widow with nearly all her children moved to the unsettled town of Fabius, N. Y.

The record of this family is furnished by Theodore R. Chase, Esq., of Detroit, Mich.

They marched by a circuitous route to the rear of Burgoyne's army, where, the second morning after leaving their camp, just before daylight, they burned his stores and mills. They then made the circuit of the British Army and brought into their own camp twenty-one prisoners of whom six were officers, besides twenty-one horses and twenty cows.

He was a very worthy man, highly respected, and was elder in the Presbyterian Church at Martinsburg.

Extract from a sermon delivered at the funeral of Adoniram Foot, by Rev. E. B. Parsons, in the Presbyterian Church at Turin, May 1, 1866.

"When he come into this County of Lewis, this rich valley was but little known, and its resources were mostly undeveloped. He entered at once, and heartily, into every public enterprise calculated to promote the interests of the county. He received a military commission from Governor Tompkins in 1812, and occupied several other offices of public trust from time to time. He was identified with those institutions whose motto speaks for the common brotherhood of mankind. He early connected himself with the anti-slavery movements of the country, as early as 1838, and in the Presidential contest of 1840, cast his vote for James G. Birney. He was independent in expression and faithful in prayer for the slave; yet he was not rash, not fanatical; never joined those who denounced the church and all other institutions for not moving so rapidly in this direction as he desired.

"His Christian life in its outward manifestations was such as to bring honor to the name of Christ. He gave himself into God's guidance at the time of a general religious revival in 1830-1. He at once joined himself to the Presbyterian Church at Martinsburg, and became one of the working men of the church; he was ordained an elder in that church, October 12, 1832. He was many times member of Presbytery and Synod, and was a delegate to the General Assembly that met in Philadelphia in 1843. In his home work he was always diligent and faithful. His place at the weekly prayer-meeting was seldom vacant, and no day was allowed to pass without the observance of family prayer. He gave liberally for the support of the Gospel and for the great benevolent enterprises of the Christian Church."

He was bred a housewright or carpenter by his father in Rochester. He came to Montpelier first on foot in March, 1789, worked through the summer, and returned to Rochester in the fall. The next spring he returned to Montpelier with his brother, Barnabus, and they were engaged by Larned Lamb to build the first frame house in that town for Colonel Jacob Davis. This house was long known as the old Jail House, and when the new jail was built on the same spot, 1858, the old house was moved some rods further up the branch, placed on the bank of the stream and made into a double tenement house. Returning to Rochester he married December, 1791.

He was one of the twenty-seven original freeman who organized the town of Montpelier, whither he returned the spring after his marriage, purchased a tract of land of his brother-in-law, Hezekiah Davis, in the east part of the town and lived there. He was very ingenous and skillful in the use of tools, kind in his family and loved by them. He was a patient, industrious man, moral and religious; an old school Universalist, a man of many virtues and no vices, and had a reverent trust in God. He was an invalid for many years before his death.

was a soldier of the War of 1812, was in the Battle of Tippecanoe, was surrendered with Hull's forces, taken to Quebec, where he endured incredible hardships as a prisoner of war. After the peace, 1815, he was exchanged, m., removed to Calais, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was thrice m. Chil., by 1st wife: 1. Harrison, m. Jenny Hargen; lived E. Montpelier. 2. Charlotte, m. George Gray.

She lived with and took care of her father as long as he lived. When he sold his farm on the East Hill in Montpelier, 1836, and went to live with his dau., Cynthia Ketchum in Plainfield, Vt., she went with him, and her home was always with her sister from that time till they removed to New Hampshire, June 4, 1851. She d. Hardwick, Vt., Aug. 30, 1832. He was a carpenter and farmer, and moved to Montpelier, Vt., about 1790. Returned, 1794, to Rochester and m. He removed subsequently, 1820-1, to Hardwick, where he was Justice of the Peace, but in 1839 commenced a wandering life, lived in various places and d. Calais, Vt., Dec. 24, 1864, aged nearly 94.

Rev. Silas Ketchum paid this tribute to his uncle, Barnabus Doty: "Barnabus, Jr., lived on a farm adjoining that of his father. He was appointed ensign of the Washington Artillery by Governor Jonas Galusha, Oct. 14, 1811; third sergeant of the same company by Captain Israel Putnam, October 12, 1812, and Captain by Governor Martin Chittenden, Oct. 17, 1814. In the early days of Montpelier he carried the mail from Montpelier to Hardwick on horseback distributing the letters as he went to such as lived on the way. He afterward removed to Hardwick, where he was many years a merchant, carrying on at the same time the blacksmithing and, I think, the saddlery business. He was elected a Justice of the Peace, and did much justice business during the whole period of his residence in that town.

"After his wife and children died and his grandchildren had moved away, he left Hardwick in 1839 and began a wandering life. He was one of the kindest and most harmless of men, and none of his very large circle of relatives but were always glad to have him come and spend a few days or weeks with them. He had been a young and active man at an interesting period of the history of Montpelier, and had afterward enjoyed unusual facilities of intimate acquaintance with the most distinguished men of the State. He was a man of culture and understanding; a great reader and a deep thinker. He possessed a wonderfully retentive memory, and his fund of information and anecdote was exhaustless. With advancing years came the garrulity of age, and his conversational powers were of no mean order, though his utterance was slow and sometimes painful. His presence in my father's house was always a treat to the whole family, and his stories of a long, busy and eventful life were more delightful than a romance to all who listened. For some years he made his home in Hinesburg with his son-in-law, T. W. Gibb, though he was there but a small part of his time. Afterward he made his home with other relatives at Calais until he was nearly or quite 90 years of age, when, for what cause and by whose means I never knew, he was removed to the poorhouse in Calais, where he died in December, 1864, aged nearly 94. He was one of the most skillful and ingenious men in the use of tools, and one of the most exact men in business that ever lived."

9583. DEBORAH FIELD, dau. Peter Field and Phebe Doty, b. Danbury, Ct., Sept. 17, 1781, m. Auburn, N. Y., Samuel Dill, b. Shawangunk, Ulster Co., N. Y., Oct. 22, 1767, son Caleb Dill and Hannah Hunter. He was the first Judge of Oneida Co., N. Y., but removed, 1813, to Auburn, and in 1829, to Camillus, Onondaga Co., N. Y., where he d. May 1, 1859. She d. Newark, Wayne Co., N. Y., July, 1862.

In 1796 he removed to Fort Stanwix, now Rome, N. Y., where he lived seventeen years. During the embargo of 1808, he held a major's commission in the New York State Infantry. As such, he had command for a period of Sacket Harbor and the entire northern frontier, from the St. Lawrence to Niagara. Generals Jacob Brown and Winfield Scott at one time both served under him as Lieutenants in the line. In 1811 he resigned his commission, returned to Rome, and was soon appointed first Judge of Oneida County. He removed to Auburn, N. Y., in 1813, and served in that place as U. S. Commissary during the remainder of the War of 1812. When a resident of Auburn, he took an active and leading part in the affairs of the place and in the politics of the day. He was twice elected Member of the Legislature from Cayuga County in 1821 and 1822. During the year 1829 he removed to Camillus, and retiring from public life devoted the remainder of his days to the pursuits of agriculture.

In his intercourse with society during his long life, and in every position of trust and honor he was called to fill, Judge Dill maintained a spotless reputation. For strict honesty, for integrity, public spirit, patriotism and benevolence, he has seldom been surpassed, and, indeed, rarely equalled by any of his contemporaries. He retained his faculties to a remarkable degree. He was perfectly familiar with the affairs of our country and government, was posted in the movements of every political party, and to within a few days of his death would converse with fluency, and with a manifestation of the greatest interest, on all these subjects. In religion he had for most of his days cherished a large and liberal Christian faith. He could not entertain the thought that his Creator's wisdom and goodness were less than his own; but sincerely believed that God ever had been and ever would be good unto all, and that the reign of Christ would result in the happiness of every intelligent being. This broad and bright hope gave him great satisfaction during his long earthly journey, and comforted and sustained him in his last days. For some time he had been afflicted with partial blindness. His last illness was painful but brief, and he finally dropped away like a child sinking to a gentle slumber.

He was very active and in full possession of faculties and health at eighty-four years of age. He always was a very busy man, practising many trades; accumulated a competence and lived in good circumstances; was a powerfully built man of average height only, and always enjoyed good health.

The following interesting article appeared as correspondence in the New York Sun, July, 1889:

"Simeon Doty of this place, who on Monday scored his ninety-third birthday, is one of the oldest, best preserved and respected citizens of northern New York. Mr. Doty traces his pedigree back in a continuous line to Edward Doty, who came over in the Mayflower in 1620. He is the father of two children, Silas A. Doty, a prominent citizen of the county, and Mrs. Harriet Pardy of Beekmantown, both of whom have children grown, and it is no infrequent occurrence to see the representatives of five generations at the old gentleman's dinner table. He has a sister, now nearly eighty-five years old, living in Brooklyn.

"'Uncle Sim,' as he is familiarly called by his neighbors, though somewhat of a sufferer from rheumatism, is well preserved both mentally and physically. Armed with his heavy blackthorn cane, which was presented to him by a gentleman who brought it direct from Ireland for that purpose, and with his pipe filled with tobacco, which he himself raised, the old man may be seen every fair day walking about his farm and garden, picking up stones, pulling weeds and generally looking after the care of the many broad and well-cultivated acres, which, when he settled upon them, were a dense wilderness. He loves to sit on the broad front stoop of his spacious brick house and tell how, nearly three-quarters of a century ago, he blazed his way by cutting marks on the trees to his present farm. He points out the spot where he erected his log house and brought his wife to help him in the struggle to win a home. A worthy helpmeet she proved indeed. She died a few years since, but she lived long enough to see the old log house replaced by a commodious brick residence provided with all the improvements of the modern farm house, the wilderness cleared away and broad fields of grain and highly cultivated acres of grass and thrifty orchards filled with all the fruits of this section in its place, the ox team supplanted by many horses, some of them of the best strains of blood, and the one cow developed into a herd of scores. The dugout which was made to do duty in the winter as a shelter for the ox team and the cow, as well as a storehouse for what little hay they were able to gather, is replaced by monster barns filled to overflowing every harvest time with the products of the farm, and granaries are there to store the hundreds of bushels of cereals. A carriage house protects the family carriages and the farm wagons from the inclemency of the weather, while in another building are stored the modern machines which have been invented to aid the farmer in carrying on his work.

"Uncle Sim, as he points all these things out, says sadly: 'It don't look much as it did when Safronia and I started in the little log house over the hill yonder. Can't go out now when we want a piece of fresh meat and shoot a deer, as I have done many a time over yonder. The deer used to have a run way there, and I was almost sure of one when I went for him. Then the lake down below was full of fish, and in one day I could catch enough to last us through the winter when salted down. And bears were no strangers in these parts then, as the way they used to steal our pigs and calves showed, while the pesky foxes made it almost impossible to raise anything with feathers on it.'

"And so for hours the old gentleman will go on comparing the present with the past. Though he has to use spectacles to read, for long distances he insists that his eyesight is as good as it ever was. His teeth remained good until a few a few years since. He mourned most over their loss because he could not whistle. He went to Plattsburgh and had a new set made, and great was his joy after he got them when he found he could again whistle. Now he carries his teeth in his trousers pocket, and only takes them out when he wants to whistle.

"Uncle Sim carried a musket at the battle of Plattsburg, September 11, 1814, and he graphically describes that fight, his visit to Commodore Macdonough's flagship after the battle, and how he assisted in burying the dead in long trenches on Crab Island. He has applied for a pension, but the officers and all the other members of his regiment are dead and the muster rolls are lost, so he will probably never get it.

"A few days since he called his grandson, George, who now carries on the farm, and told him to sharpen a scythe for him. 'The grass in this front yard,' said he, 'needs cutting, and I am going to do it.' The scythe was brought to him, and he mowed vigorously for a time, but the rheumatism caught him in the back and he had to stop. 'If it wasn't for the rheumatics and this head of mine getting dizzy,' he said, 'I could go into the field and do as good a day's work as I ever did,' and those who know the old man best say his boast is not entirely a vain one.

"Uncle Sim is a thorough-going Democrat, never having failed to cast his vote for the nominee of that party since he became a voter. He says he expects to live to vote for the next Democratic candidate for President, and hopes he will be elected, but, he added vehemently, 'I hope if he is he will be a true, old-fashioned Democrat, such as they used to have when I was a young man. Them was the kind of Democrats and Presidents that made this country what it is to-day.'"

10347. i. HARRIET.

9722. EZRA DOTY, son David Doty and Hannah Southard, b. Sharon, Ct., July 7, 1767; bap. there Aug. 9, 1767; m., 1st, there Damaris Hamlin, b. there. She separated from her husb. about or previous to 1800. She prob. d. Catskill, N. Y. Her name has been given by some of her descendants as Sarah Hamlin, and she was unquestionably of one of the Hamlin families who emigrated from Rochester and Wareham, Mass., to Sharon about 1747, at the same time as Capt. Samuel Doty and others. He m., 2d., Mifflintown, Pa., Nov. 14, 1811, Rebecca North Lewis, dau. —— North, and widow Daniel Lewis. She d. Mifflingtown. He d. there and was interred in Presbyterian cemetery. He was the first person in his section of the country to be buried with the honors of Freemasonry.

Dr. Ezra Doty, like his father, was a practising physician and lived at Sharon for a while, but removed first to Catskill and later to Mifflintown, where he gained considerable reputation in his profession. He studied medicine with his father and was introduced into practice by him. About 1792, as appears by a deed on record, he sold his office and house at Sharon. 1792, March 1, Ezra Doty sells lot with study or office to Fred^{k} Delano (No. 9721), being same lot and study bought, 1791, from Dr. David Doty, his father.

Dr. Ezra Doty probably left Sharon at this time and located for a few years at Catskill, but removed before 1800 to Mifflintown. Here he established an extensive practice, embracing the counties of Juniata, Huntingdon and Cumberland. He was a man of studious habits and was successful as a practitioner and highly esteemed. During the War of 1812 he was examining physician for that section of the State. About 1812 he served one term in the State Senate, which was then convened at Lancaster, and there met James Buchanan, afterward President of the United States, with whom he maintained an intimate friendship during his life. He was a hale and hearty man of moderate stature and stout, but active and vigorous.

There is some little confusion in the family owing to the absence of authentic records, and to the fact of the separation of Dr. Ezra Doty from his first wife. This separation, the cause of which is an entire mystery to the family, appears to have taken place about or previous to 1800, at which time the children were very young. The eldest, John, seems to have remained with the mother at Catskill, while the younger two apparently were taken by the father to Mifflintown, and were even visited there later by the mother. At any rate the Mifflintown family lost all knowledge of the existence of John, while the descendants of the latter had but imperfect knowledge of the Pennsylvania families. The descendants of John claimed that his father married Damaris Hamlin at Danbury, Ct., and lived there for a while. But the record shows that he maintained his office at Sharon until 1792 and then removed to Catskill.

He attended school with Martin Van Buren, and was intimate with the celebrated lawyer, Leith Williams, and his associates, who have long ago 'passed beyond.' He was a life-long Democrat, and has breathed the atmosphere of every Presidential election from Washington down. Few men understood better than he the structure of our government. Born about the time that the articles of peace between Great Britain and the United States were signed at Paris, he has lived through the whole existence of his country, which he loved so well, which he defended in 1812 as a soldier, and to which he was ever faithful to the last. In religious matters Mr. Doty was a staunch Universalist; in that faith he lived and died."

The following sketch of the life of James Duane Doty is from an article prepared by General Albert G. Ellis for the Wisconsin Historical Society, and furnished for this history by Hon. Charles Doty:

LIFE AND PUBLIC SERVICES OF J. D. DOTY.

BY GENERAL ALBERT G. ELLIS.

"In compliance with the request of the State Historical Society, made on the 2d January, that I should prepare for its archives 'a paper on the Life and Public Services of the late Hon. James Duane Doty, and their relation to the History of Wisconsin,' I respectfully submit the following:

"I shall hardly be expected to give a detailed history of all his acts and doings; as, while he was Judge of the United States District Court for Michigan, west of the lakes; as a member of the Legislative Council of Michigan from the upper district as delegate to Congress from the Territory of Wisconsin; as Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs; as Commissioner for treating with the Indian tribes on the Upper Mississippi; as a member of the Convention for forming a Constitution and State Government; as a member of Congress from the Third District of this State, and finally as Superintendent of Indian Affairs and then Governor of Utah, where he died; to do all which would be writing a volume—a history of Wisconsin—instead of 'a paper.'

"The distinguished subject of our narrative was a native of Salem, Washington Co., N. Y., where he was born in 1799. In the year 1818, he settled at Detroit, Mich., where the writer just became acquainted with him in the spring of 1822, nearly forty-five years ago. A young lawyer of good repute, he was the next year, 1819, admitted to the Supreme Court of that Territory, and was the same year promoted rapidly to places of public trust, being appointed secretary of the Legislative Council, and clerk of the court. Although young, only twenty-three, when I first became acquainted with him, and quite juvenile in appearance, he was decidedly popular with the people, and had already attracted the attention of Governor Cass, who took much interest in all young men of character and talent. He had a fine address, was of a sociable and genial disposition, thereby winning the good will, respect and friendship of his acquaintances.

"Governor Cass, in 1820, made his famous tour of the Great Lakes, and the Mississippi to its sources, traveling a distance 4,000 miles with his party in five bark canoes. Mr. Doty was selected by the Governor to command one of the birch flotilla; C. C. Trowbridge and John H. Kinzie, each having charge of another. The trip from Detroit to Mackinaw and the Sault Ste. Marie, consumed nearly ninety days, and was one of great difficulty and peril. It was on this occasion that Governor Cass, supported by his assistants and canoemen, in the presence of the assembled dignitaries of the fierce Chippewas, and in defiance of their menaces, pulled down the British flag, which those Indians had displayed on the American side of the Straits on his arrival, and aided with his own hands, in displaying the American flag. He often spoke of it as a most exciting scene. The party then left Detroit early in May, traversed the lakes, and reached the sources of the Mississippi, held conferences with various Indian tribes and returned the last of November.

"Mr. Doty, besides having charge of one of the canoes, acted as secretary of the expedition.

"In the winter of 1821, Mr. Doty was at Washington, where Mr. Henry Wheaton procured his admission as attorney in the Supreme Court of the United States, at the age of twenty-two years.

"In the winter of 1822–3, Congress passed an 'act to provide for the appointment of an additional judge, for the Michigan Territory,' and to establish courts in the counties of Michillimackinac, Brown and Crawford, the two latter counties embracing all that is now Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota. From the numerous applications for the place, President Monroe selected James Duane Doty of Detroit for the new judge. No more suitable appointment could have been made. With the exception of the two small settlements of Green Bay and Prairie Du Chien, the whole vast area west of Lake Michigan was an unbroken wilderness, and Judge Doty soon proved himself just the man to traverse, explore and expose its wild recesses to civilization.

"Descending the lake from Green Bay to New York, in May, 1823, the writer found him in Detroit, already on the way to his new circuit, accompanied by his wife, whom he had just married, the eldest daughter of General Collins of New Hartford, Oneida Co., N. Y. The lady has since proven herself eminently qualified for the wife of one destined to the eventful career which has since marked the foot-steps of her husband. General Collins, her father, was a prominent officer in the War of 1812, commanding the New York State militia at Sackett's Harbor.

"Judge Doty lost no time in entering on his duties as judge—lawgiver to a country sufficient in extent for an empire.

"He repaired forthwith to Prairie Du Chien, organized the judiciary of Crawford county and opened court. It was no easy task to inaugurate justice in these wilds, to create sheriffs, clerks and jurors out of half-breed Indians, traders, voyageurs, and courriers du bois; but the tact, talent and perseverance of the young judge prevailed; it was done and stood fast.

"Judge Doty had thought to make Praire Du Chien his resting place, his home; but the leading Indian traders, and one of great influence in the country especially, not regarding the establishment of courts within the precincts of his trade with favor, but with evident dislike, early intimations of a want of good neighborhood appeared between the traders and the Judge of the United States District Court, to avoid which, as well as to find a more healthy location for his family, he determined on a permanent residence at Green Bay, to which place he soon removed, and made it his home for twenty years.

"The Judge proceeded to organize courts in Michillimackinac and Brown counties, where he found the inhabitants generally subject to law and good order The terms were held with perfect regularity throughout the whole district; he continued to discharge his onerous duties for nine years, and until superseded by Judge Irwin, in 1832, when he turned over his judicature to his successor, and retired to private life, if, indeed, his time and talents, devoted as they were thenceforward to the development of the resources of this new country, could in any sense be termed 'private life.'

"Relieved from the cares and responsibilities of the judgeship and courts, he immediately commenced on his own resources a personal examination by repeated tours of the country that now constitutes Wisconsin and northern Illinois. It was then inhabited and possessed by the aborigines. His sagacious mind saw the importance of conciliating these natives; he visited every village of note, made himself acquainted with and gained the good will of the chiefs, and contributed in no small degree to the good understanding which followed between the government and these savage tribes. In the course of these explorations he traveled over the whole of the southern part of our State, many times often quite alone, stopping in the deep forest, wherever night overtook him, tying his Indian pony to a sapling, and with his saddle for a pillow, lying down under his blankets with as little concern as if in his own house.

"In 1830 Congress made an appropriation for surveying and locating a military road from Green Bay, Chicago, and to Prairie Du Chien. Judge Doty and Lieutenant Centes of the United States Army, were appointed commissioners, and surveyed and located these roads during 1831 and 1832. Reposing from these labors and travels, Judge Doty projected a map of this upper country, from which, in the main, one was soon afterward, but before the surveys, constructed for the use of the War Department and which to this day is still used there.

"Judge Doty's talents for usefulness were now conceded and appreciated by all; the people of the district of Michigan west of the lakes elected him to the Legislative Council in 1834, in which he served with marked ability for two years. It was while he was a member that the Legislative Council of that territory began to agitate the question of a State Government, which he was first to introduce, and which finally prevailed.

"Returning from the Legislative Council, he became an active operator in the public land sales, which were opened at Green Bay in 1835–36. He was applied to from all quarters by capitalists to take agencies for the purchase of choice locations in the Green Bay land district. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were at his disposal for investment, such confidence had they in his integrity and knowledge of the country, and its best points for future towns and cities. The result showed the confidence not misplaced; many of the most populous towns and villages of the State today stand on sites selected at that time by him.

"The rapid settlement of the country beyond the great lakes, called for a new territoral government, a separation from Michigan. Congress passed the act creating the territorial government of Wisconsin in 1836. Honorable Henry Dodge received the appointment of Governor and assembled the first Legislature at Belmont. One of the most important matters brought before that body, and to be settled by it, was the location of the seat of government. Judge Doty though remaining in private life, had not been idle, and especially had not been uninterested in this matter of a capital for Wisconsin. There was great excitement over the matter in the Legislature; while others were planning, Judge Doty was acting. He appeared at Belmont as a lobby member, and almost before the Solons knew of it, by his superior tact, had brought about a vote fixing the seat of government at Madison, the beautiful place where it now is. There was a good deal of sparring and fault-finding with Doty and his management at the time; but all agree now that it was then, as it is seen to be since, just the right place for the capital.

"Wisconsin, as an organized territory, had now a delegate in Congress. Judge Doty succeeded Hon. George W. Jones in 1838, and served till 1841, when he was appointed Governor of Wisconsin by President Tyler, serving nearly three years, and was succeeded by Governor Tallmadge. While Governor and Superintendent of Indian Affairs the Indians in Minnesota—Dacotahs or Sioux and Chippewas—began to be uneasy and troublesome. The War Department instituted a commission for conference with them. Governor Doty, on account of his known acquaintance with Indian character, was selected as commissioner. He soon assembled the sachems and had a council. They listened with profound attention, difficulties were allayed, and he made two highly important treaties with the northwestern Indian tribes. The Senate, however, not accepting them, no opportunity was had of testing their value or otherwise to the country.

"He was a member of the first Constitutional Convention in 1846, and although the draft of the constitution offered by that convention was rejected by the people, the general opinion is that it was a far better one than that finally adopted two years afterward. He was elected to Congress from the Third District under the State organization of 1848, re-elected in 1851, and procured by his industry and influence important legislation for the State and his constituency, serving both terms with great honor to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the people of the district.

"In 1853 he retired once more to private life, to be recalled by President Lincoln in 1861, first as Superintendent of Indian Affairs, and subsequently as Governor of Utah, holding this last place at the time of his death, June 13, 1865. For the manner in which he discharged these important trusts, reference is here had to the testimony of Hon. Charles Durkee, his successor, and who is also from our State, and was for many years intimately acquainted with him, both as a public man and as a private friend. In his first message to the Legislative Assembly of Utah, Governor Durkee thus alludes to his predecessor:

" ' Since your last session, one who was accustomed to advise with you in matters of legislation, has, by a mysterious Providence, been removed from his chosen field of labor.

" ' On the 13th of June last Governor James Duane Doty departed this life. Inasmuch as he was the Executive of this Territory at the time of his death, it is proper and becoming that I should, upon this occasion, express my sympathy with his family and the people, in view of this solemn event.

" ' From a long and intimate acquaintance with the deceased, it gives me pleasure to bear testimony to his superior abilities as a statesman, and to his many virtues as a citizen.

" ' Governor Doty had, for a long period, enjoyed the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens. They had given him prominent positions, both in the State and National councils, where his services proved creditable to himself, advantageous to his constituents, and useful to his country. He was greatly attached to frontier life. He was a pioneer in the settlements of Michigan and Wisconsin, and his predilection was exemplified in a request that his remains should repose in Utah, his recently adopted home.'

" Governor Doty was, what we term in the West, a self-made man. Without the advantages of a collegiate education, yet by a constant study of men and things he well supplied its place. His vigorous mind was eminently practical, and his reading very extensive, especially in all that related to the Government of our country, and the history of the Northwest. Personally he had the advantage of a fine, commanding figure, open, intelligent and pleasing countenance, and a most winning address; you were his friend at first sight.

" Not a politician, in the common acceptance of the term, he yet had many and some very sharp political contests. In these he was always true to his friends, and placable and courteous to his enemies. As a public man he was equally approachable and dignified, neither sycophanatic to power, nor repulsive to the humble and dependent. He, had in a most eminent degree, the good will of the masses.

" Coming to this upper country in 1822–3, he was, without a figure of speech, ' one of the old settlers.' But one American citizen now living is known who came to Wisconsin as early as he did.*

" Governor Doty's last residence in the State, was at Menasha, on Doty's Island—one of the many villages that have sprung up under his influence. He had two sons and one daughter. Mrs. Mary E. Dunn, widow Daniel C. Doty, writes, under date of March 22, 1880, and I cannot do better than give her own words:

"Daniel Churchill Doty and I were married in Sheridan, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., December 31, 1838. We lived on a small farm; Mr. Doty built a barn and made other improvements expecting money that was due him to meet expenses. He failed to get it and finally sold out at a great sacrifice (it was a time when banks refused to lend money on the best security), and in 1844, we came to Michigan. He took up three hundred acres of what was called 'timbered openings;' not a tree cut nor a house in sight. He took a farm in Emmett, Calhoun County, five miles east of Battle Creek, and lived there for two years to raise something with which to come on our new farm. It was there, our son William Amenzo Doty, was born, July 18, 1845.

"Mr. Doty built a shanty, and on March 31, 1846, Joseph Crandall Doty, Daniel's youngest brother, his wife and one child, and ourselves with our four children, moved on to our new place. We got there just at night and arranged things as best we could to pass the night. In the morning Daniel and brother started for the rest of our goods. Then came the trial for us to arrange the furniture. Where should we hang our wardrobe? I took an axe, started for the woods, cut down an ash tree four or five inches through, and Joseph's wife and I tugged the tree to the shanty, or fourteen feet of it, for that was the width of the shanty, fourteen feet wide and thirty feet long. We got the pole across the south end, got our dresses around the pole, and hung a sheet over them; if they had been the style of to-day it would have bothered us some.

"It would take too long to give a minute description of all the novel events of our early home, but we got our affairs arranged and seemed to have plenty of room. Daniel sold the west one hundred acres to his brother, who built a log house, which he moved into the next October. He soon sold the northeast forty acres, on the corner of which now stands a nice little church, where we have preaching every Sabbath, with a store across the road. Our place was soon settled by good eastern people, many of them old associates. There need be no more pleasant neighborhood than we have had, but time has brought its changes; many of them have died. Mr. Doty died of consumption. He was sick three years, and had just got his place where he could enjoy it. My son, Frank Emenzo Doty, lives on the old home. Mr. Dunn, my present husband, bought of Joseph Doty the one hundred acres Daniel sold him, and that is where I now live."

Maria Gertrude Doty started in 1851 with friends for New Mexico, where she expected to engage in teaching. On their arrival at the Shawnee Baptist Mission, in the present State of Kansas, about four miles from Kansas City, she was taken sick and her friends were obliged to proceed without her, as it was growing late in the season to cross the plains. On her recovery she was solicited to take a position as teacher in the Mission School, which she did, and had charge of the Indian School at the Mission until her marriage in 1854. Mr. Stone was at that time teaching in Clay Co., Mo., where they remained until 1858, and then removed to Westport (now Kansas City), Jackson Co., Mo., where he practiced dentistry until the breaking out of the war, being also connected with large shops for the construction of overland plain wagons, which shops were burned by Quantrell's guerillas.

Having several times volunteered to protect Government stores at Kansas City, finally, in the summer of 1862, he enlisted as Second Lieutenant of the Sixth Kansas Infantry, stationed at Wyandotte. Here he died of typhoid fever October 14, 1862.

A price having been set on Mrs. Stone's head by Quantrell for having assisted (as one of a very few Union women in that section) in searching rebel female spies, she returned to Fleming, N. Y., with her children in 1863, but removed, 1873, to Cazenovia, N. Y.

Silas Doty was a kleptomaniac, and from his earliest boyhood showed an uncontrollable tendency to appropriate the property of others, not usually on account of its value, nor for any use of his own, but quite frequently to hide it away where it could not be discovered. Unfortunately this was not at that time recognized as a disease, and he became more and more an object of suspicion in the community and a great trial to his very worthy parents. He was soon led into bad company and his father was glad to assist him to emigrate to Michigan, at that time a territory and very sparsely settled. From this time he became notorious, and the story of his life is told in an octavo volume of 268 pages, published, 1880, by a Toledo, O., publishing house, and purporting to give an autobiography of him. This volume, while containing unquestionably many gross exaggerations, still gives enough to prove that the various terms which he served in the State prison of Michigan were fairly earned. The account gives correctly the names of his parents, of his brothers and sisters, and tells of his courtship and marriage of his wife, bearing testimony throughout to their respectability, their distress at his career, and their continued kindness to him. He tells how carefully he concealed from his wife as long as he could his nefarious occupation; how she grieved over him and yet never deserted him in his trouble.

If the account given is true, his raids were by no means confined to Michigan, he having carried on his work in England and France, as well as in Mexico, California and the whole western country. After serving many short terms in State prison he was, in 1844, sentenced for life, but breaking out from jail he made his way to Mexico in 1848, while the war was in progress, and made friends with both General Taylor and General Scott by presenting them with valuable horses. In 1851 he was back in Michigan, and for a new offense sentenced to seventeen years' imprisonment. This was reduced to fifteen years by his good behavior in prison, but again and again he was returned to prison till near the close of his life.

Hugh Wilson and his wife, Martha. He graduated from Jefferson College at Cannonsburg, Pa., 1836, then studied law, and practiced from 1839, until his d., Mifflington, Dec. 24, 1884.

The following obituary notice appeared in the Juniata Herald of Mifflintown, Pa., Jan. 1, 1885, from the pen of its editor, William M. Allison:

"The old and familiar aphorism that 'death loves a shining mark,' was never more fully exemplified in our midst, than on Christmas eve, in the death of Edmund S. Doty, Esq., the oldest native citizen of our town, and the oldest and ablest member of the Juniata Bar. Although an invalid for many months from some chronic affection of the bladder and kidneys, and although such affections are generally always fatal to life, our community was far from being prepared for a fatal termination in his case. Mr. Doty had been so long and intimately identified with us, individually and collectively, from childhood till the present time, that he seemed to old and young a part and parcel of our being, and we had unconsciously come to regard him as much a fixture as the everlasting mountains which surround us on every side, and although, at times, the thought that his disease might and possibly would prove fatal would naturally obtrude itself into our minds, yet it was quickly banished therefrom, and we all prayed for his speedy and permanent recovery, and fondly hoped that his valuable life would long be spared to adorn and benefit the community he loved so well, and which held him in such affectionate reverence. But, alas, it was only 'hoping against hope,' and although at times his disease seemed to be yielding to medical skill, all such symptoms proved fallacious, and nature was at last forced to succumb beneath the repeated assaults of the death-angel.

"Edmund S. Doty was a son of the late Dr. Ezra Doty, in his day one of the most prominent and successful physicians in middle Pennsylvania; was born in this town on the 22d of August, 1815, enjoyed the blessings of a thorough collegiate education, after which he studied law, was admitted to the bar in Mifflington, at the September Term, 1839, and has practiced his profession ever since, during a period of forty-five years. In 1843 he was married to Catharine Wilson, a daughter of the late Hugh Wilson, Esq., of Fayette Township, by whom he had nine sons and one daughter, all of whom, save one son who died in infancy in 1846, survive to inherit the good name and comfortable estate bequeathed to them by one who was in truth a father in all that that sacred term implies.

"As a man, Mr. Doty was one of Nature's noblemen,

Although possessed of the brightest abilities, trained to their fullest development by education and experience, he was one of the simplest and most unaffected men in his intercourse with his fellow-men we have ever met. To him all mankind was veritably equal, his only tests of manhood being honesty, industry, sobriety and good behavior. Possessed of these traits any man could meet him fearlessly on a common plane, no matter how ignorant of learning or lowly circumstanced he might be, and be assured of a warm greeting, courteous treatment, and, if necessary, all the assistance, with counsel or material aid, that he could reasonably expect. And even in his charities which were neither few nor trifling, he was as unostentatious, implicitly obeying the injunction of Scripture not to let his left hand know what his right hand did.

"As a lawyer, he stood at the head of his profession in the bars of this and adjolning counties, and would have reflected credit upon any bar in the State. In his person was strikingly exemplified the conscientious lawyer. Scrupulously honest and high-toned in all his actions himself, he never knowingly lent his services to the prosecution or defense of an unjust suit, and many and many a time he peremptorily refused a retainer on a side tainted with even the semblance of suspicion. As a counsellor he was careful and reliable, and more apt to discourage litigation than to promote it. As an advocate he was and ableeloquent. With rare intuition his active mind grasped the salient points of a case, which he grouped together, and discarding all trivial or irrelevant matter, he argued with signal ability, and fortified all his positions with authorities from the books with which his wonderfully tenacious memory seemed to be stored to repletion. In the conduct of a case he depended solely upon upon its merits for success, and despised the intervention of technicalities, which he rarely if ever used, and then only when temporarily provoked by the action of opposing counsel. His pride seemed always to be to divest a case of all technicalities and go to the jury on its merits, both in testimony and law. He was empathically a high-toned, conscientious lawyer, who governed his professional actions by the same law which governed his conduct as a man. As an evidence of his high reputation abroad, it is only necessary to say that he has filled the position of counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in this county ever since one was deemed necessary, and that company is noted for always securing the best legal talent that it can command.

"In politics Mr. Doty was an earnest and avowed Democrat, who believed in the principles and general policy of that party, and was always ready and willing, in national and State issues, to lend his voice, pen and vote in futherance of its success. But in municipal affairs he always acted as a good citizen rather than as a Democrat, and never hesitated to vote for the man best qualified, in his opinion, for the position, notwithstanding the behests of his party and its rabid partisans. This oftentimes involved him in violent animosities with these rabid and oftentimes unreasonable partisans, and may have, and doubtless did prevent his political advancement during his whole life, to the loss of the commonwealth rather than himself, but he cared nothing for that, preferring, like Henry Clay, rather to be right than to be President. He placed duty to the community above duty to party, and no intimidation or cajolery could swerve him from his convictions of duty in that regard. Although he would have filled with credit and honor any office, even the very highest in either State or nation, yet he never hankered after office, and preferred quietly living at home with his large and interesting family, practicing his profession and enjoying the society of his numerous friends to entering the political arena and struggling for place and position, which, too often, like the apples of Sodom, seem fair to the eye, but are only ashes to the touch. But once in his life did he ask for the suffrages of his fellow-citizens, when he ran for the Senate, in 1854, against the late Hon. James M. Sellers, but the Know Nothing whirlwind of that year engulfed him in disastrous defeat, as it did so many others, and he never again sought or would accept a nomination.

"But as a Christian, Mr. Doty shone forth more conspicuously than in any other character. Having been brought in early life to a realizing sense of his need of a Saviour, he connected himself with the Presbyterian Church, then under the ministration of Rev. John Hutchinson, and maintained that connection with steady and consistent devotion up to the day of his death. He regularly attended worship, when able, in one of the three churches in town, taught a Bible class in the Lutheran Sabbath school and freely contributed of his means to the support of all. That he was an earnest, sincere Christian no one who witnessed the patience and fortitude with which he bore his terrible sufferings for months can gainsay.

"But he is gone, the best friend my revered father and his family, including myself, ever had in this community, has passed to his final reward. He is no longer accessible to my manifestations of gratitude to him for all his past kindness, and nothing is left for me to do but pay this last sad tribute of gratitude and affection to his memory. As he so nobly bore up the hands of my father in his ministerial work and declining age, I am certain his God sustained and comforted him when he passed through the deep waters. In my heart his memory will ever remain green. Friend, counsellor, benefactor, I bid thee a sad and affectionate farewell."

At a meeting of the Bar of Juniata County, in conjunction with the members of the Bar of Mifflin County, Pa., the following minute was adopted, testifying to the esteem in which Mr. Doty was held by them:

"RESOLVED, That the Bar of Juniata County, having met to express its sense of the loss which it has sustained in the death of Edmund S. Doty, unanimously adopts this minute as a tribute to the memory of the oldest, and one of its most gifted and learned members. Endowed with abilities of the highest order, he was equally distinguished for his legal learning and various attainments, for strict integrity and high-toned professional conduct. His shining talents and purity of character threw a lustre over the bar, of which for many years he was the acknowledged leader. To him no branch of the law was unattractive or too obscure, nor was there any legal point that he did not adorn with the graces of a refined intellect. Of a gentle and retiring disposition, he was ever dignified and courteous, yet fearless in his devotion to the right and in his denunciation of the wrong. Possessed of a sound judgment, a subtle wit and a quick appreciation of legal truth, he was ever willing to share with others the treasures of his mind. Fertile in suggestion, and uniting accuracy of thought with precision of language, he formed a brilliant example, fit to imitate, though not to be excelled. The quickness and activity of his mind, his wonderful faculty of seizeing, by intuition, the strong points of his case, the force with which he elucidated them, the capacity for absorbing the principles of law which reported cases enunciated, his most singularly retentive memory, gave to his professional career a distinction which was remarkable. His kindness to young lawyers who sought his advice and legal aid was proverbial. Genial, kind-hearted and methodical in all the relations of a pure and blameless life. Such a character is worthy of memorial."

He served in the Seminole or Florida War, and at the expiration of his three years' erm of service, 1837, was honorably discharged at Fort Brook, Tampa Bay, Florida, being then first sergeant of Company B, United States Infantry. Previous to his enlistment he had assisted his father in drilling salt wells and now returned to that business, in which he remained till 1860. He was foremost in the improvements of machinery for well drilling, and was one of the first to give up the method of employing wooden pole tools, and at the opening of the Ohio and Pennsylvania oil fields his services were much sought after. In 1859 he moved with his family to Sewickly Creek, Westmoreland Co., Pa.

His first drilling for oil was in 1861 on Dry Run, O., near Smith's Ferry, Pa. He drilled many wells near Greensburg, Pa., being one of the first "wildcatters" in that section. In 1868 he moved to Oil City, Pa., and with his sons engaged in contracting and oil well drilling in Venango County, being actively engaged in this business until his death. An affectionate husband and parent, he was an exemplary citizen, performing his duties in life to his God, his family and his fellow men. New York, about 1804, son Ezekiel Cravath and Roxy Lena Bingham, dau. Col. Bingham, after whom the city of Binghamton, N. Y., was named. He d. Nauvoo, Hancock Co., Ill., Oct. or Nov., 1844. She m., 2d, Alfred Brown, b. Hartland, Niagara Co., N. Y., Jan. 17, 1806, son Daniel Brown. He d. about June 28, 1850, about 150 miles west of Omaha, Neb. She d. Kansas, Utah, Jan. 12, 1889.

Austin Cravath was a prosperous farmer and was rapidly increasing in wealth, when, in 1843, he and his wife joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints' Community, called Mormons. The next year, 1844, he sold his farm and moved to Nauvoo, Hancock Co., then the gathering place of that people. He died in the fall of that same year of a fever peculiar to that locality.

In 1848 Mrs. Cravath was marrried to Alfred Brown, by whom she had one son, Austin Cravath Brown, born April 30, 1850. Six weeks later the whole family started with an ox team on that great journey of 1,000 miles across or into what was then known as the Great American Desert to Utah. When two weeks out from Council Bluffs, the cholera broke out in the camp and Mr. Brown was its first victim. Two days later, Rodolphus, who was now the only help of his twice widowed mother, also fell a victim to the terrible scourge. After Mr. Brown's death his wife was known until her death as Eliza Cravath.

She was now left with six children under fifteen years of age, four of of her own and two of Mr. Brown's by a former marriage, to make this great journey alone. She had been offered every comfort by her relatives that wealth could give if she would return to the East, where she still had three brothers living, (Trowbridges, sons of her mother by another husband after Ira Doty died). Refusing all these offers she resolutely pursued her way westward toward the new gathering place of the saints, toward that land that she firmly believed was the Land of Zion.

She gladly accepted whatever assistance other members of the company were able to offer, and arrived in Salt Lake City, Sept. 11, 1850. She was an incessant toiler for the benefit of her family and friends, self-sacrificing, without an enemy, faithful and true in all things and full of faith in God.

In company with his parents he removed from Hopkinton to Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., in 1826. At the age of fifteen he commenced an apprenticeship at the printing business, in the office of the Protestant Sentinel at Homer. This establishment was moved in 1833 to Schenectady, N. Y., whither he accompanied it. In 1836 it was removed to De Ruyter, Madison Co., N. Y., at which time and place he became a partner in the business then connected with the office of the Protestant Sentinel, under the style of J. & C. H. Maxson. He subsequently abandoned the printing business and spent some time in public life, during which period he was connected with a superintendent's office on the Erie canal, and was a Deputy Clerk in the Assembly, Albany, N. Y., for three sessions of the Legislature.

In 1855 he became a farmer at De Ruyter, and for thirty years enjoyed the labor and lived the contented life of an agriculturist. In the spring of 1885 he retired from the farm and returned to De Ruyter village, intending to release himself from the duties of business pursuits.

In politics he is a Democrat, and living in a town and county, both of which have been and are largely Republican, he has, of course, had little to do with public affairs. Twice he has been put in nomination for County Clerk, once for Member of Assembly, and once for School Commissioner; but contending against great odds, he failed of an election in either case. Notwithstanding the large majority against him in his own town, however, he has served for eight years as Justice of the Peace, and four years as Supervisor, a position which he now occupies.

Mr. Doty was for many years an active journalist and printer, having been connected with newspapers in Janesville and Madison, Wis., and La Fayette and Burlington, Ind. In 1865 he left newspaper work and entered a manufacturing firm, which was engaged in the manufacture of wooden articles, including a washing machine, the invention of his brother, William Doty. He became interested in other manufactures and worked out an improvement for railroad car axles. It was first tried on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road, and proved a great success. A stock company, with a capital of $500,000, for the manufacture of the Doty anti-friction axle, was organized in the fall of 1871. But he did not live to see its prosperity, for a few months after he was stricken with a severe sickness and died in the spring of 1872.

He was modest in demeanor, a man of sterling integrity and possessed of intellectual powers of an unusual character. He was highly endowed with mechanical genius, and in power of concentration, and breadth of comprehension, either of principles or facts, in their relation to practical affairs, he had few superiors.

11936. ii. EDMUND SILAS, b. Bristol, N. H., Sept. 17, 1871.

Mr. Ketchum was the originator of this history. In August, 1871, he issued circulars requesting information of the Doty family and gathered many records before his failing health led him to relinquish his purpose and transfer his manuscript to the writer.

At the age of fifteen, being thrown on his own resources, he learned the shoemaker's trade, and in 1851 removed to Hopkinton, N. H., where he worked at his trade, studying when he could, and supported his invalid parents until their deaths in 1855. He then entered Hopkinton Academy, and after two terms of study there, became assistant teacher under Professor Quimby, at New Ipswich. He was prepared to enter Dartmouth College in 1858, but a serious sickness prevented, and he was compelled to give up that advantage.

He continued his studies under private instructors, covering the college course, except the higher mathematics. He also acquired sufficient knowledge to be able to read in French, Spanish and Italian. In 1860 he entered Bangor Theological Seminary pursuing the full course of three years, and supporting himself and wife by working at his trade, and never missed but one lecture or recitation, graduating in 1863. In the following December, he began preaching at Wardsboro, Vt., where, during his ministry of twenty-one months, the congregation was doubled twice. He also superintended the public schools. While there he joined the Masonic Order, on account of which he was forced to leave, September, 1865. He then moved to Brattleboro, Vt., where for a year he edited the Vermont Record and the Vermont School Journal. In October, 1866, he was called to the Congregational Church of Bristol, N. H., where he labored till May 2, 1875, being ordained there September 17, 1867. He reorganized and graded the public schools of that place and superintended them five years. He accepted the ministry of the Congregational Church of Maplewood (Malden), Mass., where he remained from June 1, 1875, to October 4, 1876. During the following fall and winter he preached at Henniker, N. H., and then accepted the pastorate of the Second Congregational Church at Windsor, Ct., beginning his labors there on the 15th of July, 1877, and continuing them till his death.

His love for literary pursuits began at a very early age. As soon as he learned to read and write he began a diary on odds and ends of paper, which he afterward kept in note books. While at school he wrote several creditable articles in prose and verse, and his school "compositions" were of superior merit. In 1860–61 he became a regular contributor to various papers and periodicals in New England, and for many years afterward was widely connected with the press as essayist and reviewer. His greatest literary undertaking was a dictionary of New Hampshire biography, which on account of failing health he never completed. The manuscript was bequeathed to the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and they still have it in their possession in the form in which he left it.

During his whole career he was a diligent collector of rare and curious books, and an omniverous reader in science and history. From his own collection he presented, in 1874, to the New Hampshire Historical Society 512 volumes of early American school books, to the New Hampshire Antiquarian Society in 1873, 300 volumes, and in 1875, 2600 pamphlets and 1000 volumes. In his own library at the time of his death there were about 2500 volumes. Among his published works were: History of the Philomathic Club, Eulogy on Henry Wilson, Diary of the Invasion of Canada by the American Army, 1775, and a special geography of New Hampshire. He also had in preparation a history of the Ketchum family.

He was one of the founders of the New Hampshire Temperance Union and was vice-president for Grafton County for many years; was Worthy Master of Union Lodge, F. and A. M., Bristol, 1870–71, and chaplain of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, 1871–75; was the leading spirit of the Philomathic Club, which became the nucleus of the New Hampshire Antiquarian Society, of which latter he was a charter member, and from 1873–75 was corresponding secretary, and president from 1876; was active for some years in the New Hampshire State Teachers' Association and delivered the annual address at Lebanon, 1870; delivered the opening address of the semi-centennial of New Hampshire Institution, 1873, and the annual address of the New Hampshire Historical Society, 1877; was influential in founding the New Hampshire Orphans' Home, which occupies the old home of Daniel Webster, and was a life member of the corporation. He was also a member of the New Hampshire Historical, New England Historic Genealogical and Prince societies, the Society of Antiquity at Worcester, Mass., and most of the religious and missionary societies of the Congregational Church."

The Boston Journal of April 26, 1880, contained this tribute to his life's work, together with a sketch of his life.

"Rev. Silas Ketchum died somewhat suddenly early on Saturday morning at the residence of Rev. Harlan P. Gage, in Dorchester District of this city. This announcement will be read with painful interest in many parts of New England. While Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut have each been specially benefited by his life and labors, it was to New Hampshire that he gave, and wished to give, the best fruits of his culture and rare industry, and it is fitting that to her bosom should be consigned his mortal remains. In his death that State has met with a loss it could ill afford and cannot repair. Its appreciation of his worth and its loss will be shown tenderly and clearly to-morrow by the notable gathering that will surround his bier at Contoocook."

Sena Ann Enos, b. De Ruyter, Madison Co., N. Y., Sept. 6, 1852; m. Sept. 5, 1877, Ada A. Wells.

Mr. Maxson, at an early age, showed an inclination to the ministry, and with that in view attended De Ruyter Institute and later Alfred University, both known as preparatory schools of the Seventh Day Baptists. With study, however, his religious views changed, and he became a Rationalist. After spending a year on the farm of his father, aiding in the farm work, he entered Amherst College in 1873, graduating with high honor at the head of his class in 1877.

Ten years were then devoted to teaching, first at Milton College, Wisconsin, and later in charge of the State Normal School at Whitewater, Wis. Having connected himself with the Unitarian denomination in 1887, he accepted in the following year the ministerial charge of the Unitarian Society of Menomomie, Wis., later adding to it the charge of the Unitarian Society of Eau Claire, Wis., preaching at the first in the morning and at the latter in the evening. While engaged at this work in 1891, on Sunday, November 22, he preached a sermon in the morning at Menomomie, and, leaving home in the best of spirits, went to Eau Claire, held the usual service in Sunday school and preached as usual in the evening. After closing the services he went to his hotel, apparently in his usual health. A few hours later, in a cerebral hemorrhage, which had occurred more than once before, he passed away, apparently without suffering or consciousness, in the fullness of his powers.

His companions through school and college life, as well as his associates in the ministry, all bear loving testimony to his great ability, to his controlling sincerity of thought and purpose, to his loving companionship, to his deeply reverent and devout life, and to the great courage which led him to follow wherever his clear sight led the way. Especially was he mourned in the two church societies to which he ministered, having endeared himself to all. A volume of his sermons, with an appreciative biographical sketch, was published in 1893 by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago.

UNATTACHED FAMILIES.

The investigations and collections for this history have developed some records of families which, so far, have not been connected with any of the branches heretofore recorded, although all indications point to a descent from Edward Doty, the Mayflower emigrant. They are presented here as part of that descent, and with the hope that further investigations may follow, which will at some future time more directly connect them with one or other of the sons of Edward Doty.

The name of the ancestor of the following family is not known with certainty, but the tradition in the family says it was William Doty.

12367. WILLIAM DOTY, lived in the town of Beekman, Dutchess Co., N. Y., and must have been born as early as 1730, or possibly 10 years earlier. His name and existence rests entirely upon tradition, no records having been found, and in their absence, and the confusion of dates furnished by his descendants, it is impossible to connect him with any of the foregoing branches of the family.

Further than the almost positive assertion that he was descended from the emigrant, Edward Doty, little else can be said.

Children:

12368. i. WILLIAM, b. prob. about 1756.
12369. ii. ELIZABETH, b. prob. about 1758.

The following deeds, recorded in Dutchess Co., N Y., may possibly show some connection with the above.

The land sold was in the corner of Clinton Township, near the line of Washington Township.

1814. They sell more land to Elias Dederick.

Capt. Doughty, who was a graduate of King's College, distinguished himself in service, was breveted Major, Sept. 30, 1783, and when the rest of the Continental Army was mustered out, was specially retained in service with his company. Later when Congress, on Oct. 20, 1786, found it necessary to raise enough artillery companies to form a battalion, Capt. Doughty was commissioned Major of the battalion.

This company, from the day when Alexander Hamilton first paraded it in the present City Hall Park of New York City to the present time, has been a continuous and organized body of artillery soldiers, and is now known as Battery F, 4th Regt., U. S. artillery.

Isaac Doty (No. 3370) served as a private through the Revolution in this company.

Major Doughty's record is: Capt.-Lieut., 1776; Capt., Jan. 1, 1777; Aide-de-Camp to Gen. Schuyler, 1777; transferred to Corps of Art., June 17, 1783; brev. Major, Sept. 30, 1783; Major, artillery battalion, Aug. 7, 1784; Major, U. S. army, Sept. 20, 1789; Lieut.-Col., 1791, declined, and retired from service; Lieut.-Col., June 1, 1798; resigned May 26, 1800.
